NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent: or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

* The figures under "Rice, husked" represent the prices of common rice.
† Figures have not so far been reported.

NOTE.—These statistics are compiled from the fortnightly returns furnished by District Officers to Local Governments and Administrations, etc. They relate to the wholesale prices in the principal markets (not necessarily district headquarters) in each province on the last (or nearest mart) day of each fortnight.

COTTON PRESS RETURN.

No. 7 of 1918-19.

PREFATORY NOTE.

The Cotton Season, 1918-19.

In the Third Cotton Forecast, published on the 18th December, 1918, the yield of the crop was provisionally estimated at 3,282,000 bales on an area of 19,677,000 acres, as compared with 4,035,000* bales on an area of 24,781,000 acres, the final estimates of last year,—a decrease of 19 per cent in the outturn. There were 361,000 bales of cotton pressed in the pressing factories, and 104,000 bales of unpressed cotton received in the spinning mills, from 1st September to 15th December, 1918, as against 306,000 bales and 122,000 bales, respectively, during the corresponding period of last year, showing an increase of 18 per cent in the case of presses, but a decrease of 15 per cent in the case of mills. Too much stress should not be laid on the accuracy of these returns as a means of checking the forecast estimates of outturn, as there is at present no system in vogue of furnishing complete returns from all the presses and mills in India. The figures for the States of Hyderabad, Central India, Rajputana, and Mysore are, as will be seen from the footnotes to the tables, mostly incomplete and have been excluded for the purpose of comparison.

* The trade estimate is, however, 3,860,000 bales. (Net exports 1,409,000 bales, mill consumption 1,701,000 bales and extra-factory consumption 750,000 bales.) The estimate of mill consumption is based on the statistics of yarn produced by the mills, and excludes the quantity of waste cotton sold by the mills, which is included partly in "Net exports" and partly in "extra-factory consumption."

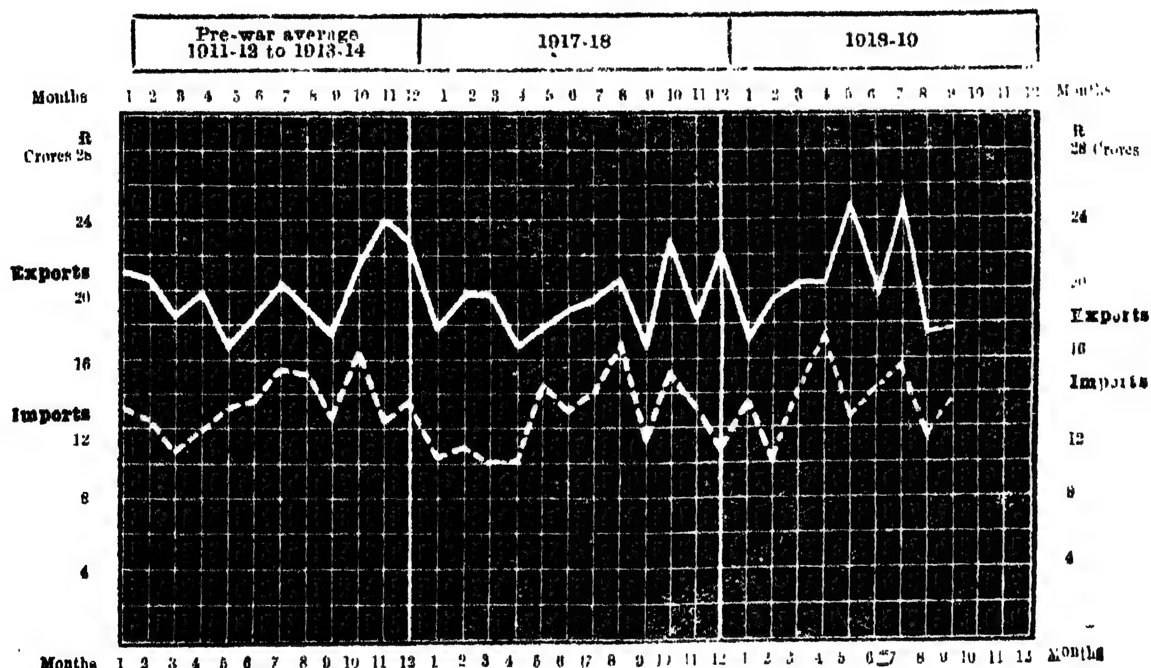
FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING DECEMBER, 1918.

REVIEW of the SEA-BORNE TRADE of BRITISH INDIA for the month of DECEMBER, 1918, and for the nine months ended December, 1918.

FOREIGN COMMERCE.



FOREIGN SEA-BORNE TRADE DURING DECEMBER, 1918.

The trade returns of British India for December, 1918, as compared with those of its immediate predecessor, showed increases in the import and export trade. The total imports of merchandise in December, 1918, were valued at R13,20 lakhs as against over R11,49 lakhs in the preceding month, and the value of the exports was R16,21 lakhs as against R16,05 lakhs, and of the re-exports R1,45 lakhs as against R1,15 lakhs. Imports increased by 15 per cent, exports by 1 per cent, and re-exports by 26 per cent. As compared with December, 1917, imports showed an increase of 16 per cent and re-exports of 163 per cent, while exports showed a decrease of 4 per cent. A review of the trade of the nine months ended December, 1918, will be found on page 6.

The chart showing the course of monthly imports and exports, including re-exports, from April, 1917, to December, 1918, as compared with the pre-war average, is appended below:—

MONTHLY IMPORTS AND EXPORTS FROM APRIL, 1917, TO DECEMBER, 1918, AS COMPARED WITH THE PRE-WAR AVERAGE.

(Private merchandise only.)

The actual net excess of exports, including re-exports, over imports was R4,46 lakhs in December, 1918, and R5,70 lakhs in November, 1918. The statement below shows the figures of imports and exports, including re-exports, during November and December of the years 1916, 1917, and 1918, and the actual net excess of exports over imports during the same periods:—

COMPARISON WITH THE IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF THE PRECEDING MONTH (NOVEMBER, 1918)*

I.—Imports.

AN INCREASE IN THE IMPORTS OF SUGAR AND A DECREASE IN THE IMPORTS OF TEA.

The imports of Food, drink, and tobacco in December, 1918, increased by R1,25 lakhs, as compared with the preceding month, to R3,36 lakhs, due entirely to larger imports of sugar. The imports of sugar, 16 D. S. and above, in December, 1918, increased in quantity by 159 per cent and in value by 149 per cent as compared with the preceding month (November, 1918). Imports from all the principal contributing countries increased. In the nine months ended December, 1918, the imports of sugar, 16 D. S. and above, amounted to 363,067 tons, valued at R10,77 lakhs, as against 302,945 tons, valued at R10,07 lakhs, in the corresponding period of the previous year. The imports of liquors in December, 1918, also rose by 86 per cent. The imports of tea in December, 1918, decreased by 49 per cent to 906,657 lbs. Sugar. Liquors. Tea.

A DECREASE IN THE IMPORTS OF RAW COTTON.

The value of the imports of Raw materials in December, 1918, decreased by R7 lakhs to R48 lakhs. The quantity of cotton, raw, imported in December, 1918, was less than half the quantity imported in the preceding month. Cotton, raw.

A DECREASE IN THE IMPORTS OF COTTON YARN AND BARS AND CHANNEL (STEEL) AND AN INCREASE IN THE IMPORTS OF COTTON PIECE GOODS.

The value of the imports of Manufactured articles in December, 1918, increased by R68 lakhs to R8,94 lakhs. The quantity of cotton yarn imported in December, 1918, decreased by 18 per cent to 3,446,942 lbs. The imports of cotton piece goods, including fents, in December, 1918, increased by 15 million yards or 21 per cent to 87 million yards, while the value (over R3,17 lakhs), remained almost stationary. Grey goods increased by nearly 20 million yards or 51 per cent to over 58 million yards, and white goods by 1 million yards to nearly 15 million yards, but coloured goods decreased by 7 million yards or 36 per cent to 12 million yards. In the nine months ended December, 1918, the total imports of cotton piece goods amounted to nearly 863 million yards, valued at R38 crores, as against 1,220 million yards, valued at over R37 crores, in the corresponding period of the previous year. Under imports, Bengal showed an increase of 13 per cent, Bombay of 20 per cent, Sind of 21 per cent, and Burma of 10 per cent, while Madras showed a decrease of 14 per cent. Under exports, Bengal showed a decrease of 10 per cent and Burma of 10 per cent, but Bombay showed an increase of 15 per cent, Madras of 16 per cent and Sind of 45 per cent. These comparisons are with the preceding month (November, 1918).

BALANCE OF TRADE.

The following table takes into account the imports and exports of merchandise on private account only :—

Average rate of exchange	16·919	18·057 (b)

In the nine months ended December, 1918, the excess of exports over imports of private merchandise was R58,73 lakhs, as against R56,56 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1917 and R41,49 lakhs in 1913. As the publication of treasure figures has been temporarily discontinued, it is not possible to give here the net (private) exports from April to December, nor the net balance of trade in the same period. It may, however, be of interest to note that the net (private) exports are higher than those of 1917 and also than those of 1916. The balance of trade, so far as shown by the statistics of merchandise, treasure, Council Bills, and Enfaced Rupee paper in the nine months ended December, 1918, was in favour of India, while in the corresponding period of 1917 it was against India. In 1916 the balance was in favour of India.

The amount of Council Bills and Telegraphic Transfers paid in India in the nine months ended December, 1918, was R30,91 lakhs, of which R21,51 lakhs were paid through the Paper Currency Reserve and R9,40 lakhs through the Treasuries; but Reverse Council Bills to the extent of R4,84 lakhs were sold during the period, the net imports of funds by Council Bills thus amounting to R26,07 lakhs. In the nine months ended December, 1917, the amount was R42,16 lakhs, of which R2,14 lakhs were paid through the Gold Standard Reserve, R12,99 lakhs through the Paper Currency Reserve, and R27,03 lakhs through the Treasuries. In the nine months ended December, 1916, the amount of Council Bills paid was R32,83 lakhs. As regards Enfaced Rupee paper R10 lakhs represented the amount of paper enfaced to London and about R17 lakhs the amount re-transferred from London in the nine months, April to December, 1918, while in the corresponding period of 1917, R11 lakhs represented the amount of paper enfaced to London and R76 lakhs the amount re-transferred from London.

As compared with the corresponding month of the previous year (December, 1917), under imports, the declared unit value of cotton piece goods, white, rose in December, 1918, by 46 per cent and coloured by 26 per cent, and cotton twist and yarn by 5 per cent, while that of sugar fell by 7 per cent, cotton piece goods, grey, by 3 per cent, and coal by 40 per cent. Under exports, raw cotton showed an increase of 48 per cent, raw jute of 64 per cent, coal of 9 per cent, coffee of 23 per cent, rice of 35 per cent, wheat of 26 per cent, tea of 38 per cent, while indigo showed a decrease of 26 per cent and manganese ore of 25 per cent.

Customs Revenue.*

The following table shows the gross Indian sea customs revenue (excluding salt revenue) collected on principal articles in December, 1918, as compared with November, 1918, and December, 1917 and 1913:—

The customs duty figures are an index to the volume of the import trade only, since under exports jute, rice, and tea only are subject to duty. In the nine months ended December, 1918, the import duties increased to nearly R9,22 lakhs from R8,87 lakhs in the same period of 1917, and the export duties rose to nearly R2,81 lakhs from R2,19 lakhs. The grand total of gross Indian sea and land customs revenue (excluding salt revenue) in the nine months, April to December, 1918, amounted to over R13,55 lakhs, as compared with nearly R11,87 lakhs in the same period of last year.

SHIPPING.

The following table shows the number and tonnage (net register tonnage) of vessels which entered and cleared with cargoes at ports in British India during December, 1918, as compared with November, 1918, and December, 1917 and 1913:—

Entered with cargoes.

December, 1913 (pre-war month)	236	645,156	97	8,199	333	653,355

The total tonnage entered and cleared with cargoes in December, 1918, as compared with that in the preceding month (November, 1918) and in the corresponding month of 1913 and 1917, is shown in the last column of the table above. In the month of December, 1918, there were 320 arrivals* and 373 sailings† with cargoes, in and from India. As regards tonnage, if a comparison be made with December, 1913, the corresponding pre-war month, it will be seen that there was a decrease in the tonnage of vessels cleared with cargoes of 327,009 tons or 50 per cent. The decrease in the entries (with cargoes) amounted to 296,743 tons or 50 per cent.

The shipping clearances with cargoes in foreign trade from the ports of British India in the nine months, April to December, 1918, as compared with the corresponding period of 1913, i.e., before the war broke out, were as follows:—

	TONNAGE (NET REGISTER TONNAGE) CLEARANCES IN THE NINE MONTHS, APRIL TO DECEMBER.
	1913 (Pre-war period).	1918
British ships (including British Indian)	4,657,709	2,509,178
Foreign ships	1,386,354	1,225,473
TOTAL	6,044,063	3,734,651

In 1918, as against 1913, the total tonnage clearances with cargoes declined 38 per cent. In 1913 the British (including British Indian) tonnage was 77 per cent and foreign tonnage 23 per cent of the total, while in 1918 the British (including British Indian) tonnage was 67 per cent and foreign tonnage 33 per cent.

RAILWAY STATISTICS.

Railway statistics, like the import and export statistics above, are a valuable index to the general movement of trade throughout the country, and show that the earnings from 1st April, 1918, to 4th January, 1919, were R63,77 lakhs, as against R56,95 lakhs in the corresponding period of 1917-18, or an increase of R6,82 lakhs.

TRADE OF ADEN.

The grand total value of the imports and exports of merchandise, by sea, into and from the port of Aden amounted to R73 lakhs in the month of November, 1918, and R9,26 lakhs in the eight months, April to November, 1918. The value of the principal articles of import and export was as follows:—

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 11th January 1919.

Burma.—The week was rainless. Reaping of winter rice is almost completed. Threshing and winnowing are advancing in Upper Burma. Cultivation of spring rice and miscellaneous winter crops is still proceeding. Harvesting of winter rice, groundnuts and late sesamum and plucking of cotton are approaching completion. Standing crops are generally good. Cattle are generally healthy. Price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has risen slightly to rupees 118 per 100 baskets and is above normal. The market for white rice is steady at rupees 380 per hundred baskets for specials.

Assam.—The weather was generally seasonable. Harvesting of winter rice is approaching completion. Harvesting of pulses, pressing of sugarcane, plucking of cotton and pruning of tea continue. Ploughing of autumn rice, jute and spring rice are going on. Outturns of winter rice, pulses, sugarcane and cotton are fair but prospects of other standing crops are not satisfactory. Cattle disease is reported from two districts. The price of common rice is practically stationary.

Bengal.—The week was practically rainless. Reaping of winter paddy is almost completed. Threshing continues. Preparatory tillage for next autumn crops has commenced in Eastern Bengal districts. Harvesting of sugarcane and potatoes is progressing. Standing crops are suffering for want of moisture. Average price of common rice has fallen by about 2·5 per cent.

Bihar and Orissa.—Rain was general and moderate in the districts of Chota Nagpur except Singhbhum. It was light and scattered in the rest of the provinces. Harvesting of winter paddy is approaching completion. Threshing continues. Pressing of sugarcane is going on. The recent rainfall has done some good to such spring crops as were sown in Chota Nagpur but more rain is urgently wanted in Behar for the spring crops. Test works are going on in 23 places in Angul. Gratuitous relief was given to 1,337 persons in this district. The price of common rice has risen in seven districts and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from eleven districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is bad.

United Provinces.—Light and scattered rain fell in a few districts, elsewhere the fall was insignificant. More rain is urgently needed everywhere. Slight damage to crops by insects is reported from Budaun. Preparation of land for sugarcane is in hand. Sowing for spring crops is nearly completed but that of extra crops continues. Harvesting of sugarcane is going on. Irrigation of spring crops and poppy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Picking of cotton is nearly over. Condition of standing crops on the whole is fair. Prospects of spring crops on area sown are at present fair. Agricultural stock is for the most part doing well but cattle disease still exists in some districts. Fodder is dear and scarce. Government hay is being steadily imported and sold in the affected districts. Water and market supplies are sufficient. Prices are rising. Scarcity has not yet been declared anywhere but test works are open in Allahabad, Etawah, Jalaun, Jhansi, Hamirpur and Banda districts. Numbers on relief :—Allahabad four test works 3,303 ; Etawah civil works 1,788, and six forest works 1,397, total 3,185 ; Jalaun four test works 1,561, poor houses 11; Jhansi test works 296 ; Banda three test works 4,809, and two poor houses 63 ; Hamirpur four test works 2,044, two poor houses 18 ; both poor houses have since been closed.

Punjab.—Light rain fell in parts of the submontane tracts and was useful. More rain is urgently required everywhere. Picking of cotton and pressing of sugarcane continue. The yield is below normal to normal on irrigated and poor on unirrigated areas. Sowings of spring crops have been completed and are generally below normal. Condition of standing crops is average to good on irrigated but much below average on unirrigated areas. Toria is being harvested. The yield is below normal to normal. Sowings of extra spring crops have commenced in a few districts. Cattle are suffering from overwork and scarcity of fodder in most districts. Sugarcane is being used as fodder. Water is generally sufficient. Prices are generally stationary and above scarcity rates. Prices of wheat: Ambala and Lyallpur 5½, Lahore and Rawalpindi 5¾ and Ferozepore 6¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—The week was rainless. Rain is badly needed throughout the province. Sowings of spring crops are in progress in places. Prospects of standing crops are average on irrigated and below average on unirrigated areas in Peshawar and Bannu and very poor in Dera Ismail Khan owing to drought. Pressing of sugarcane continues. The outturn is average. Prices of wheat:—Peshawar 7½ and Dera Ismail Khan 7 3/16 seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Rain fell in some parts during the week. Prices are stationary. Fodder is insufficient.

Kashmir.—The weather during the week was generally cloudy and cold. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are normal.

Rajputana.—The weather was cold. Showers were received in places. Sowing and irrigation of spring crops continue. Cattle disease continues in places. Water is sufficient. Prices are high and stationary.

Central India.—Rainfall was short everywhere. Few showers fell during the week in parts of Bhopal, Bundelkhand and Malwa agencies. Autumn crops are being harvested in Indore, Malwa and the Southern States. Cotton is being picked in Gwalior, Indore and Malwa. Spring crops are being sown in Gwalior, Bundelkhand and the Southern States. Standing crops are bad in Jaora, Rutlam, Sailana and in the northern districts of Gwalior, except on irrigated areas, and fair elsewhere. Probable outturn is bad in the northern districts of Gwalior and Jaora, Rutlam and Sailana; below average in Dhar and Jhabua; and fair elsewhere. Agricultural stock is bad in Gwalior and fair to good elsewhere, except for cattle disease. Scarcity of fodder prevails in Gwalior, Indore, Bhopal, Bundelkhand and parts of Malwa and the Southern States. Prices are high but stationary. Number of persons on famine relief in Bundelkhand :—54.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been cloudy at times, otherwise it has been clear and cold. Days are getting somewhat warm. Mandla received a little over two inches of rain accompanied by light hail. Saugor, Damoh and Jubbulpore also had light showers amounting to 25, 23 and 16 cents respectively. Threshing and winnowing of autumn crops and picking of cotton have nearly been completed. Standing spring crops except linseed are generally in good condition. The supply of fodder and water is adequate except in parts of the Nerbudda and Berar divisions. Cattle disease is reported from Jubbulpore, Mandla, Betul, Wardha and Raipur districts. Relief measures continue in Jubbulpore district and Sironcha tahsil. Juar in Hoshangabad and Nagpur and rice in Chanda rose by 1¼ to 1¾ seers per rupee Elsewhere prices of food grains remained steady or fluctuated slightly.

Feudatory States:—Condition of spring crops is generally satisfactory.

Bombay.—Slight rain fell during the week in parts of the Deccan. Standing crops are withering in parts of the Deccan and Dharwar, elsewhere they are fair to good. Cotton picking continues in parts of Sind, Gujarat, Sholapur, Baroda and Rewa Kantha. Fodder supply is generally deficient. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient but cattle are deteriorating except in Konkan. Irrigation is generally deficient. Prices of food grains are high but generally steady. Scarcity has been declared in eight talukas and one mahal in Satara. Cultivators are coming to the end of their resources in parts of Poona. Slight emigration is noticed in Ahmednagar. Public health is generally good. People find employment on Government public works. Liberal suspensions of land revenue have been granted. Takavi has been freely advanced for fodder and agricultural improvements. Cheap grain shops have been opened in Nasik, West Khandesh, Poona and Kathiawar. Two poor houses have been opened in Poona and one cattle camp at Wadhwan in Kathiawar. Dole is being distributed in West Khandesh and Poona Test works are in progress in Ahmedabad, Kaira, Panch Mahals and Ahmednagar. Numbers on works :—3,190. Numbers on gratuitous relief in Poona, Satara and Kathiawar :—3,340.

Hyderabad.—Report not received.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are in fair condition. Harvested ragi and rice outturn is poor to fair. Sugarcane outturn is fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are generally steady.

Coorg.—The weather was cold. Reaping of rice and picking of coffee continue. Harvesting of rice has commenced. Picking of cardamom is partly completed. Outturn is fair. Cattle disease prevails in some villages. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Public health is fair. Prices of food grains are high.

Madras.—Rainfall was good in Nellore, Chittoor and the hills, fair in Cuddapah, North Arcot, Coimbatore, Tinnevelly and light or nil elsewhere. Standing crops are fair generally but have been lost or are withering in parts owing to excess or deficiency of rainfall. Dry grains and cotton have been affected by disease in parts of Kurnool, Bellary and Ramnad. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are limited with outturn sometimes fair but poor in parts of many districts. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding but are restricted in places for want of rain. Condition of cattle is good generally. Water is insufficient except in sea districts. Pastures are sufficient except in parts of five districts. Fodder is sufficient except in parts of eight districts. Prices have slightly risen in majority of cases. Prospects are fair generally but bad in parts of Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Godavari, Bellary, Chittoor and Salem. Conditions in Godavari and Upper Agency have improved and relief measures are not required immediately except in one taluk in Ganjam where test works are proposed to be started from 15th instant.

No. 282.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY.

Delhi, the 13th January 1919.

REVISION OF THE PAY AND PROSPECTS OF THE SIGNALLING ESTABLISHMENT OF THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

RESOLUTION.

THE present system of pay for the signalling establishment of the Indian Telegraph Department dates from the 1st of July 1908 and the principles on which it is based have been explained at length in the Resolution in this Department No. 9640, dated the 21st of October 1908. The general effect of the scheme is that there are two incremental scales of pay rising from Rs. 50 in the first year of service to Rs. 200 in the twentieth year, in the case of the General Service, and from Rs. 35 in the first year of service to Rs. 130 in the twenty-second year, in the case of the Local Service. In both scales, a double increment can be earned for approved service at the end of the fifth year and there is an efficiency bar at the end of the 14th year. This system of pay has proved a great deal more advantageous than the complicated scheme of payment according to three grades of efficiency which it replaced in 1908, and it may be affirmed that it has made the signalling staff both more efficient and more contented.

2. The Government of India are of opinion, however, that in order to maintain the standard of recruitment as telegraphists of men who should be capable of rising to the more important charges now open to telegraph subordinates, it is necessary to increase the initial pay both in the General and Local Service and to reduce the period for which a telegraphist has to serve before reaching the maximum pay of his service. They have accordingly decided, with the approval of the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State for India, to introduce the following revised scales of pay for male telegraphists with effect from the 1st January 1919:—

Year of service.	General Service.		Local Service.
	Present Scale.	Scale now sanctioned (shewing positions corresponding to the present scale).	Present Scale.	Scale now sanctioned (shewing positions corresponding to the present scale).

20th	200	...	120	...
22nd	...	...	130	...

A double increment can, as at present, be earned after five years' service: and Rs. 150 will be the limit of pay for telegraphists in the General Service and Rs. 100 for telegraphists in the Local Service who are unable to pass the efficiency bar in accordance with the departmental rules in force at the time.

3. The Government of India have also decided that, with effect from the 1st of January 1919, the revised scales of pay should be applied to men already in the service. Each telegraphist will therefore be brought on to the new scales of pay at the point corresponding to his position in the existing scale; e.g., a General Service telegraphist on Rs. 80 will draw Rs. 90 from the 1st January 1919, one on Rs. 130 will draw Rs. 140, while a Local Service telegraphist on Rs. 55 will draw Rs. 65 and so on; each telegraphist will be moved to the next higher point in the new scale from the date on which he would have earned his increment in the ordinary course.

4. In this revision of the scales of pay no account has been taken of the abnormal increase in prices owing to war conditions, and the grant of war allowances at the prescribed rates will not therefore be affected.

5. The total immediate cost of the new scheme together with the increased expenditure caused by the calculation of war allowances on the higher rates of pay is estimated at more than 4 lakhs of rupees a year.

ORDERED that a copy of this Resolution be communicated to the Finance Department and to the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs.

Ordered also, that it be published in the Gazette of India.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

ARMY DEPARTMENT.

Delhi, the 16th January 1919.

FORMATION OF THE INDIAN SOLDIERS' BOARD IN PLACE OF THE CENTRAL RECRUITING BOARD.

RESOLUTION.

The Government of India have decided that the functions of the Central Recruiting Board should now be definitely held in suspension and that in its place a new Board, to be called the Indian Soldiers' Board, should be established to advise on questions affecting the interests of Indian soldiers and non-combatants after they have left the colours. Its composition and membership will be the same as that of the Central Recruiting Board, but the Honorary Secretary of the Indian Imperial Relief Fund will be added as a member, and the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes will take the place of the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent as President.

The Indian Soldiers' Board will be affiliated to the Army Department of the Government of India, and will deal particularly with the following subjects :—

(1) The formation of district records of war services which may serve as the basis for future action.

(2) Consideration of the question of land rewards for discharged soldiers and non-combatants.

(3) The question of preferential treatment in obtaining Government employment.

(4) Educational concessions for the children of retired soldiers.

(5) The after-care of the wounded and incapacitated soldier, and the establishment of special institutions and training to serve this purpose.

(6) The safe-guarding of the general interests of discharged soldiers by provincial and district committees, who should advise and watch the interests of soldiers who have long been absent from their holdings.

(7) Consideration, in collaboration with the military authorities, of the whole subject of demobilisation in its civil aspect, in relation to prevailing economic conditions and to the general interest.

The solution of these problems depends largely upon the action taken in the several provinces, and all local Governments and Administrations have been addressed with a view to preserving the provincial Recruiting and War Boards—reconstituted, if necessary, in form and composition—as a nucleus to advise on these questions.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of the foregoing Resolution be communicated to all Departments of the Government of India and to all local Governments and Administrations.

Ordered, also, that the Resolution be published in the Gazette of India.

All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No 777—79 dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 P.M. on Friday and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette.

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques: any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

All published maps are sold at the Map Record and Issue Office, Survey of India, Calcutta, for cash with postage prepaid.

Agents cannot issue maps on the Public Service except on cash payment.

The following is a List of Maps published at the Head-Quarter Offices, Calcutta and Dehra Dun, during the Quarter ending 31st December 1918.

EXPLANATION.

All maps from Surveys after 1905 called "Modern" are printed in 4 or 5 colours, i.e., water forms in blue, towns and roads in red, forests and jungle in green, cultivation in yellow, hill contours in brown with shading to emphasize the hills, and other details in black.

All Maps from Surveys prior to 1905 called "Old" are printed in black only or in black with hills in brown.

All Maps on scales 1"=4 miles, $\frac{1}{1,000,000}$ or nearly 1"=16 miles and $\frac{1}{2,000,000}$ or nearly 1"=32 miles are printed in either one or two of the following editions, except those marked "Provisional Issue" which are from old surveys :—

(1) Layered edition, printed in colours with contours and graduated layer tints to show altitudes and shading to emphasize the hills. (Colour ribands along boundaries cannot be added to this edition.)

(2) Political edition, printed in colours with colour ribands along boundaries, contours to show altitudes and shading to emphasize the hills.

(3) Provisional Issue, generally printed in black or in black with hills in brown. Colour ribands along boundaries are added by hand when required at an extra cost of 2 annas per sheet.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, JANUARY 31, 1919.

First WHEAT Forecast, 1918-19.

This forecast is based on reports received from Provinces and States, which comprise 98·6 per cent of the total wheat acreage of India. The returns refer to all the important wheat growing areas except Kashmir. The figures set out in this report generally represent the area sown up to the beginning of January. Owing to the insufficiency of the monsoon, sowings are being continued in some places at the date of report.

The total area sown is estimated at 23,472,000 acres as against 33,836,000 acres (the revised figure) at this time last year, or a decrease of 31 per cent. As compared with the final area (35,497,000* acres) of last year, the present estimate shows a decrease of 34 per cent. The decrease in area as compared with the area this time last year in the main producing areas is especially noticeable. The decrease in the Bombay Presidency is 66 per cent, in the Punjab 34 per cent, in the Central Povinces 21 per cent, and in the United Provinces 18 per cent. In Hyderabad the decrease is 46 per cent and in Rajputana 42 per cent.

General condition.—Owing to the scanty rainfall of September and October, as will be seen from the appended data of rainfall, the area sown to wheat was much restricted. Further the prevalence of influenza interfered with sowing operations, especially in the Punjab, Delhi, the United Provinces, Bombay, the North-West Frontier Province and in parts of Rajputana. The irrigated crop is on the whole fair to good, while the condition of the unirrigated † crop is on account of drought below average, and in some parts, notably in Bombay, poor. Early rain is now urgently required for the unirrigated crop.

The detailed figures for the Provinces and States are noted below :—

Mysore . .	2,000	2,000	5,000
Total .	23,472,000	* 33,836,000	* 35,497,000

* Revised figure. (a) Including Indian States.

† The unirrigated area under wheat is on the average of the five years ending 1916-17 about 48 per cent of the total wheat area in the Punjab, 45 per cent in the United Provinces, and 71 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province.

Punjab (32·7 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown up to the end of December is estimated at 7,647,000 acres (639,000 acres being in Indian States), which is 34 per cent below the revised estimate at this time last year. In July and the first half of August the monsoon was extremely weak, but during the latter half of August it was active and gave frequent rain till the 3rd September, chiefly in the most northern and southern districts of the province. After that date there was scarcely any rain, although ordinarily the final withdrawal of the monsoon in the Punjab does not take place until about the middle of the month. From June to September the total rainfall was 49 per cent below the normal. The months of October and November were practically dry. Thus, the climatic conditions were very unfavourable for the sowing of the crop, the deficiency of September and October rainfall, which might have produced sufficient soil moisture for a good seed-bed, being the most serious feature of the season. The influenza epidemic also interfered with sowing operations. The supply of water in canals was short and rivers were low. Some rain was received in the second week of December except in the south-east and was beneficial to the standing crop. In the British districts the condition and prospects of the standing crop are average on irrigated area, but much below the average on unirrigated area, except in a small part of the Rawalpindi division which received some good showers. Rain is now urgently required everywhere for the unirrigated crop. The Provincial Director believes that the rain which fell on the 6th January will have benefited the standing crop.

United Provinces (22 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 5,800,000 acres, as against 7,050,000 acres estimated at this time last year, or a decrease of 18 per cent. Owing to the failure of late rains the season was generally unfavourable for wheat sowings. Except in the Gorakhpur and Benares divisions and southern Oudh, there was practically no rain after the end of August. In the eastern districts there was for the most part sufficient moisture in the soil for sowings; but in the western half and Bundelkhand little could be sown without irrigation. The canal supplies were short, and sowings being delayed by the prevalence of influenza barley was often substituted for wheat. The area sown was considerably below normal. The crop on irrigated land is fair to good but elsewhere prospects are uncertain and depend on early rain. This relates to the condition of the crop up to the 15th January.

Central Provinces and Berar (11·6 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 3,106,000 acres (90,000 acres being in the Khairagarh and Nandgaon States), which is 21 per cent below the corresponding estimate of last year. The early part of the monsoon was exceptionally favourable for the preparation of land for wheat, but the rain ceased abruptly after the second week of September except for a few showers. Conditions at sowing time were generally fair to good in Saugor, Damoh, Seoni, Hoshangabad, Nagpur, Mandla, Narsinghpur, Betul, and Akola but in the remaining districts the land except on rich soil dried up rapidly on account of drought. Germination was good, but in parts of Hoshangabad, Nimar, Betul, Nagpur, Saugor, Chhindwara, Chanda, Drug, Raipur, Akola, Buldana, and Yeotmal the growth was defective and the young seedling soon began to wither for want of moisture. In Khairagarh and Nandgaon germination was indifferent, but prospects are fair. The general condition and prospects of the crop did not look promising in November, but good rain in the early part of December greatly benefited the crop, particularly the early sowings in almost all the wheat growing districts. Little resowing was practicable. The contraction in area is shared by all the districts, and is due largely to want of moisture in the soil when sowings were undertaken. Prospects are, on the whole, favourable, but the crop on poorer lands is very thin. The weather is at present clear and cool and occasionally cloudy. Recently there has been rain in most of the districts, especially in Nagpur and Seoni.

Bombay and Sind (8·7 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The information is up to the 7th January and is incomplete as sowings continued in places at that date. The total estimated area so far sown is 877,000 acres (201,000 acres being in Indian States), which is 66 per cent below the corresponding estimate of last year. The season has been very unfavourable, owing practically to the absence of late rains in Gujarat and north Deccan. Sowings have been confined mostly to lands with irrigation facilities, or where moisture was available, which amount to one-eighth of last year's area in Gujarat and one-seventh in north Deccan. In places lands have been reserved for the growth of fodder crops. In south Deccan, Sholapur, Satara, and the Southern Mahratta Country States the situation is somewhat favourable, and light rains, although deficient, induced sowings to a considerable extent under stimulus of high prices. Sowings have been delayed everywhere for a fortnight to a month, and those in irrigated lands continued till the end of December. The unirrigated crop in Gujarat and north Deccan has practically withered away, while that in south Deccan and the Southern Mahratta Country States is somewhat better and may yield a poor to moderate outturn. The irrigated crop is generally good, and its prospects are somewhat better in places. The water supply is getting deficient. In Sind the inundation was very low and many river-side lands remained unflooded. The month of October was very hot, and people suffered extensively from influenza. Moreover the rainfall in that month was also deficient. These causes have restricted area to less than half of last year's, notwithstanding high prices. Germination has been fair, except in parts of Hyderabad Sind.

Bihar and Orissa (4·1 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area so far sown is reported to be 924,000 acres as against 1,210,000 acres at this time last year, or a decrease of 24 per cent. In September the rainfall was above the normal in Patna, Gaya, Shahabad, Saran, Champaran, Muzaffarpur, Monghyr, Sambalpur, and Palamau, and below the normal in the remaining districts. The excess was well marked in Patna. The fall was, however, confined to the first half of the month, there being no good general rain anywhere in the second half. In October only light and insufficient showers fell towards the end of the month in Bhagalpur, Purnea, the Santhal Parganas, Cuttack, Balasore, Angul, Puri, and the districts of the Tirhut division, no rain falling in the rest of the province. In November there was no rain except light and insufficient showers in parts of Puri, Balasore, Angul, and Sambalpur. In December light showers fell in parts of Shahabad, Monghyr, Bhagalpur and the districts of the Orissa and Chota Nagpur divisions, the rest of the province having had no rain. Sowings began generally at the normal time but were curtailed by the absence of rain. The standing crop has also been affected by drought and its condition is reported to be poor in all important districts excepting Champaran and Darbhanga, where it is fair.

North-West Frontier Province (3·2 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown up to the end of December is estimated at 842,000 acres, as against 1,182,000 acres reported at this time last year, or a decrease of 29 per cent. There is a decrease both in the irrigated and unirrigated lands which is shared by all the district except Peshawar. In addition to the ordinary takavi allotment, a special grant was sanctioned for advances to cultivators for the encouragement of wheat cultivation, but the lack of rain and the incidence of the influenza epidemic at sowing time have greatly interfered with the distribution of the loans to zamindars. The condition of the irrigated crop is so far average, but that of the unirrigated crop is reported below the average. The ultimate success of the wheat crop depends on the winter rains, which are much needed.

Bengal (0·4 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area so far sown amounts to 110,000 acres, which is 11 per cent below the estimate made at this time last year. The decrease in area is attributed to the unfavourable character of the season previous to seeding time. The months of September and October were practically rainless in most districts, the principal wheat-growing areas, namely, Maldu, Rajshahi, Patua, Murshid bad, and Nadia, having badly suffered from drought. The general condition of the crop is reported to be poor.

Delhi (0·1 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The area sown is estimated at 6,000 acres as against 55,000 acres estimated at this time last year. The decrease in area is due to the scarcity of rain, which combined with the influenza epidemic is responsible for the sowings having begun very late. Irrigated crops are in fair condition, while the unirrigated are practically non-existant.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·05 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area so far reported amounts to 4,000 acres as against 16,000 acres reported at this time last year. Sowings are still in progress.

Central India (9·9 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 2,615,000 acres, which is 23 per cent below the area at this time last year. The condition of the crop is reported to be good in Southern States, but poor elsewhere. The detailed figures are as follows :—

	1918-19	1917-18
	Acres	Acres
Gwalior	1,141,229	1,402,459

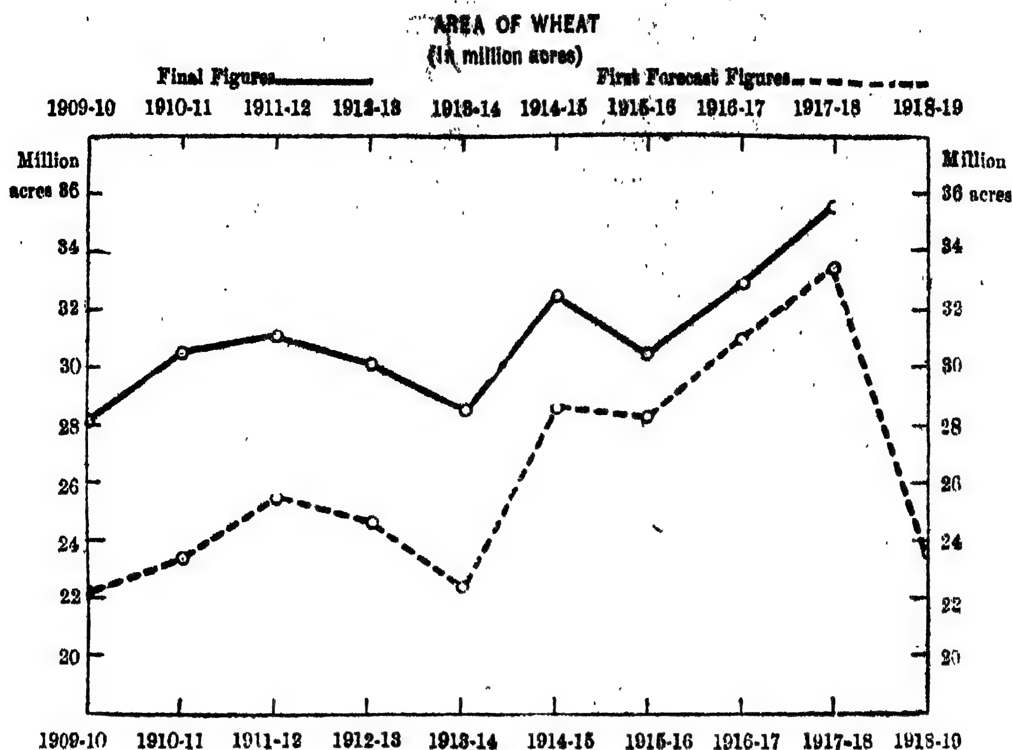
Hyderabad (3·1 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 655,000 acres, which is 46 per cent less than the estimate at the corresponding date last year. The condition of the crop is reported to be fair to good, except in parts of the Aurangabad and Bir districts.



Rajputana (2·8 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The total area sown is estimated at 884,000 acres, which is 42 per cent below the estimate at this time last year. The decrease is generally due to the deficiency of rains at sowing time. The condition of the crop in Kotah, Marwar, Sirohi, and Dholpur is reported to be good but fair elsewhere. Owing to insufficient rain no crops have been sown in the Kushalgarh State this year. Detailed figures for the States are as follows :—

(a) Estimated in this Department.

Mysore (0·01 per cent of the total area under wheat in India).—The area sown is estimated at 2,000 acres, the same as reported at this time last year. Owing to want of rainfall crop conditions are not favourable.

Chart.—The chart on the next page illustrates the preliminary estimates of acreage as compared with the final estimates for the last nine years for the whole of India.

Rainfall (1st September to 31st October).—The table below shows the total rainfall in the months of September and October, 1918, in the wheat growing provinces, furnished by the Director-General of Observatories:—

Wheat crops in foreign countries.—The latest statistics published by the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, are given below. The years referred to are those in which harvesting took place.

	Area (acres)		Yield (tons)
	1918 (Provisional)	1917 (Final)	1918 (Provisional)	1917 (Final)
United States of America	58,837,000	45,922,000	24,568,000	17,397,000
Canada	17,340,000	14,795,000	5,622,000	6,248,000
Italy (a)	10,794,000	10,433,000	4,714,000	3,678,000
France (a)	11,929,000	10,393,000	(b)	3,853,000
Spain	10,476,000	10,336,000	3,561,000	3,814,000

United Kingdom	2,793,000	2,103,000	2,489,000	1,719,000

The area sown with the 1918-19 crop in the Argentine and Australia are estimated at 16, 961,000 acres, and 8,645,000 acres, respectively.

From unofficial sources it appears that the growth of the new wheat crop in the United States of America is vigorous and it shows good colour. In the Argentine the weather is reported to have been unseasonably rainy, and unfavourable for the harvest. The exportable surplus from this year's crop is estimated at more than 3½ million tons. The yield of the new Australian wheat crop is reported to be about 1¼ million tons, of which the exportable surplus, excluding stocks of the old crop, will be about ¾ million tons. The condition of new crops in France and Italy is reported to be generally satisfactory.

Brewers' grains, see Grains.
(A) Bristles; (26-6-16); (8-3-18); (2-7-18).
Broccoli seed, see Seeds.
(A) Bromine and alkaline bromides; (12-4-18).
Bronze, see Copper.
Brussels sprouts seeds, see Seeds.

(A) Buchu leaves; (27-11-17) (12-4-18).
(A) Buckwheat; (12-12-16).
Buffalo hides, see Hides.
Bullion, see Silver.
(A) Butter.

C

Cabbage seed, see Seeds.
(A) Cables, chain.
(B) Cables, armoured, other than lead-sheathed.
Cables, see Copper.
(B) Cadmium, alloys of cadmium and cadmium ore; (15-8-16).
(A) Cakes and Meals (which may be used as forage or food for animals), the following :—
Biscuit meal;
Calf meal;
Cocoanut and poonac cake;
Compound cakes and meal;
Cotton seed cake and cotton seed meal;
Fish meal and concentrated fish;
Gluten meal or gluten feed;
Ground nut or earth nut cake and meal;
Hemp seed cake and meal;
Husk meal;
Linseed cake and meal;
Locust bean meal;
Maize germ meal;
Maize meal and flour;
Meat meal;
Palm nut cake and meal;
Poppy seed cake and meal;
Rape seed or colza seed cake and meal;
Sesame seed cake and meal;
Soya bean cake and meal;
Sunflower seed cake and meal;
Whale cake;
(A) Cakes.
(A) Calcium carbide; (12-3-17).
Calf meal, see Cakes and Meals.
(A) Calfskins.
(A) Calumba root; (11-6-18).
(A) Calves' stomachs; (25-5-16).
Camp kettles, see Kettles.
(B) Camphor; (1-5-17).
(A) Candles (1-5-17) (8-2-18).
(A) Cannon and other ordnance, and their component parts.
(A) Cantharides; (12-4-18).
(A) Canvas cuttings.
Caoutchouc, see Gums.
(A) Caramel, liquid or solid; (1-5-17).
(A) Carbon, coke oven; (6-8-18).
(B) Carbon disulphide; (19-11-18).
(A) Carbon, gas; (19-2-17).
(A) Carbon, pitch; (6-8-18).
Carbonyl chloride, see Phosgene.
(A) Carborundum, alundum, crystolon and all other artificial abrasives and manufactures thereof; (7-6-16) (17-11-16) (11-6-18) (6-12-18).
Card pins, see Steel.
Card wire, see Wire.
Carnauba wax, see Wax.
Carrot seed, see Seeds.
(A) Carriages and mountings for cannon and other ordnance and their component parts.
Carriages, see Railway.
(A) Casein and preparations thereof; (17-11-16) (19-5-17)
(A) Cascara Sagrada and its preparations; (30-3-17) (27-11-17) (12-4-18).
(A) Casings, hog; (20-12-18).
Casks, see Barrels.
(A) Cassava powder.

Cast iron pipes, see Pipes.
Cattle foods, see Cakes and Meals.
Cattle foods, patent and proprietary, see Patent.
Cattle hides, see Hides.
Cauliflower seed, see Seeds.
Caustic potash, see Potash.
Cedar-wood, oil of, see Oils.
Celery seed, see Seeds.
(A) Celluloid.
(A) "Celluloid" sheet, non-inflammable, and similar transparent material non-soluble in lubricating oil, petrol or water.
(A) Cement for building and engineering purposes; (14-5-18).
(A) Cereals, Prepared foods derived wholly or partly from.
Chain cables, see Cables.
Chains, rigging, see Ships' rigging.
Charges, see Cartridges.
(A) Cheese.
(A) Chicory; (30-3-17) (27-11-17).
Chicory seed, see Seeds.
(A) Chick peas; (12-12-16).
(B) Chlorates, metallic, other than potassium chlorate; (19-11-18).
(A) Chlorate, potassium, and mixtures containing potassium chlorate (19-11-18).
(B) Chrome ore.
(B) Chromium, compounds of (except chromium acetate, chromium chlorate and chromium nitrate), and mixtures containing such compounds of chromium.
(B) Chromium acetate; (19-11-18).
(B) Chromium chlorate; (19-11-18).
(B) Chromium nitrate; (19-11-18).
(A) Chronometers and their component parts; (23-10-16) (15-10-18).
(A) Cinchona bark, its alkaloids and their salts and preparations of any of these substances; (1-5-17) (27-11-17) (22-1-18).
Cleats, see Ships' rigging.
Clog nails, see Boots and Shoes.
Cloth, see Insulating materials; Jute; Wool; etc.
Clover seed, see Seeds.
Cloves, see Spices.
(A) Coal, except coal, allowed by the Commissioners of Customs and Excise to be shipped as bunker coal; (27-11-17).
Coal tar asphalt, see Asphalt.
(B) Coal tar pitch (15-10-18).
(A) Coal tar, all products obtainable from and derivatives thereof, (except solvent naphtha, cresylic acid and mixtures containing cresylic acid) suitable for use in the manufacture of dyes and explosives, whether obtained from coal tar or other sources, and mixtures and preparations containing such products or derivatives; (26-7-16) (29-11-18) (20-12-18)

(A) Cobaltchrom and similar alloys; (12-4-18).
(A) Cocaine and its salts and preparations; (17-11-16).
Cocoanut cake, see Cakes and Meals.
(A) Cocoa, raw, and manufactures thereof except cocoa butter (19-2-17) (20-12-18).
Cocoa butter (20-12-18).
(A) Cocoa husks; (19-2-17).
(A) Cocoa shells; (19-2-17).
Cocoons, see Silk.
(A) Coffee; (19-2-17).
(A) Coffee essence, including coffee essence containing Chicory; (27-11-17).
(A) Coke and manufactured fuel; (18-12-17).
Comb pins, see Steel.
Combings, see Malt.
Compound cakes and meal, see Cakes and Meals.
Condenser tubes, see Shipbuilding Materials.
(A) Condiments (except table salt) not otherwise specifically prohibited (1-5-17) (2-7-18).
(A) Confectionery manufactured wholly, or partly of sugar; (12-3-17).
(A) Copper, whether refined or unrefined, unwrought, wrought, or partly wrought of all kinds and descriptions, including brass, bronze, yellow metal, and all other alloys of copper; (23-2-17).
Copper manufactures, the following:—
(A) Wires and cables, insulated, the following:—
Enamelled copper wire.
Lead-sheathed cable.
Silk-covered wire.
Submarine cable.
(A) Copper ore; regulus, matte, concentrate and precipitate; (27-2-17).
(A) Copper sulphate; (12-4-18).
Cordage and twine, see Binder twine; Flax; Hemp manufactures; Jute cordage.
Cordite presses, see Implements, &c.
(A) Cork and cork dust; (22-1-18) (14-5-18). (29-11-18.)
(A) Cornflour.
(A) Corn grits.
Corn offals, see Offals.

(A) Cotton, raw; (12-3-17).
Cotton seed cake, and cotton seed meal, see Cakes and Meal.
Craft, see Boats.
(A) Cream of Tartar.
Cresol, see meta-cresol; para-cresol.
(A) Crysolite; (15-8-16).
Crystolon, see Carborundum.
Culms, see Malt.
(A) Culvers root (15-10-18).
(B) Cutch, and extracts thereof; (28-8-17) (19-11-18).
(B) Cylinders, metal, capable of use for the storage of gases or liquids under pressure; (14-8-17) (19-11-18).

D

(A) Dari.
Deadeyes, see Ships' rigging.
(A) Deer skins; (15-10-18).
(A) Dextrine and all articles and mixtures and preparations containing dextrine; (19-2-17), (10-5-17).
Dhol, see Gram.
Dies for cartridge cases, see Implements, &c.
Diesel engines, see Shipbuilding material.
(A) Dimethylaniline.
Distillers' grains, see Grains, &c.
(B) Docks, floating, and their component parts.
(B) Draw plates, jewelled for drawing wire; (8-1-15).
Drivers, see Boots and Shoes, material for.
(A) Dyes and dyestuffs manufactured from coal tar products, and articles containing such dyes and dyestuffs.

E

Earth nut cake and meal, see Cakes and Meals.
(A) Eggs in shells.
(A) Egg Powder; (1-5-17).
(A) Egg, yolk and liquid; (8-9-16) (19-2-17).
Electrical insulating materials, see Insulating.
Electric lamp filaments, see Tungsten.
Enamel, gold, see Gold.
Engines, internal combustion, see Shipbuilding material.
Engines, see Aeroplane; Railway carriages.
Equipment, military, see Badges; Buttons.
Equipment web, see Web.
(A) Ergot of rye, and the liquid extract of ergot; (10-5-17) (12-4-18) (15-10-18).
(A) Esparto grass.
(A) Explosives, other than industrial; (19-11-18).
Eyelets, see Boots and Shoes, material for.
Eyeplates, see Ships' rigging.

F

Faller pins, see Steel.
(A) Farina; (19-2-17).
(A) Fats, all animal and vegetable, and articles and mixtures containing such fats, not otherwise specifically prohibited; (19-2-17) (27-11-17).
(A) Fatty acids, and articles and mixtures containing fatty acids, not otherwise specifically prohibited; (27-11-17).
(A) Felt, roofing; (26-2-18).
Ferberite, see Tungsten Ores.
Ferro-alloys, the following:—
(B) Ferro-cerium.
(B) Ferro-titanium.

(B) Ferro-vanadium.
(B) Silicon spiegel; (15-8-16).
(B) Spiegeleisen.
(B) Ferro-silicon; (13-12-18).
Fibre, Maguey, see Hemp.
(A) Fibres, vegetable, not otherwise specifically prohibited; (15-8-16) (19-12-16) (1-5-17) (28-8-17) (8-2-18).
Fibre, vulcanised, see Insulating materials.
Filaments for Electric Lamps, see Tungsten.
Files, see Shoemakers' tools.
Finings, see Glue.
(A) Firearms and their component parts; (8-2-18) (29-11-18).
(A) Fish, except the following:—
Bloaters (tinned) and bloater paste, chinchards, herrings (tinned), kippers (tinned), mackerel (tinned or pickled), sprats (including tinned sprats), white fish (tinned); (27-12-18).

(A) Hydrobromic acid; (11-6-18).
(B) Hydrogen peroxide; (30-3-17).
(A) Hydroquinone, and mixtures containing hydroquinone.

I

(A) Implements and apparatus designed exclusively for the manufacture of munitions of war, for the manufacture or repair of arms or of war material for use on land or sea, the following :—
Cordite presses;
Dies for cartridge cases;
Gauges for cartridges or shells;
Incorporators;
Lapping machines;
Rifling machines;
Wire-winding machines.
Incorporators, see Implements.
(A) Indigo, synthetic; (6-8-18).
Insulating materials, the following :—
(B) Oiled insulating cloth, paper, silk, and tape; (14-5-18) (6-12-18).
(B) Vulcanised fibre; (14-5-18).
(A) Invert sugar, and articles, mixtures, and preparations containing invert sugar; (28-8-17).
(B) Iridium and its alloys and manufactures containing iridium; (12-12-16) (22-6-17) (27-11-17).
Iron and steel castings, and forgings for hulls and machinery of ships, see Shipbuilding Material.
Iron (1-5-17), the following :—
(A) Angles, channels, joists, tees and other sectional material.
(A) Bars, including flats, rounds and other sections and shapes.
(A) Billets, blooms and slabs.
(A) Bridgework, pierwork and constructional material.
Castings, see Castings; also Shipbuilding material.
Channels, see Angles above.
Constructional material, see Bridgework above.
Flats, see Bars above.
Forgings, see Castings, also Shipbuilding material.
Guttering, &c., cast, see Guttering.
(A) Ingots.
Joists, see Angles above.
(A) Ore.
Pierwork, see Bridgework above.
(A) Pig.
(B) Pipes, wrought (see also Pipes, cast).
Piping, see Piping.
(A) Plates and sheets.
(A) Pyrites.
Radiators, see Radiators.
Rails, see Railway material.
Rounds, see Bars above.
(A) Scrap.
Sections, see Bars above.
(A) Sheet bars.
Sheets, see Plates above.
Slabs, see Billets above.

TRADING BY FOREIGNERS.

The 8th February 1919.

No. 1002-D.—In pursuance of section 3 of the Indian Companies (Foreign Interests) Act, 1918 (XX of 1918), the Governor General in Council is pleased to declare the Burma Company, Limited, to be a Company with restrictive provisions within the meaning of the said Act and the following Articles of Association of the said Company to be restrictive provisions :—

Article 4.—The Company shall not be entitled to issue share warrants to bearer.

Article 9.—No share shall be allotted to any person who is not a British subject or to any corporation other than one that has been incorporated within the British Empire and is substantially British in character and subject to British control.

Article 10.—Every application for the allotment of shares and every transfer of shares must be accompanied by a declaration by the applicant or proposed transferee stating :—

(a) in the case of an individual, whether he is or is not a British subject and whether if an individual he has not ever taken an oath of allegiance to any foreign sovereign or state, or otherwise become a citizen or subject of a foreign state; and, if a British subject, whether he is a natural-born British subject, by naturalization or otherwise and if naturalized whether he remains for any purpose in the allegiance of any foreign sovereign or state;

(b) in the case of a corporation, the place and the date of its incorporation and that it is substantially British in character and subject to British control;

(c) in either case, whether there is or is not any agreement under which the applicant or proposed transferee will hold the shares or any of the shares if allotted or transferred to him on it, in trust for or in any way under the control of any foreigner or foreign corporation or any corporation under foreign control and if any such arrangement exists, the nature of it.

Article 11.—Notwithstanding any statement contained in such declaration as is mentioned in Article 10 the Directors may require any person or corporation applying for the allotment of shares to produce satisfactory evidence of British nationality or British character before making an allotment of shares to such person or corporation.

Article 15—Save as is herein otherwise provided, the Company shall be entitled to treat the registered holder of any share as the absolute owner thereof, and accordingly shall not, except as ordered by a Court of competent jurisdiction or as by Act of the Legislature required, be bound to recognise any equitable or other claim to, or interest in, such share on the part of any person.

Article 25.—No transfer of any share shall be registered if it would have the effect of increasing the number of members beyond the number prescribed by Article 8, or if it would have the effect of placing on the register a person who is not a British subject, or a corporation which is not incorporated in the British Empire and not substantially British in character and not subject to British control. The Directors may call upon any transferee to furnish such evidence as they may reasonably require to prove his, her, or its nationality or character, and may refuse to register any transfer until such evidence has been furnished.

Article 26.—The Directors may decline to register any transfer of shares on which the Company has a lien, or any transfer of shares to a person of whom they do not approve, and nothing in the Articles contained shall be construed as limiting the exercise of this last-mentioned power, or casting upon the Directors the obligations of assigning a reason for their refusal.

Article 27.—In the event of any member ceasing to be, or being found not to be, of the nationality and character required by these Articles, such member shall be bound to sell his, her or its shares at a price equal to the amount then paid up upon them to any member who may desire to purchase them.

Article 32.—Any person becoming entitled to a share in consequence of the death, bankruptcy or insolvency of any member, or in consequence of the marriage of any female member, upon producing such evidence that he sustains the character in respect of which he proposes to act under the Article, or of his title, as the Directors think sufficient, may, with the consent of the Directors (which they shall be under no obligation to give) be registered as a member in respect of such share, or may, subject to the provision of these Articles, transfer such share.

Article 74.—No person shall be qualified to act as a Director unless he is at the time a British subject. The qualification of a Director shall be the holding of one share in the Company.

Article 77.—The office of Director shall automatically be vacated :—

* * * * *

(e) if he ceases to be a British subject.

* * * * *

(g) if commercial or other intercourse between him and persons or corporations domiciled, or registered within the British Empire becomes unlawful.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Rainfall summary for the seven days ending at 8 hrs. on Thursday, the 6th February 1919, based on the Indian Daily Weather Reports of the period.

1. Rain and snow fell on the 30th January in Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, the Punjab and the northwest of the United Provinces, and rain in Chota Nagpur and Bengal. An interval of dry weather followed during which only a few scattered falls of rain occurred; but another disturbance from Persia entered northwest India on the 4th February and gave light rain or snow in Baluchistan, the North-West Frontier Province and Kashmir, while unsettled conditions in the north of the Peninsula produced local falls of rain in the Central Provinces and on the north Madras coast.

2. Burma.—Weather was dry.

Northeast India, including Orissa.—Rainfall was nearly general in Chota Nagpur on the 30th January, and local falls occurred on the same day in Bengal, Orissa and Bihar.

The United Provinces, Central India and the Central Provinces.—Nearly general rain fell in the northwest of the United Provinces on the 30th January, and local rain in the Central Provinces on the 4th and 5th February.

Northwest India.—Rain or snow fell at nearly every station on the 30th January in the east and north Punjab, and the North-West Frontier Province and on the 5th February in the northern half of Baluchistan.

The Peninsula.—Falls of rain were reported from Tinnevelly, Gopalpur and Cocanada.

3. The chief amounts of rainfall reported were as follows :—

January 30th. Sambalpur 1·26", Hazaribagh 0·64", Roorkee 0·93", Chakrata 1·71", Mukteswar 1·72", Simla 1·02", Khushab 0·83", Sialkot 0·56", Ambala 0·41", Murree 0·60" and Cherat 0·70".

February 1st. Gopalpur 0·73".

" 4th. Quetta 0·28", Seoni 0·81" and Nagpur and Sonamarg each 0·55".

" 5th. Pendra 0·35", Raipur 0·22" and Gopalpur 3·37".

4. The week's rainfall was 20 per cent or more in excess in Orissa, Chota Nagpur, the United Provinces West, the Punjab Southwest, Berar, the Central Provinces West and the Madras Coast North; and was 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Lower Burma, Assam, Bihar, the United Provinces East, Kashmir, the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana West, Central India East, Malabar and Madras Southeast. It was normal in Bengal, the Punjab East and North, and the Central Provinces East. No rain usually falls at this time of year in the remaining divisions.

The rainfall from the 29th November to date is 20 per cent or more in defect in the Bay Islands, Upper Burma, Assam and Bengal; and is 20 per cent or more in excess in Lower Burma, Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Punjab East and North, Kashmir, Baluchistan, Sind, Rajputana East, Gujarat, Central India, Berar, the Central Provinces, the Konkan, the Bombay Deccan, Hyderabad, Mysore, Malabar and the Madras Coast North. It is within 20 per cent of the normal in the remaining divisions.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 1st February 1919.

Burma.—The week was practically rainless. Reaping of winter rice has been completed. Threshing and winnowing are progressing. Sowing of island crops and transplanting of onions and tobacco are proceeding. Clearing and hoeing of hillsides are in progress. Plucking of cotton and gathering of groundnuts have been practically completed. Standing crops are good. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has fallen slightly to Rs. 120 per hundred baskets and is above normal. The market for white rice is weak at Rs. 305 per hundred baskets for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. More rain is wanted in some districts. Harvesting of winter rice is practically finished. Harvesting of pulses and mustard and transplanting of spring rice are nearing completion. Pressing of sugarcane, plucking of cotton, pruning of tea and ploughing for autumn rice and jute continue. Outturn and prospects of crops are generally fair, those of mustard are poor. Cattle disease is reported in one district. Price of common rice rose slightly.

Bengal.—Light rain fell in northern and western districts, elsewhere there was practically no rain. Rain has facilitated ploughing for autumn crops and benefited standing crops generally. Pressing of sugarcane and harvesting of potatoes and early oilseeds are progressing. Average price of common rice has risen by about 1·14 per cent.

Bihar and Orissa.—Rain was general over the province, the fall being light to moderate in Bihar and Orissa and very heavy for the time of the year in Chota Nagpur. Threshing of winter paddy still continues in some districts. The rain has ensured adequate preparation of the land for the next season's crops. Pressing of sugarcane is going on. The standing spring crops have generally been benefited by the recent rain. Test works are going on in 27 places in Angul, the daily average number of persons attending such works being 1,049. Gratuitous relief was given to 1,801 persons in this district. The price of common rice has risen in eight districts, fallen in three and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from nine districts. The condition of the spring crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is improving owing to the recent rainfall.

United Provinces.—General rain has again fallen throughout the province benefiting the crops. Slight damage by hail is reported from some districts. Preparation of land for and sowing of sugarcane and extra crops continue. Irrigation has practically stopped owing to recent rains. Pressing of sugarcane is in progress. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects have improved. Condition of agricultural stock is generally good but slight cattle disease still exists in parts of some districts. Fodder is scarce and dear and forest hay is being imported and sold. Water and market supplies are sufficient. Prices are generally stationary.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows:—General rain has again fallen in the affected tracts greatly benefiting standing crops. Hailstorm also visited some of the affected districts causing slight damage. Fodder is very scarce and dear. Government hay has arrived and is being sold. Recent rain will improve the situation. Agricultural stock is generally in fair condition though cattle disease is still prevalent in some parts. The price basis is 7 seers except in Garhwal where it is 5 seers 13 chhataks. Civil works are in progress in Etawah of which 9 are under the Forest Department. Advance is being freely given to tenants. Suspensions of revenue are being allowed. Numbers on gratuitous relief:—Garhwal 681, Etawah, 956, Benares nil, Jalaun 700, Jhansi 7, Hamirpur 2,090 and Banda 6,500. Number on test works:—Etawah civil works 3,457, forest works 3,773; Jalaun, works 911, poorhouse 18; Jhansi, works 496, poorhouse 9; Hamirpur, works 2,480, poorhouse 132; Banda, works 9,906, poorhouse 66, and Allahabad, works 263. There is no marked increase in distress which is confined to labouring classes. Public health is generally satisfactory. Physical condition of workers is fair. Clothing is generally in demand in relief works. No wandering or emaciation is noticeable. Prices of food grains are high but generally stationary.

Punjab.—Moderate to heavy rain was received in all the reporting districts except in parts of the south-east and west where the fall was light and more rain is still required. Rainfall was very beneficial to standing crops which are average to good on irrigated and below average to average on unirrigated areas. Pressing of sugarcane and harvesting of toria are in progress. The yield is generally below normal. Ploughings for and sowings of extra spring crops continue. Cattle are generally healthy but are weak in some districts owing to overwork and general scarcity of fodder. Water for drinking and irrigation is sufficient. Prices are generally stationary and above scarcity rates. Prices of wheat :—Lahore and Lyallpur 5¼, Amballa 5¾, Ferozepore 6 and Rawalpindi 6¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain fell throughout the province and was very beneficial for standing crops. More rain is still wanted. Condition of standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated areas is generally average in Peshawar and Bannu but below average in Dera Ismail Khan. Pressing of sugarcane was stopped during the week owing to rains. Prices of wheat :—Peshawar $7\frac{3}{16}$ and Dera Ismail Khan $7\frac{3}{16}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Rain was good during the week. Prices are slightly falling. Fodder is not sufficient.

Kashmir.—The week was generally wet and cold. Spring crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are fluctuating in the valley but high in Muzaffarabad.

Rajputana.—The weather was seasonable. Slight showers fell in a few places. Irrigation of spring crops continues except in places where watering has been suspended owing to recent rains. Cattle disease continues in places. Water is sufficient. Fodder is insufficient. Prices are high and are rising.

Central India.—Rainfall was partial in Bhopal and Malwa and general elsewhere except Gwalior where it was insufficient. Autumn crops are being harvested in Malwa and the Southern States. Cotton picking has been completed in Gwalior and is in progress in Bhopal and Malwa. Prospects have been much improved by recent rains except in Jaora, Rutlam and Sailana. Probable outturn has improved slightly in Gwalior and is fair elsewhere. Crops have been damaged by hail in Gwalior, Indore and Bhopal. Agricultural stock is bad in some districts of Gwalior and fair elsewhere except for cattle disease in parts of Gwalior, Bhopal and the Southern States. Scarcity of fodder prevails in Gwalior, Indore, Bundelkhand and in parts of Malwa and the Southern States. Prices are high but stationary. Opium is being weeded in Gwalior and Indore. Number on famine relief in Bundelkhand 3,052.

Central Provinces.—The weather had cleared up towards the latter part of the week but the sky is again overcast. Damoh, Seoni, Bhandara, Balaghat and Bilaspur received rain ranging from one to two inches. There was no rain in Nimar, Betul, Akola and Buldana. Light showers fell elsewhere; nowhere exceeding 84 cents. The rain was accompanied by hail in all Central Provinces districts and both the rain and hail have caused some damage to standing crops. Spring crops are faring well on the whole but bright weather is now essential. Harvesting of minor crops continues. Fodder and water are sufficient except in parts of five districts. Agricultural stock is in good condition. Relief measures continue in Damoh, Jubbulpore and Chanda districts. Juar in Saugor and Chanda, rice in Balaghat, gram and rice in Drug rose and gram and juar in Amraoti fell by 1 to 1½ seers per rupee. Other variations are unimportant, but exhibit a distinct upward course.

The report on scarcity in Central Provinces for last week is as follows :—General health is good in all affected districts of the province except Ahiri Zamindari where influenza continues. Distress is slightly increasing in Jubbulpore where numerous immigrants from adjoining states are arriving in search of work. Private funds in Jubbulpore and Saugor continue to provide cloth and grain to the poor. Early spring harvest is decreasing distress in Sironcha. Prices of food grains are high but stationary. Numbers on works :—Damoh 707, Saugor 145, Chanda nil, Jubbulpore 1,181, Seoni 1,026, total 3,059. Numbers on gratuitous relief :—Damoh 2,400, Saugor 94, Chanda 666, Jubbulpore 5,090, Seoni 312, total 8,562.

Feudatory States.—Moderate to heavy rain fell in all States. Crops are doing well.

Bombay.—Moderate rain fell during the week in the greater part of the Presidency. It was beneficial to spring crops in Sind. Standing crops are withering in parts of Karnatak, Sholapur and Satara, elsewhere they are fair to good. Cotton picking is nearing completion in parts of Sind, Gujarat, Sholapur, Karnatak, Baroda and Rewa Kantha. Fodder supply is generally deficient but supplies continue to be moved to worse affected areas under Government arrangements. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient but cattle are deteriorating except in Konkon. Irrigation is generally deficient. Prices of food grains are high but generally steady. Famine has been declared in Khed and Sirur talukas of Poona. Relief works are in progress in Ahmednagar and parts of Poona. Emigration continues from parts of West Khandesh and Satara. Public health is generally good. People find employment on Government relief and ordinary public works. Liberal suspensions of land revenue have been granted. Takavi is freely advanced for fodder and agricultural improvements. Cheap grain shops continue working in Nasik, West Khandesh and Kathiawar. One poor house has been organised in Poona and two more will shortly be opened in Dhulia and Sindkheda talukas of West Khandesh.

Cattle camps have been organised in Nasik, Ahmednagar and Poona. Numbers of persons on relief works including dependents, Panch Mahals 1,838; Ahmednagar 4,200. Total 6,038. Numbers on gratuitous relief: Kaira 4,512, Panch Mahals 312, Kathiawar 887, Ahmednagar 6,747, West Khandesh 125, Poona 2,958, Satara 1,325, Bijapur 400, total 17,267: number of persons on test works on same day: Kaira 98, Panch Mahals 1, Mahals 1,073, Broach 214, Poona 3,300, Palitana State Kathiawar 29, total 4,714.

Hyderabad.—There were some showers of rain, the average being 37 cents. Hailstones have slightly damaged spring crops in some places. Spring crops are being harvested. They are fair to good, except in Aurangabad, Bir and Warangal districts. Late rice is being weeded. Sowings continue. Cattle are healthy except in some talukas of five districts, where they are dying to some extent. Fodder is scarce in most districts, and cattle are being sold at low prices. Prices of grains continue to be abnormally high. Juar is selling at three seers per rupee in Aurangabad and Gulbarga districts.

Mysore.—The week was slightly wet. Standing crops are in fair condition. Harvested ragi and rice outturn is poor to fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are generally steady.

Coorg.—The weather was dry. Harvesting of rice has been completed. The outturn is 75 per cent of average crop. Picking of coffee continues. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Cattle disease prevails in parts. Public health is fair.

Madras.—Rainfall was good in Tinnevelly, Malabar, Travancore, Cochin and the Hills, fair in Ganjam and light or nil elsewhere. Standing crops are fair generally but cholam and cotton have been affected by disease in parts of the Deccan. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are limited with outturn sometimes fair but poor in parts of sixteen districts. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding but are restricted in parts. Condition of cattle is good generally. Water is insufficient except in Kistna, Nellore, Chingleput, Coimbatore, West Coast and the Hills. Pasture is sufficient except in parts of eight districts. Fodder is insufficient in parts of seven districts. Prices are rising generally. Prospects are bad in parts of Ganjam, Godavari, Bellary, Chittor, North Arcot and Salem. In Ganjam test works with gratuitous relief are in progress in seven places in Guntur taluk and four in places in Udayagiri Agency. People are resorting freely to works. Their physical condition is fair. Numbers on works:—Guntur 2,093, Agency 1,012. Numbers on gratuitous relief:—Guntur 346, Agency 199.

Nepal.—Report on the agricultural and pastoral situation for the period from 16th October 1918 to 15th January 1919.

The rainfall for the period was 0·11 against 0·13 for the corresponding period of last year.

October 1918. Pepper was gathered and the outturn was good. Garlic and onions were sown. Lands began to be prepared for the rabi crop.

November 1918 Rice was harvested and the outturn was good. Oranges began to ripen in Nepal. Spring sowings were commenced both in the Nepal valley and in the Terai.

December 1918. Spring sowings were continued. The orange crop was plucked and was a good one. The sowing of winter vegetables was begun in the Nepal valley. The first crop of potatoes was dug up and the outturn was normal.

January 1919 The standing spring crop is doing well. Fields are being prepared for the sowing of the second crop of potatoes. Winter vegetables continue to be sown.

The health of the live stock is reported to be good. The market is well stocked and the prices of food grains continue normal.

ARMY DEPARTMENT.

Delhi, the 7th February 1919.

FORMATION OF THE INDIAN SOLDIERS' BOARD IN PLACE OF THE CENTRAL RECRUITING BOARD.

RESOLUTION.

On the recommendation of the Indian Soldiers' Board certain minor amendments have been approved by the Government of India in Resolution No. 737, dated the 16th January 1919. The Resolution as amplified is accordingly republished for information in supersession of the previous Resolution.

RESOLUTION.

The Government of India have decided that the functions of the Central Recruiting Board should now be definitely held in suspension and that in its place a new Board, to be called the Indian Soldiers' Board, should be established to advise on questions affecting the interests of serving, discharged and deceased Indian soldiers and non-combatants and their dependants. Its composition and membership will be the same as that of the Central Recruiting Board, but the Honorary Secretary of the Indian Imperial Relief Fund will be added as a member, and the Honourable Sir George Lowndes will take the place of the Honourable Sir William Vincent as President.

The Indian Soldiers' Board will be affiliated to the Army Department of the Government of India, and will deal particularly with the following subjects :—

(1) The formation of district records of war services which may serve as the basis for the future action of this Board.

(2) Consideration of questions connected with land rewards or grants.

(3) The question of preferential treatment in obtaining Government employment.

(4) Educational concessions for children.

(5) The after-care of the wounded and incapacitated soldier.

(6) The safe-guarding of the general interests of soldiers by provincial and district committees, who should specially watch the interests of soldiers absent from their homes.

(7) Consideration, in collaboration with the military authorities, of the whole subject of demobilisation in its civil aspect, in relation to prevailing economic conditions and the general interest.

The solution of these problems depends largely upon the action taken in the several provinces, and all local Governments and Administrations have been addressed with a view to preserving the provincial Recruiting and War Boards—reconstituted, if necessary, in form and composition—as a nucleus to advise on these questions.

Order.—Ordered that a copy of the foregoing Resolution be communicated to all Departments of the Government of India and to all local Governments and Administrations.

Ordered, also, that the Resolution be published in the Gazette of India.

A. H. BINGLEY, Major-General,
Secretary to the Government of India.

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 10th February, 1919 :—

No. 3 of 1919.

A Bill to extend the powers of local authorities in regard to the granting of pensions and gratuities.

WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the powers of local authorities in regard to the granting of pensions and gratuities ; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Local Authorities Pensions and Gratuities Act, 191 ;

(2) It extends to the whole of British India including the Sonthal Parganas.

Definition.

2. In this Act "officer" means any person who has undertaken the service of Government and who, immediately prior to undertaking such service, was paid and employed solely by a local authority and, but for undertaking such service, would in the ordinary course have continued in such employment.

Power to grant extraordinary pensions and gratuities.

3. Notwithstanding anything contained in any enactment or in any rule made thereunder regulating the powers of local authorities, and without prejudice to any powers conferred by or under any such enactment, a local authority may grant a pension or gratuity to any officer thereof who may since the fourth day of August, 1914, have been wounded or otherwise incapacitated in the service of Government, and to the widow or child of any such officer who may have died in consequence of injuries received or illness contracted since the fourth day of August, 1914, in the course of such service.

Provision as to pensions and gratuities.

4. (1) Such pension or gratuity may be granted in addition to any pension or gratuity payable to the officer or his wife or child, as the case may be, under any general or special orders of His Majesty in Council or of the Governor General in Council, but shall not, save with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, exceed the amount of the pension or gratuity to which the officer or his wife or child would have been entitled under any such orders if his employment by the local authority had been service for the same time and on the same pay under Government.

(2) Any pension granted under this Act may be made to take effect from such date subsequent to the fourth day of August, 1914, and subject to such conditions as the local authority may think fit.

Procedure.

5. Subject to the provisions of this Act, the decision of a local authority to grant a pension or gratuity thereunder shall be made in such manner and shall be subject to such sanction as may be prescribed by any enactment or rule regulating the grant by such local authority of pensions and gratuities :

Provided that in every case the sanction of the Local Government shall be necessary.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Provisions already exist in some of the enactments relating to local authorities for the grant of pensions and gratuities to employés who may be wounded and to the families of employés who may be killed in execution of their duty. But it is not open to a local authority to grant a pension or a gratuity to an employé or to his family when he has been incapacitated or has lost his life in the service of the State. It is proposed to permit any local authority, which so desires, to grant a pension or a gratuity in such a case ; and, in order specially to provide for cases where those who had been in the employ of local authorities proceeded on active service during the Great War, it is proposed that the measure should be applicable in cases of injury, disease or death which have occurred since the 4th August, 1914. The Act will be an enabling Act, the provisions of which can be made applicable by such local authorities as care to avail themselves of it to any case covered by the terms of the Act, the sanction of the Local Government being required in each case.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Thursday, the 6th February, 1919.

PRESENT:

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., G.C.B.E., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 59 Members, of whom 52 were Additional Members.

OATH OF OFFICE.

" Mr. Pierce Langrishe Moore, C.I.E.
" Mr. Denys de Saumarez Bray, C.I.E.

[His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; His Excellency the President.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

TELEGRAMS OF CONGRATULATIONS TO ALLIED ARMIES.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief:—" My Lord, I ask permission to lay on the table a copy of certain telegrams* received in reply to the message conveying the terms of the Resolution of thanks and congratulations to the Allied Armies adopted by the Indian Legislative Council on the 25th September, 1918."

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY'S SPEECH AT THE OPENING OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL SESSIONS AT DELHI ON 6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.

11-5 A.M. " In welcoming Hon'ble Members once again to their Delhi Session, I think there is no topic to which I can more aptly refer at the outset than the elevation of our friend—once familiar to us here as Sir Satyendra Sinha—to the peerage and to a place in His Majesty's Government. I am sure that I shall be voicing the unanimous opinion of this assembly when I say that we are deeply gratified by the high distinction he has achieved, and that we are confident he will rise equal to the great opportunity which by his high intellectual qualities and his unfailing tact he has created for himself in the central counsels of the Empire. Personally I have always had the warmest friendship and admiration for Sir Satyendra, and I have no reason to doubt that I shall consistently entertain similar feelings towards the Right Hon'ble the Lord Sinha.

" Now there are one or two matters affecting Hon'ble Members themselves to which I will refer briefly. The first is the extension of the term of office of Members. In the ordinary course it would have been necessary to hold a general election in the spring, since with one exception all the elected Members will have completed their terms before the September Session. This seemed to me undesirable for many reasons having regard to existing circumstances, and accordingly, with the approval of the Secretary of State in Council, the regulations were amended so as to enable me to extend the life of the existing Council for a period of one year in all. I have exercised this power so as to prolong the term of office of Members till the 20th July 1920.

" As Hon'ble Members are aware, I recently intimated to them that it would not be possible to find time during the present Session for the discussion of ordinary Resolutions, and I explained the reasons that actuated me in coming to this decision. I hoped that these reasons were such as would commend themselves to Hon'ble Members, as I know that they are as anxious as I am to facilitate the progress of the Reforms proposals. A protest has, however, been received from one Hon'ble Member against the action I have taken. I do not propose to discuss the arguments with which this protest is supported, as I am satisfied that my action is not only in the public interest, but is entirely in accordance with past practice. It is, moreover, unnecessary for me to do so, as the Hon'ble Member in question, while feeling himself bound as a lawyer to protest, generously expresses himself as anxious to fall in with the object I have in view. I will only add that it is my desire to expedite the grant of wider facilities for public discussion that has led me to arrive at the decision I have taken, and I think Hon'ble Members know me well enough to believe that no power that I may possess will ever be used for the curtailment of the privileges of this Council. I would, therefore, ask Members to have patience and to put up with what they may regard as a temporary inconvenience in order to accelerate the progress of measures which may lead to the grant of further powers to their successors.

Vide* Appendix A to these Proceedings.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [The President.]

"Among the legislative matters to be brought before you in the ensuing Session are two Bills of the highest importance. I refer of course to the Bills to give effect to the recommendations of the Commission presided over by Sir Sydney Rowlatt. These recommendations were unanimous, and coming as they did from persons who command the greatest authority, the Government of India decided that they should be brought before this Council in the shape of the necessary legislative measures. The necessity for proceeding with legislation on the subject in this Session is of course due to the early termination of hostilities and the prospect of the conclusion of peace in the near future. The very important powers which have enabled the public peace and order of India to be preserved during the war will shortly come to an end. It is essential in my judgment that they should be replaced by adequate substitutes. The sudden release from restraint and control of the forces of anarchy would involve a position which we cannot contemplate. The reaction against all authority which has manifested itself in many parts of the civilised world is not likely to leave India entirely untouched, and the powers of evil are still abroad. We cannot shut our eyes to the undoubted existence in India of definitely revolutionary organisations.

"There are facts which can neither be denied nor explained away, and the Government of India would be failing in its duty if it did not make preparation to deal with them. After the most anxious consideration of the subject I have come to the very clear conclusion that special measures are essential, not only to the maintenance of His Majesty's Government in this country, but to the safety of the lives and property of its citizens. I can only commend these Bills to your very earnest and careful consideration.

"Some Members of the Council will remember that in the cold weather of 1913-1914 Lord Hardinge's Government accepted a Resolution moved by Mr. Rama Raya Venkataranga that a joint commission of officials and non-officials should be appointed to investigate the whole subject of jail administration and to suggest improvements in the light of the experience of the West. A Committee for that purpose was on the point of being constituted when the war broke out and made it practically impossible to hope that any Committee could obtain assistance in England or any other country that had taken up arms. Now that hostilities have ceased we have taken the question up once more, and I hope that we shall shortly be able to announce the appointment of a small Committee under the chairmanship of an expert from England who is a very high authority on these matters.

"It will be also within your recollection that as a result of a Resolution in this Council last September, a Committee composed partly of official and partly of non-official Members of this Council met to consider the administration of the Arms Act. We have given the report of this Committee our most earnest attention and have lately formulated our conclusions upon the subject and submitted them to the Secretary of State. I do not suppose that they will give satisfaction to all, but the subject bristles with difficulties, and I hope it will be generally recognised, when the changes we have decided to introduce are placed before the public, that a serious attempt has been made to grapple with a very knotty problem.

"I have already mentioned in this Council the Bill introduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel to enable district municipalities in Bombay to adopt with the sanction of the Local Government compulsory elementary education for children. That Bill has now become law, and I am glad to see that the Government of Bombay propose to behave in a liberal manner to any municipality which desires and is able to adopt its provisions. I have recently given my assent to a Bill of a similar nature but of wider application in Bihar and Orissa, and other Bills are either awaiting introduction or have arrived at various stages in the process of legislation.

"It is a matter for congratulation that in two provinces where primary education has hitherto been peculiarly backward, namely, the United Provinces and the Punjab, vigorous action is now contemplated.

[The President.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

"The compulsory education Bills which are in process of becoming law require that Government should be satisfied that proper facilities are, or can be provided before the measure becomes applicable in any particular area. This is a very proper condition and I make no doubt that Local Governments, when laying down rules under such sections, will also pay special attention to the very important problem of the training of teachers. Among our vernacular teachers only 32 per cent. are trained. If, as we hope now that the war is over, the rate of expansion of mass education is accelerated, the institutions for the training of vernacular teachers will have to be multiplied, enlarged and strengthened. For the first essential of a school is an efficient teacher, and if our teachers are inefficient, the money spent upon their pay and upon the buildings, equipment and up-keep of the school is only too likely to be money thrown away. We addressed the Local Governments on this important matter in 1916, and further allotted a recurring Imperial grant of 30 lakhs for the training and pay of teachers in the ensuing year. I observe with pleasure that the resolution issued by the Government of the United Provinces in pursuance of the policy for the expansion of primary education lays special stress upon the importance of training teachers, which is indeed, as I have frequently urged, a necessary preliminary to any effective advance.

"Since the last occasion on which I addressed you, we have received the long-expected Report of the Indian Industrial Commission. I regard this Report as a State document of the greatest value and importance. With the underlying principles which form the basis of the Commission's recommendations, namely, the urgent necessity not only for the improvement of Indian industries, but for the more active participation of Government in developing them, I imagine there will be unanimity of opinion. I believe strongly that there is a great future before Indian industries, but it is necessary that, if the full harvest is to be reaped, the land must be ploughed and the seed sown at the best time and in the best manner. It is essential that Indian Industries should be guided on right lines at the early stages of their development. Few people, I imagine, will hesitate to agree that in order to ensure such guidance, a great expansion of the scientific and technical advice at the disposal of industry in this country is essential, and the proposals of the Commission for the organisation of scientific and technical services form probably the most important part of their Report. I need hardly say that we have lost no time in considering this Report and in consulting Local Governments on the proposals made by the Commission. While I believe that the Commission's proposal for the organisation of an Imperial Department will be found essential to supply the necessary stimulus to industrial development and to afford advice and assistance where required, I fully recognise that the actual work of developing industries will have to be chiefly carried out by Provincial effort and under Provincial control. I know that this is a matter on which local opinion is keen, but I have no fear that the organisation which will be ultimately established will involve any undue centralisation. I cannot conclude my remarks on this subject without expressing my appreciation of the work of Sir Thomas Holland and his co-adjutors in producing this Report. The labour which with great public spirit they devoted to their difficult and complicated task was unstinted, and the care and thought with which they have elaborated their conclusions is beyond praise.

"I do not propose to-day to review at length the field of ordinary departmental work, but there are certain points specially connected with India's war effort on which I feel it right to touch. Taking the material side first, I think it is still not fully appreciated how effectively India contributed to meet war requirements. To form a correct estimate, it is necessary to picture the special difficulties which arose particularly during the later phases of the great conflict. The forces in Mesopotamia, for which we were largely responsible, were fighting in a country utterly deficient of the ordinary requirements of a modern army; there were no roads, railways or mechanical transport facilities on the rivers. The country over which the troops had to move was devoid of timber, of fuel and even of ordinary stone; everything, even firewood for cooking and fodder for the horses, had consequently to be imported.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [The President.]

"While endeavouring to meet the wants of the armies in the field our supplying officers in India were daily confronted with the competing wants of the civil population in India, and at the same time we had to restrict to the barest necessities the import into India of manufactured goods, in order to free the energies of war workers in Allied countries. The maintenance of this delicate balance between conflicting demands imposed a heavy burden of great complexity on the responsible Departments of Government.

"The necessity of supplying the coal required by transports east of Suez introduced an additional complication, by leaving us with insufficient fuel to meet the requirements of essential industries and transport within India itself. The general shortage of sea freight introduced further difficulties.

"The depletion of our supplies of manufactured goods, partly through unusual military consumption and partly by the cutting off of imports, to which I have already alluded, was naturally attended by disturbance of prices and withholding of stocks which made it difficult to obtain at short notice the necessary equipment and stores for the army.

"The complex and rapidly changing conditions that followed the depredations of enemy submarines, especially during the last two years of the war, in these ways thrust a burden on India that cannot be appreciated fully in those countries where all ordinary munitions of war can be manufactured in the country itself. Habits and administrative methods which had rested on a basis of uninterrupted import had rapidly to be recast; the manufacture of substitutes had to be devised without the usual facilities of suitable machinery; iron, steel, coke and various other necessities had to be rationed, expert labour trained, and undeveloped resources turned to account.

"The lessons learnt and the new industries inaugurated must now be developed and converted into permanent acquisitions. To this question Government is devoting its earnest attention.

"Whilst making special endeavours to be herself less dependent on outside sources of supply, India has contributed raw materials and food-stuffs to meet the needs of the Allies generally. To England we sent over 100,000 tons of hides and to Italy about 44,000 tons with a total value of some 21 millions sterling. As a result of special efforts, a considerable fraction of these were tanned before export, and in order to assist in turning this new development to permanent account, we engaged experts in tanning, in leather goods manufacture and tan-stuff research.

"Timber for structural works, exclusive of fuel and railway sleepers, to the extent of 200,000 tons were sent to the armies in the Near East. Railway materials of local manufacture sufficient to construct over 1,800 miles of track and 13,000 feet of bridging were despatched, while from our own stock we spared 229 locomotives and 5,900 vehicles.

"The unusual military demand for cotton clothing was entirely met by Indian Mills, whilst a large fraction of the woollen goods required were also manufactured locally from indigenous and imported Tibetan wool. Altogether 42 million articles of troops' clothing were manufactured.

"On the man-power side I can also give you some interesting details covering the closing stages of the war. As a result of the Delhi Conference, India undertook in response to the Prime Minister's appeal to contribute 500,000 combatant recruits during the 12 months commencing on June 1st last.

"Doubts were expressed in some quarters regarding the prospects of fulfilling the pledge, and, as the previous year had yielded only 266,000 combatants, it was clear that the most strenuous efforts would be necessary to secure the large quota promised. Although during June the number obtained was only 28,000 against 41,000 required, the succeeding months, when the full effect of the increased effort was felt, showed such gratifying results that by the 11th November, the date of the armistice, over 200,000 recruits had been obtained, and there is every reason to believe that the 300,000 required during the remaining seven months would have been forthcoming had recruiting continued.

[The President.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

"From the commencement of the war India has furnished 1¼ million recruits—combatant and non-combatant—a most creditable achievement.

"Demobilisation of the Indian Army has commenced, but cannot become general until peace has been declared. Up to date approximately 50,000 Indian troops have been demobilised and allowed to return to their homes.

"The Recruiting Board as such has now ceased to exist, and its place has been taken by the Indian Soldiers' Board presided over by my Colleague Sir George Lowndes. It is felt that a debt of honour is due to those who have ventured, and in thousands of cases lost life and limb in the service of the Empire and of India, and that prompt and comprehensive action should be taken to discharge that debt. Accordingly the new Board has been formed. It will deal with questions affecting the interests of Indian soldiers and non-combatants serving, discharged or deceased, and will more especially consider questions connected with land rewards or other grants for distinguished service, the after care of the wounded and incapacitated, educational concessions for children and the safeguarding of the general interests of soldiers by means of provincial and district committees who will especially watch the interests of soldiers absent from their homes.

"In this connection Hon'ble Members will be interested to hear that we have taken up with Local Governments the question of the education of children, both boys and girls, of all men of whatever rank, whether combatants or non-combatants who since the 4th of August 1914 have died while on active service list duty or become permanently incapacitated owing to wounds or disease contracted while on the active list. It is proposed that such children should receive free primary education, together with a small allowance to cover incidental expenses, scholarships to carry them on to middle schools and, we hope, some reserve scholarships for still higher education. The women in India have contributed a substantial sum to be presented to Her Imperial Majesty the Queen-Empress as a Silver Wedding Gift, and it is Her Majesty's desire that this should be used for a similar purpose, supplementing the efforts of Government by providing higher education and alleviating cases which cannot well be brought within ordinary rules.

"I must also refer in passing to the efforts which Government has made during the last six months to secure through our Publicity Boards the diffusion of correct information about the war. In these efforts, we have been ably seconded by the Press of India, to whose hearty co-operation our success is largely due. I may refer particularly to the work in the United Provinces and in the Punjab. Both the United Provinces War Journal and the Haq, the organ of the Punjab Publicity Committee, have disseminated war information far and wide, and have created in the minds of thousands of our peasant-folk an interest in the larger world outside the circle of the village. Thus besides the service which has been performed by the Publicity Campaign, in assisting the people of India to form a right idea of the issues of the war, in helping forward the last War Loan, and in supplying a great stimulus to recruiting, its educative effects are such as can hardly fail to be of the utmost importance both now and in the future.

"No difficulties could compare with those imposed upon us by the war, but our release from their strain has unhappily coincided with a period of new anxieties.

"At the very moment when Great Britain and her Allies were bringing the great war to a victorious close, there suddenly fell upon the world a new calamity, the extent of which has hardly yet been measured or realised. I mean the so-called influenza which has just swept over the greater part of the globe and in an incredibly brief space of time has carried off some millions of lives. The Medical authorities did not spare themselves in coping with this fell disease. But whether in India or in other countries possessed of more perfect medical organisations, the very suddenness of the onslaught, the novelty of the symptoms and the fact that doctors were frequently laid low while battling with the scourge produced a condition of helplessness and disorganisation. All thanks are due to the unselfish efforts made by public and private bodies during this terrible time. The Medical authorities in India have made haste to investigate the disease, and so far as is possible to make ready by the preparation of vaccines, etc., against such another visitation. An officer has been placed on special duty in connection with the investigation. Those who complain of the apparent unsuccess of attempts to cope with this disaster, must remember that India alone has not been afflicted, that the greatest medical authorities throughout the world have been concentrating their attention on this matter, and that it is beyond human skill to find instant remedies in such a case. Two lessons we may learn if indeed they have not already been sufficiently impressed upon us by the ravages of plague and other diseases. The defects of sanitation in India are fully recognised, and in June last we addressed Local Governments on this subject, and especially on the necessity for sanitary organisation in rural tracts, and we placed before them the recommendations made by an informal conference of Sanitary Commissioners which had been held here. In the second place, it is incumbent on us to increase our facilities for research. The Medical services in India have a proud record in this respect, a record which should encourage us and give us confidence in making a bold advance in the establishment of research institutes to investigate those ailments which are particularly prevalent in India.

"Our other grave anxiety has been on the score of the unusual drought. Widespread scarcity has resulted, and a general rise of prices which presses very heavily on the poorer classes. The position has, I am glad to say, been favourably affected by the recent rainfall. As the Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill is going to make a statement covering the whole ground and setting forth the measures that have been taken to relieve the situation, I will not take up more of your time with this subject now, but before leaving it I should like to express my appreciation of the good work which Mr. Gubbay has done in discharging the duties of Food Controller.

"There is a matter of special and grave concern to the European community which is exercising me and my Government at the present time, and on which I feel I ought to touch. I refer to the difficulties in the way of securing passages home and to the exorbitant rates charged. All I can now say is that from the time the Armistice was signed we have been in constant communication with the Home authorities, urging in the most emphatic manner the claims to consideration of Europeans resident in this country, and that we shall not rest satisfied till we have secured amelioration in existing conditions.

"You will expect me now to say something in regard to the Reform proposals. The Committees under the chairmanship of Lord Southborough are now sitting in Delhi, and hope in conjunction with the Government of India to lay their Report shortly before His Majesty's Government. I have dealt on other occasions with various aspects of this important question. To-day I wish to deal more particularly with the position of the services and the English commercial community.

"It is indeed natural that the services should feel keen anxiety as to their place in the future scheme of things. The Secretary of State and I could not within the compass of our report elaborate in full detail all the issues arising out of our proposals for Reform, but now that the criticisms and discussions of the past months have brought home to us something of the misgivings and anxieties which our services are feeling, I propose to take this opportunity of stating, as clearly as I can, what my conception of their future position is.

"And first let me say this. The services of India have just come through a long period of exceptional strain. Their strength has been seriously depleted by the war. They have been called upon not merely to run the administration with a far weaker staff; not merely to help to steady men's minds during periods of depression and alarm; but they have also had to organise and promote many forms of war activity. It has been out of the question to let them take leave, and so they have stayed at their posts year after year doing double work, often to the detriment of their health and commonly at the sacrifice of domestic comfort. They have been hard hit by rising prices; and they have come in for attacks arising out of the agitation in connection with Reforms which have sometimes been ungenerous and unfair. But they have risen superior to all these things, and as Viceroy I am proud and glad to acknowledge on behalf of my Government the part they have played in keeping India contented and quiet, and in helping to win the war. And now the war is over, and they seem to see before them difficulties and sacrifices greater still. I want the services to know that my Government and I are fully cognisant and deeply appreciative of all these things.

" Let me state then, as clearly as I can, what I conceive to be the governing conditions of this problem. The changes which we are setting about in India must gradually involve a profound alteration in the position of the public services. Hitherto the great administrative and technical bodies of men recruited from England—such as the Indian Civil Service, the Indian Police, the Indian Medical Service, the Indian Education Service, the Indian Forest Service, the Public Works Department—have not been civil services in the sense in which that word is generally understood. I have indeed seen criticisms which assumed that our public services had usurped to themselves a place which Parliament never assigned to them. That, as every reader of history knows, is a wholly wrong and unfair suggestion. The services were sent to India by Parliament not as the executive agents of a popular government in India, but to administer the country under the official Government of India. No one else could have done the work which they have done. They could not have done it themselves, had their position been different. Now with the introduction of responsible government in India, however limited at first, a change must begin. If we set up ministers, ministers must administer; and the permanent services must execute. That is so well accepted a maxim of our British polity that no one will dispute it. This then is my first proposition.

" But to suppose as has been alleged that we propose to place the services as a whole in helpless subordination to inexperienced and possibly hostile ministers; that we intend not merely to deprive them of power, but to require them blindly to execute policies which they cannot reconcile with their self-respect is very seriously to misconceive our purpose. Let me explain at once why that is impossible. Progress to further constitutional growth in India is to come not by a process of drift; not by the English Departments or Governments throwing up the sponge out of weariness or a sense that they are fighting a losing game; not by our taking back our hand from the plough; but by the response made by Indians to the great opportunity now offered them—by the measured verdict of the highest outside impartial authority upon their performance. It is recognised at the present moment that the time is not ripe for Indians to take over the entire management of the country. Every moderate and thoughtful Indian admits that truth himself. And government, believe me, is not the simple thing it may sometimes seem. The help of the services, trained, efficient, impartial, with their high standards of duty, of character, of the public interest, is absolutely essential if this vast experiment is to succeed. We cannot afford and we do not mean to lose them until India acquires, what she has not got at present, something approximately as good to put in their place. That is my second proposition.

" The Secretary of State and I have declared our intention to protect the services in the defence of their rights and the discharge of their duties. I see that apprehensions have been aroused by the general character of this phraseology. Let me now, speaking for myself and my Government, endeavour to give precision to the undertaking. In the first place as regards their pay and pensions. I propose that the pay, pensions, leave and conditions of service generally of the services recruited from England shall be guaranteed at least by statutory orders of the Secretary of State, which no authority in India will have power to disregard or vary. My idea is that the all-India services are to be retained, as in a mould cast by Parliament and the Secretary of State, as an exemplar to all the services drawn exclusively from India. In this respect, therefore, I see no cause for disquiet.

"I pass to a more difficult question, and one which I know is causing more doubt than any mere questions of money—the position of the services who are under Indian ministers. Now I am not going to recite the series of ways in which I conceive it possible that difficulty may arise. I ask you to take it from me that my Government and I have considered this field very anxiously and have had vividly before our minds the sort of troubles that may arise over postings or promotion, or policy or professional questions or discipline. How then can these potential difficulties be mitigated? In the first place, we hope to get as ministers responsible men who will realize how greatly the services can help them. There is more in this than a pious hope. We may look to what has happened elsewhere. It has often been the case that men going in fresh to office, full of prejudice against the public services, have found them their best ally and protector against the critics which every administrator encounters, and have ended by gaining the full confidence of the service and giving the service theirs. Secondly, we do not intend to leave the handling of the services wholly to the minister. We propose to instruct the Governor, in a published instrument, that we lay on him a personal responsibility for securing the welfare of the services. He will disallow proposals that aim or tend towards their disintegration. The head of every department under ministers will have access to the Governor. He will be in a position to represent difficulties to him before they become acute: and it will be for the Governor to deal with them by influence and persuasion, and finally by tactful exercise of authority. Lastly, we propose to secure all existing rights of appeal to the Government of India and the Secretary of State whenever an officer is prejudicially affected as regards emoluments or pension by a minister's order.

"How these arrangements will work, you and I can only leave it to experience to show. But I think that the services will accept them as an earnest attempt to fulfil the pledges which we have given. It may be that even more provisions will be required. But about those I will say nothing at present, because I am anxious to give no countenance to the idea that the services will find their position made impossible. I will merely add that the Government of India will always regard this question of the fair treatment of the services as one of the cardinal tests by which our great experiment will be judged.

"Let me now turn to the very important matter of British commercial interests in this country. It would distress me profoundly if I thought that we could with justice be accused of under-rating either the colossal financial interests at stake, or the enormous part which British non-official energy, character and brains have played in the task of making India what she is. For myself I regarded these facts as self-evident and thought that, so far as it was necessary to reassure this important community, we had in our Report made our attitude towards them quite clear. However, the complaint has been made that we have dealt too summarily with the subject. So let me emphasise our intentions. I have not found by the way in the papers of a year ago, or the criticisms just received, any reasoned statement of the ways in which it is supposed that British trade interests may be jeopardised by the changes which we have in view. I note, however, that in the joint address which some representatives of European commerce in Calcutta signed last year, reference was made to the risk of injury by 'predatory or regulative legislation' or the neglect of transportation and other facilities; and I see that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce appear to have chiefly in mind proposals for provincial taxation likely to prejudice commerce or industry.

"Now let me explain the position as I see it. The legislation on which British commerce in the main depends is mainly all-India in character. Some of it is embodied in the great commercial codes; some of it deals with matters of peculiar interest to industry like railways, factories, petroleum, explosives or mines. Now inasmuch as these will remain with the Government of India, who will, as I have laid down more than once, retain indisputable authority, there is surely no reasonable ground for apprehension. Commerce can make its voice heard just as effectively as heretofore. It may be said however that, in the future, Provincial Councils will exercise more freely the power of amending all-India Acts. But that they can only do with the previous sanction of the Governor General. In any case there is the safeguard of the triple veto of the Governor, the Governor General and the Crown; and this applies to all provincial legislation.

"It seems to me indeed that the control of the matters of peculiar interest to European commerce is to a great extent concentrated in the hands of the Government of India. I am thinking of the tariff and the currency; of banking, railways, shipping, posts and telegraphs. In these respects no existing measure of security is being diminished, and therefore apprehension is surely groundless

"But evidently it is in the minds of some people that in the provincial sphere it will be possible injuriously to affect the commercial community. Say, for instance, by special interests, being singled out to bear the burden of provincial taxation or by rival interests being artificially stimulated by bounties. What protection will there be in such cases? Well, the Secretary of State and I have pledged ourselves in paragraph 344 to reserve to Government power to protect any industry from prejudiced attack or privileged competition. To speak for myself, I believe this can be secured by embodying this undertaking in the instrument of instructions given to the Governor on appointment, wherein he will be informed that His Majesty's Government lay on him a responsibility for seeing that the pledge is made good With such a public document in his hands the Governor with the Government of India and Secretary of State behind him, would be in a very strong position to resist all proposals of his ministers which appeared to him to be acts of hostility to British commerce. There will moreover be representatives of that interest sitting in the provincial chamber; and I cannot do them the injustice of supposing that they will fail to bring any just grievance effectively to the Governor's notice, or if need be to remind him of his responsibility.

"Now, gentlemen, I shall not detain you much longer. The conditions under which we meet to-day are very different from those to which we have been accustomed during the past four years, for the hopes of victory—deferred nay long deferred—have now been abundantly realised, and to-day we can hold high our heads feeling, I trust, each one of us in his own way, that we have shared in the great fight for justice and truth, and that we are proud citizens of a powerful and victorious Empire

"For those who seek for proof of what the British Empire has done in this great and fateful chapter of the world's history, is not the tribute of Marshal Foch sufficient?

'The hammer blows of the British Armies were the decisive factors in the final crushing defeat of the enemy.'

"Again, is not the humiliating surrender in British waters of the German Navy a powerful—indeed almost incredible—testimony of what had gone before, of what British valour and endurance had achieved by unrelenting effort on the sea?

"On India's part in the Empire's achievement I have dwelt time and again. There is no need to tell over again what all the world knows—how India's loyalty enabled us at once to send our troops far from India's shores; how India's effort increased and developed till the supply of men, material and munitions reached a figure worthy of the stake which India had in the war; and how in the last critical stages Indian troops played a decisive part in the glorious victories won in the Eastern campaign under General Allenby.

"There are supreme moments in the life of communities as well as of men when all that is petty and sordid sinks into insignificance, when differences and animosities fade in the light of some deep emotion and we see revealed the feelings that lie deep and the things that matter. Such a moment, I think, came to us here in India when the news was celebrated throughout the length and breadth of the land that the Empire had come through its long ordeal by battle, still standing four square, its purpose unimpaired, its credit untarnished, its citizens still free. The victory of the Sarkar was every man's victory. We met upon a common platform of rejoicing, and there was revealed to us a deep and essential comradeship which in commonplace times of domestic stress and difficulty I trust we shall not forget.

"Who will say that there were not days during that long struggle when the outlook was dark and threatening, and we knew that it was only the dogged tenacity of the British character which stood between the civilised world and the domination of brute force? The German High Command could point with arrogance to their much boasted war map, but they had no chart of British character. There was a moral situation not susceptible of German appreciation. And to that great reserve of moral strength which made our Empire invincible, India contributed her full measure.

"It would be idle to suppose that our victory, complete and overwhelming as it is, carries us straight into a peaceful harbour of ease and content. The tempest which threatened us has abated, but the troubled sea is still a danger to all but the stoutest craft. The nations who have won the war are called upon to display qualities as fine as those which carried them through those long years to final victory. We have shown courage and tenacity in war: we must show sanity and sobriety in peace

"The difficulties engendered by the war will heavily tax our patience for many months to come Trade, supplies, prices, wages, currency, labour, transport—wherever we turn in the domestic field—there are hardships which must still be borne, difficulties which must still be overcome. In attempting to solve these problems our hands are tied in every direction, and on behalf of my Government I must ask for still more of that same patience which has been so liberally extended to us during the war.

"In the difficult days that lie ahead the established forces of law and order—the forces to which the people are from childhood accustomed—need all the support that comes from the co-operation of the great body of sober-minded citizens.

"Do not let it be supposed for one moment that I fear that this country lies in any danger of falling a victim to those disruptive forces best suggested by the name Bolshevism. The poison of that doctrine flows from failure, and I am convinced that those nations who have drunk the tonic of success with the consciousness of duty done are immune from its virus.

"Nor would I have you suppose that I have anxieties in regard to the Indian masses, for each year I have spent here has strengthened my confidence in the solid good sense of India as a whole. The bulk of the Indian masses may live their lives remote from affairs, lacking in education, still wanting in most of the paraphernalia of progress. They may perhaps in some sense be voiceless masses. But the good sense of India springs from a deep political instinct, from lessons learnt in a harsh school perhaps, learnt in ill-rewarded toil, in pestilence and famine and under the drums and tramplings of many a stern conqueror, but still learnt and not to be easily unlearnt. In that instinct lies a solid foundation for our public life. There lies our ultimate source of strength. The good sense of India has been tried in this great war as never before and it has not been found wanting. The test, as I have said, is not yet over; but, speaking for myself, I look forward confidently to the days ahead, fully assured that, when the dust of these days has subsided, a greater India will emerge—greater in resources, greater in self-help, great as ever in her loyalty to the King-Emperor."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

11-58 A.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked:—

Remova limitati imposed upon rai way tra

1. "Will Government state by what time they will be in a position to remove the various limitations imposed upon railway traffic during the war?"

[Sir Arthur Anderson; Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul; Sir James Meston; Mr. A. H. Ley.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied:—

"I wish that I could give the Hon'ble Member the date for which he asks. I can only assure him that the Railway Board are as anxious as he can be to see all restrictions removed and will spare no pains to this end."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked:—

Encashment of currency notes.

2. "(a) Is it a fact that currency notes are sold or exchanged at heavy rates of discount, and that this is causing severe hardship to the poor agricultural classes living in the interior of the country, and serious dislocation of business in commercial circles?

(b) Has it been brought to the notice of Government that the non-acceptance or acceptance only to a limited extent of currency notes for encashment at the Government treasuries has aggravated the difficulties of the general public?

(c) Is it a fact that in spite of the action so far taken by Government with a view to remove this complaint the evil has not yet ceased to exist? If so, will Government state what further action they propose to take in the matter?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied:—

"Currency notes are believed to be at a discount in most districts and in many places this discount probably causes hardship to persons of small incomes who have a legitimate need to change notes. This matter was raised by the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha in a question asked at the last September Session of the Council, and the Hon'ble Member's attention is invited to the reply given by Sir William Meyer on the 4th September last. The present position is substantially the same as when that reply was given. The demand for rupees continues unabated, and it is only by working the mints to their utmost capacity that our liability for the encashment of notes at the seven Currency offices is being met. Actually over 8 crores of rupees were coined at the mints in the month of December alone. It is expected that the value of the silver purchased by Government during the current year will be approximately 60 crores of rupees. From these figures I hope that the Hon'ble Member will appreciate that we are doing all that is humanly possible to meet the insatiable appetite of the country for coin. What, if any, further action can be taken is a matter now engaging our anxious attention."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked:—

Relaxation of the India Office control of finance.

3. "Are proposals for the relaxation of the India Office control in the matter of finance under the consideration of the Government of India? If so, will the non-official members of this Council be consulted before any final decision is arrived at by Government?"

The Hon'ble Sir James Meston replied:—

"The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As the Legislative Council has already had an opportunity of expressing its views upon the Reforms proposals generally, the Government of India do not propose to consult it further on the particular point mentioned by the Hon'ble Member."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked:—

The Indian Industrial Commission.

4. "What action has been taken or is intended to be taken by the Government of India for the purpose of giving early effect to the various recommendations made by the Industrial Commission?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied:—

"This question was dealt with by His Excellency the Viceroy in his opening speech to the Council. The Government of India have lost no tim in considering the Report of the Industrial Commission, and have already consulted Local Governments on the proposals made by the Commission. They are also in communication with the Secretary of State on the subject. I am sure that the Hon'ble Member will understand that I am not in a position to make a more definite statement at the present time, but I can assure him that the matter is not being allowed to sleep."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

5. " (a) Is it a fact that the Reception Committee of the Indian National Congress, Delhi, had to abandon the Presidential procession? If so, will Government state the circumstances which led the Reception Committee to adopt this course? Abandonment of the Presidential procession at Delhi.

(b) Are Government aware that the action taken by the local authorities in respect of the proposed Presidential procession exasperated the Indian educated public, and if so, do Government propose to take any action in the matter?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" (a) The Government of India have been informed that the proposed procession of the President of the Indian National Congress on his arrival in Delhi on the 25th December, was abandoned because the local Reception Committee declared themselves unable to accept the route which the District Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police, in the exercise of the responsibility vested in them by sections 30 to 33 of the Police Act, 1861, were prepared to license.

(b) Government are aware that some sections of Indian educated opinion have expressed dissatisfaction with the orders passed by the local authorities in the matter, but they are informed that other sections of the community hold the view that the District Magistrate acted rightly and properly in preferring a route on which there was no reasonable apprehension of a disturbance during the progress of the procession, to the route proposed by the Reception Committee which did not fulfil this condition. Government do not propose to take any action in the matter."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul asked :—

6. " (a) Has a grain census been taken in all or any of the provinces in British India from the owners or possessors of different kinds of foodstuffs? If so, in what provinces and with what result? Food-grains.

(b) If the answer to the first part of (a) be in the affirmative, will Government please lay upon the table a statement compiled up to date for the whole of British India giving figures for each province, district by district, showing the surplus quantity of food-grains available in the country for the use of the people and the period for which it is so available?

(c) Do Government propose to institute a thorough and careful inquiry as to the extent of food-stuffs grown in the country and the average balance remaining unexported for the use of the people?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

" At a Conference which was held at Delhi on the 15th October, 1918, with Directors of Civil Supplies, a Resolution was passed to the effect that it was imperative to obtain as exact an estimate as possible of stocks then existing and of the actual outturn of the Kharif harvest in each district. This Resolution was passed in view of the necessity of conserving the food-grains supplies of India to enable her to meet her military obligations and commitments, as also in the interests of the country. Accordingly, Local Governments were addressed towards the end of October, and they were asked to obtain from District officers as accurate an estimate as possible of the stocks in their charges. The detailed procedure to be adopted in obtaining this estimate was left to the Local Governments, but certain lines were indicated by the Government of India who pointed out, however, that in their opinion any inquisitorial proceedings or house-to-house examination of stocks should be avoided, and Local Governments were advised to institute instead local inquiries into the proportion borne by the stocks then in existence to stocks in the corresponding months of a normal year

2 Further, Local Governments were also asked to cause a further estimate to be made early in January on the same lines.

3. Replies have now been received from a number of Local Governments, but these state that it has not been possible to obtain any estimate which can be regarded as even tolerably accurate The District officers are insistent that no confident opinion can be based on the results of the inquiries instituted by them. It is not, therefore, proposed to place on the table the figures which have been received. Moreover, they are not complete, inasmuch as returns have not been furnished by certain important provinces

4. The Government of India do not propose to cause any further inquiries to be made on the above lines as to the stocks available in the country. Since the Delhi Conference was held the situation has been entirely altered by reason of the cessation of hostilities and the consequent removal of the obligation which India had previously undertaken of making available for the benefit of the Allies her exportable surplus of foodstuffs. On the contrary His Majesty's Government have now agreed to the maintenance of the prohibition on the export of wheat and have surrendered their previous demand for a portion of the exportable surplus of rice from Burma, and have further made available for consumption in India a portion of the stocks which they hold of Australian wheat, while, on their part, the Government of India have taken steps, by limiting the export of rice, jowar and bajra, to conserve for the needs of the Indian consumer supplies available in the country."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Dining cars and refreshment stalls for Indian travellers.

7. " (a) Are dining cars provided for Indian travellers on Indian Railways? If so, how long have they been in existence and on what lines? Do Government propose to consider the desirability of extending the system to other lines, at least for experiment?

(b) Are there refreshment rooms on railway lines for Hindu and Muhammadan travellers like those for travellers in European style?

(c) Is it a fact that there are complaints by the public of the want of refreshment rooms and stalls in railway stations for the use of Hindu and Muhammadan travellers?

(d) Do Government intend to sanction such rooms and stalls at important stations on all lines? "

The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Anderson replied :—

" (a) Refreshment cars for Indian travellers were running on the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway, from prior to 1911 and on the North-Western Railway from 1913 up to 1917, when owing to the reduction in the passenger train services, necessitated by conditions arising out of the war, they had to be withdrawn.

Other railways, for example, the Bengal-Nagpur, Bombay Baroda and Central India and East Indian Railways tried the experiment of running refreshment cars for Indians, but were obliged to withdraw the cars as it was found that they were not sufficiently utilised to justify their continuance.

(b) Refreshment rooms for Hindu and Muhammadan travellers are provided at important stations and junctions where needed on most railways. This matter has been receiving a great deal of attention in recent years.

(c) Complaints have been received but these have not been numerous. They have received careful consideration by the Railway administrations concerned.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Sir Arthur Anderson; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir William Vincent.]

(d) The provision of such rooms is within the competence of the railways concerned, and does not require Government sanction."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Indian representation on the Peace Conference.

8. " (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to resolutions of public bodies in India strongly urging the delegation of non-official Indian representatives to the Peace Conference to be nominated from a panel prepared by the Indian National Congress and the All-India Moslem League ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the desirability of recommending to His Majesty's Government the acceptance of this suggestion ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" The attention of Government has been drawn to resolutions of the character mentioned. The Government of India do not propose to recommend to His Majesty's Government acceptance of the suggestions contained in them."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Memorial to Lord Willingdon.

9. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the Associated Press telegram, dated Bombay, the 11th December, 1918, reporting the proceedings of a public meeting held in the Town Hall of Bombay the same day, with the object of raising a memorial to Lord Willingdon ?

(b) Has Government seen any correspondence that passed between the Sheriff of Bombay and a number of the citizens of Bombay headed by the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah questioning the legality of the action of the Sheriff in calling the meeting ?

(c) Is there a rule prohibiting memorials, addresses and presents to retiring officials ? If so, do Government propose to consider the question of extending the rule to Provincial Governors ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" (a) and (b) The answers are in the affirmative.

(c) A Government servant may not, without the previous sanction of the local Government, receive any complimentary or valedictory address, accept any testimonial presented to him, or attend any public meeting or entertainment held in his honour; but the head of a Government may receive an address.

No change in the rules is contemplated."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Grant of passports to members of the Congress and other deputations.

10. " Has Government considered the desirability of issuing passports without any further delay to the members of the Indian National Congress, the All-India Moslem League, and the Home Rule League deputations to England ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" Orders removing the embargo on the issue of passports to delegates of the Indian National Congress and of other bodies desiring to proceed to England in connection with the Reforms proposals were issued at the end of December last."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Prohibition against certain Newspapers entering England.

11. " (a) Is it a fact that the following newspapers published in India are not allowed to be circulated in England, namely, the "Hindu," "New India," the "Bombay Chronicle" and the "Amrita Bazar Patrika," while Anglo-Indian papers and the "Bengalee" and the "Leader" are allowed free entry there ? "

[Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Sir William Vincent; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether the British Government prohibited the entry of the said papers into England of their own motion or at the instance of the Government of India or of any local Government?

(c) Is Government in a position to state the grounds on which such action has been taken?

(d) Is there any other instance where papers published outside England have been prohibited entry there?

(e) Will Government consider the propriety of moving the British Government to remove the said prohibition?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied:—

"(a) The export of newspapers from India to any destination was a matter for the discretion of the Indian censorship, which, in the exercise of that discretion, prevented the export of certain newspapers, published in India, to any destination, including the United Kingdom. Such prevention was, in each case, made after perusal of each newspaper and consideration of its contents by the censors, who were guided by the actual contents of each issue of each paper and not, in any case, by the general political tone of any particular paper. It is a fact that export of "New India", the "Bombay Chronicle", the "Hindu" and the "Amrita Bazar Patrika" was frequently, though not invariably, prevented by the Indian censorship.

(b) There was no actual prohibition at all. Whatever prevention of export from India existed was due to the Indian censorship, acting on the discretion vested in it.

(c) The Indian censorship was a military institution and took the action stated on purely military grounds, in view of the fact that the Home Rule agitation in India was being exploited in Germany for purposes of enemy propaganda, and there was every reason to believe that the newspapers supporting this agitation, from which copious excerpts appeared in the German propaganda, reached enemy territory, in many cases through the United Kingdom.

(d) There were instances in which newspapers published outside England were prevented from entering the United Kingdom. It is believed that this prevention was due to action by the British censorship and not to actual prohibition by His Majesty's Government.

(e) The censorship in India of the United Kingdom mails ceased on December 19th, 1918, since which date there has been no interference by the Indian censorship with the export of newspapers from India to England."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

Delay in delivery of cables to "New India."

12. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to complaints in "New India" that telegrams to that paper are needlessly delayed in delivery and that, as a specific instance, a cable sent by its London correspondent on the 29th November and received at the Madras Government Telegraph Office on the 30th November was not delivered till 3-40 P.M. on the 4th December, though a similar cable to the "Bombay Chronicle" was delivered to and published in that paper on the 30th November?

(b) Are the above allegations true? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for this differential treatment?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied:—

"The attention of Government has already been drawn to this matter. The cable in question was despatched from London on the 24th and not on the 29th November and the copy intended for the "Bombay Chronicle" was passed by the local censor without reference to higher authority. The copy for "New India" was detained by the Madras censor who referred it for the orders of higher authority, but the telegram which was despatched by the Madras censor was lost in transmission and this was not discovered until he had telegraphed again asking for orders. A repetition of the missing telegram was then obtained and orders were issued at once for the delivery of the telegram intended for "New India". Thus the delay in its delivery was mainly due to the accidental loss in transmission of the Madras censor's original telegram. The Hon'ble Member will, therefore, see that no differential treatment in respect of the issue of the telegram in question was intended."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya asked :—

13. "Will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, have been taken to organise Provincial Departments of Industries on the lines recommended by the Indian Industrial Commission?" Organisation of Provincial Department of Industries.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

"As the Hon'ble Member will be aware from His Excellency the Viceroy's opening speech to the Council, Local Governments have been consulted on the proposals made by the Indian Industrial Commission. I have no information yet to show what steps Local Governments propose to organise Provincial Departments of Industries or reorganise those already existing, on the lines recommended by the Commission. The Local Governments will naturally require a little time for the consideration of the proposals in the Report, but, in order that this important question may be dealt with as rapidly as possible, the Government of India have placed an officer on special duty who is now visiting the various Local Governments in order to consult with them and collect their views on the subject."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya asked :—

14. "Has the recommendation of the Indian Industrial Commission that industries should be placed in separate charge of a member of the Governor General's Executive Council been approved by the Secretary of State for India, and, if so, when is the appointment of such member likely to be made?" Placing of industries under the separate charge of a member of the Executive Council.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

"I am unable to add anything to the answer already given to the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Bishan Dutt Shukul regarding the report of the Indian Industrial Commission. The Hon'ble Member can, I venture to think, hardly expect that an immediate decision should be arrived at on the important recommendations made in such a long and elaborate Report. Copies of the Report were sent to the Secretary of State by the first mail after signature by the Commissioners, but they did not reach England until about the middle of December."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

15. "Will Government be pleased to state— Consumption of food-grains in India.

(a) What quantities of food-stuffs, wheat, rice, chollam, ragi, barley, maize, cumbu and oil-seeds are normally consumed in India per year;

(b) What the estimate of the stocks expected to be available for consumption during the year 1919 is;

(c) What steps are proposed to be taken to supply the deficiencies, if any?"

The Hon'ble Sir Claude Hill replied :—

"(a) Estimates of yield are available only in respect of certain crops and not in respect of all crops. A rough estimate of consumption could be made by deducting the exports from the estimated yield, but, in the absence of full information, the Government of India have not attempted to frame such an estimate, which would, by reasons of its incompleteness, be of little value, and might be seriously misleading.

(b) and (c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul in reply to question No. 6."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Military training of members of the I. D. F. at Trichinopoly.

16. "Is it a fact that the young men who were undergoing military training in the Indian Defence Force at Trichinopoly have been dismissed before the completion of their course? If so, will Government afford facilities for the completion of their training?"

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"In consideration of the useful service rendered by the Indian Defence Force generally, instructions were issued that for the remainder of the training year no further compulsory training should be demanded beyond the completion of musketry courses, and further, that attendance at camp should be voluntary. In pursuance of this decision the compulsory training of the Indian Branch of the Indian Defence Force (Non-University) was also suspended.

Orders have been issued to General Officers Commanding Divisions that there is no objection to the continuance of training, provided that attendance at such training is voluntary."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel asked :—

The Indian Industrial Commission.

17. "What steps do Government contemplate taking to put into practice the recommendations of the Indian Industrial Commission?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. H. Ley replied :—

"I cannot add anything at present to the answer I have already given to a similar question by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Bishan Dutt Shukul. I shall be very glad, if the Hon'ble Member so wishes, to send him a copy."

INDUSTRIAL COMPULSION BILL.

12-18 P.M. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief :—"My Lord, I beg to move for leave to withdraw the Bill to provide that certain persons liable to military service under the Indian Defence Force Act, 1917, should be liable to perform war work, which was introduced in Council on the 26th September, 1918"

The Bill was by leave withdrawn.

CRIMINAL LAW (EMERGENCY POWERS) BILL.

12-19 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"My Lord, may I ask your Excellency's permission to take up item No. 5 on the List of Business before item No. 2, as Item No. 5 deals with the more important of the two Bills?"

His Excellency the President :—"Certainly."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"My Lord, my task in explaining the reasons for introducing this Bill has been considerably lightened by the discussion on the Resolution brought by the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde last Session and I will endeavour to avoid repeating to-day what I then said. At the same time it will be my duty to place before the Council salient facts connected with this measure.

"As the Council are aware for some time before the war the Government of India were faced with the difficulty of dealing with a number of revolutionary conspiracies or rather with one revolutionary conspiracy of which there were several sub-divisions. The intention of these conspiracies was by dacoity, murder and other crimes of violence to promote a rising against the British Government and to render the administration of this country impossible. Owing to lack of any effective measures for dealing with this conspiracy, the movement gained considerable strength, and either before the war or shortly after the inception of the war, the difficulty of the situation was complicated because it received material assistance from the King's enemies. It attained indeed such serious proportions that it was really subversive of all good government in parts of this country.

"It was impossible to cope with this movement under the normal law, and if Hon'ble Members will read the Report of the Rowlatt Committee, upon which the present legislation is based, they will find confirmation of this not only in the findings of the authors of the Report, but also in the figures which they cite. It will be seen that from 1906 up to the date of the Report there were no less than 311 offences and attempts at offences connected with this revolutionary movement, in which 1,038 persons were known to be implicated. Out of that number, 64 only were convicted. In 1915, the Defence of India Act was passed, mainly in connection with certain violent outbreaks of crime in the Punjab. It was not, however, used to any great extent in Bengal though it may have been used to a small extent there. The result was that the revolutionary movement gained further strength, and in 1915 and 1916 there were 64 outrages including 14 murders, 8 of the murdered people being policemen. The Act was then enforced. I think that the specific reason for enforcing it was particularly the murder of Deputy Superintendent Basanta Chatterji. I am not positive on the point as I speak from memory. The result was that the outrages were at once reduced and from January 1917 to February 1918, I believe the total number was 10. I think I am right in saying also that during the last quarter of 1918 there were no revolutionary outrages at all. The obvious conclusion from this is that the measures taken by the Bengal Government (I am citing the Bengal Government because the movement was particularly prevalent there and illustrates the position) have been effective. The Council will see indeed that the Bengal Government has been singularly successful in dealing in this way with revolutionary crime; the success of these efforts may also further be gauged from letters which revolutionaries have themselves written Here is one :—

'Armed rising was imminent in other provinces. We could not lag behind. Government got the scent and was on the alert. Some of our best men were lost. Unfortunately at last we had to drop the idea of an immediate rising. The local organisations are still intact and can be developed if required.'

"In another letter which I have here, one of these revolutionaries says :—

'The condition here beggars all description. Trusted friends can no longer be trusted with secrets. No one wants to see us. The guardians hate us more than the enemies. (I am not surprised at that.) The students are anxious to avoid us. Those who were eager to talk to us now avoid us.'

"I cite these letters and figures to show that the movement was effectively scotched by the Government under the powers conferred on it by the Defence of India Act. I am glad also to say that the Bengal Government have at once taken advantage of the situation to release a very large number of men whom they had under restriction. A recent report of a debate in the Bengal Council indicates that out of 1,062 detenues 677 have already been released on guarantee. Of the rest, 885 are subject to restrictions of domicile only, 125 being domiciled in their own homes.

[Sir William Vincent.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

" Well, my Lord, during the progress of these operations, the Rowlatt Report, as it is commonly called, was published. In it certain recommendations were made for legislation to enable the Government of India effectively to cope with the disorder. The position as it appeared to the Government of India was this. We had been unable effectively to cope with this movement under the normal law. We had been foiled in all our efforts. We then took restrictive measures, and we have been, or really the Local Government has been, singularly successful in dealing with it. I think if you read the Report the vital propositions are that under pre-war conditions the machinery of law and order was unfitted to cope with lawlessness of a particular type ; that the coming of the war with its emergency legislation really saved the peace of India by providing machinery which could deal with this lawlessness ; and that it is unsafe for us now to revert to the previous condition of affairs, in which these anarchical forces were allowed unrestricted license to prosecute their designs. It is on the basis of this Report that we have undertaken this legislation. But before I explain exactly what the details of the Bill are, I think I ought to make one point quite clear, and that is, that this Bill is in no sense aimed at political movements properly so called. It is definitely and distinctly intended and framed to cope with seditious crime, and it differs very materially also in its scope from the Defence of India Act. It is not, if I may say so, nearly as wide as that Act ; and, so far as I am able to interpret it, it cannot be used against any activities other than seditious activities, even though they may endanger or tend to endanger the public safety. I think it is necessary to emphasise this fact, because there seems to be in some quarters a misapprehension on the point.

"The Bill itself is divided into five parts. The first part provides for the speedy trial of offences. It can only be used or brought into operation when the Governor General in Council is satisfied that scheduled offences are prevalent in the whole or any part of British India, and that it is expedient to provide for their speedy trial. Put very shortly, the part enables such offences to be tried by a strong Court consisting of three High Court Judges expeditiously without commitment and with no right of appeal. The first part also makes provision for trials being held in case of need in the locality or near the locality where the offence was committed, and also for trials in camera. Another point of importance in this part of the Bill is contained in clause 17, which allows the statements of persons not examined as witnesses to be used in evidence in certain circumstances We know that witnesses have, after their statements have been recorded, been murdered and we seek to remove at least the temptation to murder these witnesses and to preserve their testimony. Another point of great importance in this part of the Bill is that we now propose to allow accused persons to give evidence on their own behalf. They are not forced to do so. They may do so or not as they like, so that those who are innocent may have full opportunity for clearing themselves. This last provision of the Bill is in accordance, I believe, exactly with the law which prevails in England.

" Part II of the Bill deals with preventive measures and with Part III is probably the part which will attract more attention. It can only be brought into operation if the Governor General in Council is satisfied that movements which are in his opinion likely to lead to the commission of offences against the State are being extensively promoted. Now if the Members of this Council will look at the Report itself, they will see that it is admitted that punitive measures alone can be of little effect in the repression of this sedition ; and it is for that reason that they have recommended these preventive measures. The powers of the Local Government where this part is brought into operation can be exercised only in respect of persons reasonably believed to be or to have been actively concerned in such area in any movement of the nature referred to in section 20, that is, a movement likely to lead to the commission of offences against the State. In such cases the Local Government may either order the person so concerned to furnish security or to notify his residence, or to reside in a particular area or to abstain from any act specified or finally to report himself to the police. In order to ensure that the powers of Government are not exercised without reason, the Bill provides for a safeguard in the constitution of an investigating authority which is to examine the material upon which orders against any person are framed. This investigating authority is to include one judicial officer and one non-official Indian. Further, in order that the interests of any person subjected to an order may be adequately protected, the Bill provides for the constitution of Visiting Committees to see to the welfare of such persons.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Sir William Vincent.]

"Part III is more drastic. It can, however, only come into operation when the Governor General in Council is satisfied that scheduled offences have been or are being committed to such an extent as to endanger the public safety. In such circumstances, the Local Government, where there is reasonable ground for believing that a person has been concerned in a scheduled offence, may direct the arrest of such person, his confinement in such place and under such conditions as may be prescribed. There are again the same safeguards as under Part II for an investigating authority and for a Visiting Committee. The period of orders under Parts II and III I ought to have explained is limited to one year in the first instance and to three years in all.

"Part IV applies the provisions of Part III automatically to persons known to have been concerned in revolutionary crime at present and who are under restriction under the Defence of India Act by reason of that connection.

"I do not think that at present there is anything in Part V to which I need draw attention. It is mainly ancillary and is a matter in great measure, I think, for Select Committee. But if there is any point on which Hon'ble Members seek for information I will do my best to furnish it.

"Well, my Lord, I have now explained the provisions of this Bill, and it remains for me to say that the Government have not undertaken this legislation lightly or without anxious consideration. We have no desire to restrict the liberty of persons further than a compelling sense of duty forces us to do. At the same time we are responsible for the public peace in this country, and it is our duty to take such measures as may be necessary to secure that. No other remedy has been suggested in regard to this form of crime as yet for attaining that object. If, however, any effective remedy is proposed the Government of India will be only too glad to consider it. There seems, however, to me to be some misunderstanding as to the nature of the disruptive forces of this anarchism. There are those apparently who look upon these men as innocent patriots, guilty of nothing save an excess of possibly mistaken zeal. My Lord, I ask the Council to get rid of this delusion. These men are not patriots; they are really enemies of civilisation, they are enemies of progress and enemies of any form of organised government, whether European or Indian. It may be suggested, as it has been suggested before, that all their activities will be reduced by the introduction of the Reforms Scheme. My Lord, I should like to say that these men are as much opposed to the Reform Scheme as to anything else. During Mr. Montagu's visit last year, I myself saw a circular which was addressed to a prominent citizen in Calcutta where it was openly stated that these men were not concerned with Mr. Montagu's coming or going, and that their object was first and last to spread terror and make the Government impossible. My Lord, I think if these facts were more fully realised, we should hear less of that veiled sympathy with desperate men which really encourages them to further efforts and hinders the work of many who have the progress of this country at heart; and I suggest that it is the duty of all sober-minded men to combat this dangerous confusion of crime with patriotism, remembering what the effect of any such encouragement is. The Bill which I now seek to introduce is not aimed at patriots; it is aimed at criminals; it is not aimed at the suppression of politics at all; it is aimed rather at the purification of politics. What we seek to do is to prevent anarchy and disorder, and I think that many here will realise the importance at this juncture of combating these forces of disorder so rampant in many parts of the world when they consider the effect of anarchy both in Russia and in other countries. My Lord, if ever there was a time when it was necessary to check revolutionary and anarchical tendencies, I think it may be safely said that it is the present.

[Sir William Vincent; Mr. V. J. Patel.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

"My Lord, at the same time, if I may say so, I realise very acutely the difficulties in which Hon'ble Members in this Council are placed. I realise their reluctance to accept a repressive measure which is frankly a repressive law aimed at the suppression of a revolutionary movement. I realise their regret that any such measure should be necessary and their constitutional dislike of any legislation which interferes with the liberty of the subject. Government is exactly in a similar position. We also recognize the constitutional objections to these interferences with liberty, but we realise the danger which has to be combated, and for that reason we are forced, though with the greatest reluctance and only after anxious consideration, to introduce this present Bill. We ask the Members of this Council to face the facts in this matter courageously and honestly.

"If the findings of the Rowlatt Committee are accepted, and I submit that they must be accepted by every reasonable man, there is no getting out of that, that is to say the facts apart from the recommendations, then is it not essential that Government should be vested with some reasonable machinery to deal with this evil? And is it not the duty of the Members of this Council to assist Government in this matter? I ask the Council very earnestly to realise their own responsibility in this matter. There are many here who claim responsible government for the country, some sooner some later; are they willing to accept the responsibility which responsible government inevitably connotes; are they willing to face the hostile criticism which must frequently be expected when action is taken in the public interest? My Lord, there are many who are watching the conduct of this Council on this occasion with great interest; it will be regarded by many as a test of capacity—whether the Members of the Council have the courage to do what is right in assisting the Government in it first duty, the maintenance of the public tranquillity. Will the Members be found wanting, and give a right to anyone to say that their attitude on this question indicates their unfitness for responsible government? I earnestly hope that no such occasion and no such material will be furnished to those who are opposed to political progress in this country.

"My Lord, with these words I commend the bill to the Council. The details, if the motion is carried, will be considered in Select Committee, and the Government is perfectly open to consider such modifications as will not render the machinery ineffective for dealing with the evil which they seek to combat.

"I now introduce the Bill and move that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, the Hon'ble Pandit M. M. Malaviya, the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi, the Hon'ble Mr. Muddiman, the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, the Hon'ble Nawab Saiyad Nawab Ali Chaudhuri, the Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid, the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde, the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea, the Hon'ble Mr. Fagan, the Hon'ble Mr. Patel, the Hon'ble Sir Verney Lovett, the Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay, the Hon'ble Mr. Emerson and myself, with instructions to report on or before the 6th March, 1919."

12-34 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel:—"Your Excellency, I beg to move

'That the consideration of this Bill be deferred till six months have elapsed after the expiry of the term of office of this Legislative Council.'

"In moving this amendment, I must say at the outset that no sensible Indian could be charged with having any the slightest sympathy with anarchists or anarchism. We are all interested, my Lord, in putting down anarchists or anarchism, and as a matter of fact, the interests of the Government and of the people are identical in this respect. The difference however is in the methods, in the ways and means as to how to put down these anarchists and anarchism. In every country, my Lord, revolutionary crime is really the outcome of what I may call political and administrative stagnation; if the political advancement of a country is really very slow and does not keep pace with the times, this sort of crime is bound to raise its head and disturb the peace of the country. What is then the remedy? The remedy, I submit, does not lie in repressive measures, but I am strongly of opinion that the remedy lies in the removal of the standing grievances which bring revolutionary crime

into existence. We are all very glad that the Reforms are coming. The very publication of them has a good deal to do with the creation of a smooth atmosphere to some extent, and I am absolutely certain, my Lord, that when these reforms actually do come, particularly with the modifications suggested by the leaders of public opinion—I mean the main modifications—I have not the slightest doubt in my mind that revolutionary crime will almost disappear. It is said by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent that anarchists are opposed to reforms, they will have nothing to do with Mr. Montagu or the Viceroy or their Reforms Report; that what they want to do is to terrorise the Government and make it impossible. Well, I assume that that is so. But I say that for revolutionary crime to advance a sort of general discontent—I should say an atmosphere of general discontent—is absolutely necessary. But let me assure your Excellency and this Council that as soon as the Reforms are granted, why their very publication has done a great deal, as soon as they are introduced, the general atmosphere of discontent will give place to an atmosphere of contentment, with the result that revolutionary crime will tend to disappear. That is the answer which I give to my Hon'ble friend Sir William Vincent's argument that anarchists do not and will not care for reforms. The amendment which I have proposed before this Council is that the consideration of this Bill should be postponed for some time. At present, as I have already pointed out, circumstances have entirely changed; even the Rowlatt Committee which made the Report did not contemplate that their recommendations should be put into effect in all and under any circumstances. As a matter of fact, in their recommendations regarding legislation to deal with the difficulties that might arise in dealing with the conspiracies, the Committee say :—

'This as expressed appears to us to be applicable to the state of circumstances under which the difficulties referred to were encountered. These difficulties have, however, been circumvented for the time being by special temporary legislation and they have not been in operation at the time of our inquiry. When this legislation, lapses circumstances may have altered and the position may be better or worse. We do not think it is for us to speculate nicely on these matters. We must of course keep in view that the present war will have come to an end, but we cannot say with what result or with what ulterior consequential effects or possibilities of consequential effects upon the situation.'

So the Rowlatt Committee itself did not contemplate that their recommendations should be put into effect under any circumstances. As a matter of fact, the circumstances have altered. Revolutionary crime had ceased to exist at the time when they made their report, and since then cessation has continued. Then, again, after the Rowlatt Report, the Reforms Report has been published, the functions and the Franchise Committees have met in India; they will shortly, as your Excellency pointed out in your opening speech, submit their Report to Parliament, and a Bill of Reforms will also be passed into law. That being so, I personally think that the passage of this measure at this juncture will materially affect the reception of the reforms in India.

"My Lord, I cannot disguise the fact that the whole country from one end to the other is entirely opposed to this measure, and I am absolutely certain, and I shall be very sorry to see it, that the passage of this Bill will stir up, in fact the introduction of it has already stirred up, a tremendous and unprecedented agitation in the country at a time when great changes are in sight. Surely Government intends that the reforms should be given a fair trial, and I am afraid that intention of Government will not be fulfilled if at this juncture this measure is passed. I must say that I am not at all surprised that the Government have thought it proper to introduce this measure at this juncture. It is one of those blunders which a Government not responsible to the people is likely to commit in moments of excitement. What I am, however, surprised at really is that a Bill of this kind should have been brought forward at a time when people really expected the introduction and discussion in this Council of measures which would bring them more liberty, more contentment, measures which really would conduce to the greater well-being of the people in matters political, in matters social, and in matters industrial. At a time like this when the war has ended triumphantly for us, at a time when the Peace Conference is sitting to devise measures for the peace of the world, at a time when we are within sight of great constitutional reforms in India, at a time when one of the Indians is made a Member of the British Cabinet, at such a time instead of bringing forward measures which would really conduce to the well-being of Indians, a measure of this character should have been brought forward. That is a matter which surprises me. I do not at all wish to go into the merits of the measure at the present moment. I say, to say the least of these measures, they are inopportune and they should not have been brought forward at this juncture. There is almost a quietus in the country, and a tremendous agitation such as I fear to contemplate, is looming. I pray and trust this Council will consider the consequences that will result out of the passage of this Bill.

"I may be asked why I want the postponement of the consideration of this measure for the period named in the amendment. My idea is that a measure of this kind should be discussed, if at all, by the Council which would come into existence under the Reforms Scheme. I do not mean to say that this Council is in any way incompetent to deal with this question or will not do justice to it, but I do maintain that so far as this Council is concerned, its very existence is entirely at the mercy of the Executive. You can extend its life or, if you like, you can terminate it. As your Excellency said in your opening speech, by an executive order without even consulting this Council, our existence has been recently extended till the 20th of July, 1920. So in this country the Executive is all powerful, and the Council is so impotent even as regards the question of its existence. In these circumstances, and particularly if the reforms are to be given a fair trial and they are to be well received in this country, I think it is absolutely necessary, particularly when crime is at a standstill, that Government should not press this motion of reference to a Select Committee at this stage, but wait till the new Councils come into existence. As I said, I do not wish to go into the merits of the Bill. It would be sufficient for my purposes to say that we are mightily afraid of it, and we think that all our constitutional agitation for any reforms whatsoever will die if these Bills are passed into law."

12-52 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—" My Lord, I have given notice of an amendment on somewhat similar lines to those of my friend's amendment, and with your Lordship's permission, I may be allowed to make my observations at this stage of the discussion. My Lord, I confess to a sense of regret and disappointment that a Bill of this kind should have been introduced at this moment. I complain of its inopportuneness; I complain of the principles which underlie some of its provisions, and, my Lord, in saying this, I do not express my own personal views, but the considered opinions of those of my friends with whom I am accustomed to act in public life. My Lord, the leaders of the great party to which I belong (a growing and an increasingly influential party) have given this matter their careful consideration, and I am here to lay before this Council our deliberate and matured judgment upon these two Bills. My Lord, it is no use disguising the fact that the Bill has created widespread anxiety, and even alarm, in the public mind of India, and I must say there is abundant justification for this feeling. It is feared that if this Bill be passed, it will cripple our political activities and bring about the stagnation of our public life. My Hon'ble friend has read out some of the provisions of the Bill and as I was listening to them, it struck me that they contained matter which constitutes a peril to the sacred rights of personal liberty which Englishmen value so much; which I am confident this Council cherish dearly; which you, our masters in the great art of constitutional government, have taught the people of India to prize. My Lord, one of the provisions—I think it is section 21—which my friend read out, says that in a notified area the Local Government may declare, after an inquiry, executive in its character and complexion, that a person should abstain from any act. If this provision means anything (I am not a lawyer but a common-sense man accustomed to interpret provisions of the law in my own blunt common-sense fashion), if this means anything, it means that after this executive inquiry, a journalist may be prohibited from following his avocation, that a public man may not be allowed to address public meetings. My Lord, I consider this as a grave menace to public liberty, a serious encroachment upon the rights which have been guaranteed to us and which we prize. If a right of this kind were taken away by a duly constituted court of law, no one would have the slightest objection, but to place such dangerous, illimitable powers in the hands of executive authority, deliberating in secret, discussing in secret, deciding in secret, seems to me to be an infraction of personal rights which I almost shudder to contemplate. My Lord, in making these observations, I desire to guard myself against any misapprehension which they may give rise to. We are as anxious as the Government could possibly be for the maintenance of law and order and for the eradication of anarchical and revolutionary crimes. My Lord, they are pregnant with mischief, they can do us no good; we have witnessed in other countries the horrors which have followed in their train. We have no desire that there should be a repetition of these horrors in our dearly-beloved motherland. We abhor revolution from the bottom of our heart; we are the friends of evolution, and if I could be convinced that this law was necessary, this drastic law was required, I should certainly accept the challenge which was thrown down by my Hon'ble friend the Home Member and support his Bill. But I hope to be able to show in the course of the arguments which I am about to address your Lordship, that there is another way of getting out of the difficulty in which we are at the present moment. I am free to confess that there is, I will not say a party, but a fringe of our population, who support revolutionary ideas, but, my Lord, they are to be counted by hundreds. They are a handful as compared to the myriad millions of our vast population, and are the sins of the few to be visited upon the heads of the countless millions of the people of India? My Lord, my friend the Hon'ble Home Member has admitted that the forces of revolution are now dormant, the Government has got them well under control. Those reports of murders and lootings which we were accustomed to hear are now steadily receding into the dim mist of past history. You have, my Lord, in your armoury a weapon, offensive and defensive, which is amply sufficient for all purposes. The Defence of India Act is there, and it is now in force and will be in force until six months after the conclusion of peace. The Peace Conference has just started its sittings. The peace negotiations are going on from day to day. I take it, my Lord, that on a moderate computation, these negotiations must last at least for three or four months. That brings us down to the month of June.

"The Defence of India Act will be operative six months after the conclusion of peace. That will take us down to the end of the year. Therefore, at least up to the 31st of December, 1919, no such law as the one that you are now proposing to enact is needed. Then, my Lord, there is the power of Ordinances which you have used so freely and so frequently and to such good purpose. You can revive the Defence of India Act by an Ordinance which will continue it till June, 1920. Therefore, my Lord, having regard to the powers with which you are armed, having regard to the powers which the Government of India at present possess, and which can be easily continued, it seems to me that no case has been made out for enacting a law of this kind, at any rate at this stage.

"Nor is this all. You have got in your armoury Regulation III of 1818. It is a part of the permanent law of the land, and you can set it in motion at any time you like. As a matter of fact, I think my Hon'ble friend the Home Member will bear me out when I say that the most dangerous characters have all been interned under Regulation III of 1818.

"Therefore, my Lord, I submit with all deference but with the utmost emphasis that no case has been made out for the enactment of this law at this stage. On the contrary, it seems to me that there are very weighty reasons why you should not proceed with this legislation. By the time that the Defence of India Act expires—by the efflux of time, I will take it on the 31st

[Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

December, 1919, or the 30th of June, 1920—by that time the Reform proposals will have been introduced in Parliament, and I am sure, I feel confident, that they will be embodied in the law of the land. And, my Lord, let us contemplate the situation as it will then be developed. A new atmosphere will have been created surcharged with the spirit of mutual esteem, of mutual confidence, of mutual co-operation between the rulers and the ruled. A new order of things will have been inaugurated, an order of things, I take it, more favourable than what now prevails for the consideration of a contentious measure like this. I ask, therefore, is it necessary, is it wise, to go on with this measure? My Lord, Burke has observed in one of those illuminating passages which abound in his immortal works that in the great task of government conciliation must precede coercion, and that when conciliation fails, then, and then only, must coercion be resorted to. My Lord, I regret to have to say that the Government of India have reversed this order of things. Repression first, conciliation next. In the first place, you place before us this Bill and ask us to pass it into law, and then come the great constitutional reforms. My Lord, furthermore, if there is one truth which should be burnt in upon the souls of the rulers of men it is this, that no measure, be it administrative or legal, can be successfully worked except with the willing concurrence and co-operation of the people. If a measure alienates popular sympathies, sets up the people in arms against you, gives rise to the fiercest agitation, it is doomed, foredoomed to failure. I very much fear that that is the case with the present Bill. The agitation has already commenced; it is growing, and it will grow, day by day. My Lord, I cannot help thinking that by passing these two Bills, or this one Bill, you will be placing a very formidable weapon in the hands of the revolutionaries whom you desire to suppress and in the hands of the reactionaries in England who desire to wreck the reforms. This measure will foster excitement, uneasiness and public discontent, and these are the impulses upon which the revolutionary instinct feeds and from which it derives its sustaining and vitalising influence. The revolutionary will say in his secret leaflets, which he circulates with strenuous persistency, 'All this talk about the Reform proposals is moonshine. It means nothing; it implies nothing. Here you have got this drastic Act symptomatic of the spirit of the administration.' All this may be grotesque, wild exaggeration, but, my Lord, in a state of popular excitement it is bound to appeal to the popular sentiment. And then what will Lord Sydenham and his followers say. Referring to this Act, they will say 'Here the Government of India by the enactment of this law tells you that India is seething with discontent and sedition, and that it is necessary to pass a law of this kind for the purpose of grappling with the situation. Tranquillise India first, and then it will be time enough to talk of Reform proposals. Look at Ireland. What has happened there? Irish discontent, the disturbed condition of Ireland, have indefinitely postponed the prospects of Home Rule.' 'Apply the same principle', Lord Sydenham and his followers will say, 'to India'. What then, my Lord, becomes of our Reform proposals? Your Excellency's Government and the authorities at home have staked their credit and reputation upon the passage of the Reforms Bill through Parliament without any attenuation, without any whittling down. The passage of that Bill will be seriously handicapped by the Bill which the Hon'ble the Home Member desires to enact.

"My Lord, I need not detain the Council any longer. I appeal to your Excellency's Government to reconsider the whole situation and to drop the Bill, or at any rate to postpone it until the Reform proposals have become the law of the land. My Lord, the agitation against the Bill has already commenced. We are receiving telegrams every hour Last night, I was awakened at midnight by a peon with a telegram purporting to be the proceedings of a public meeting protesting against the Bill. I am sure my friends over here are being troubled in the same way every hour of their lives. The agitation has commenced; it will grow. My Lord, we want—certainly an old man like myself wants—peace, freedom from agitation, from conflict and controversy. I therefore appeal to your Excellency's Government with all the emphasis that I can command to save us from being precipitated into the vortex of an agitation which is bound to excite the fiercest passions, which will be a source of embarrassment to your Excellency's Government and will dissipate that atmosphere of peacefulness, of tranquillity, of mutual trust and mutual confidence, which the Reform proposals have helped to create, and which we of the moderate party have tried to deepen, to extend and to promote. I do trust, therefore, that my appeal will evoke a sympathetic response in the heart of my Hon'ble friend the Home Member."

The Council adjourned for lunch till 2-15 P.M.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"May I inquire the dates of the letters which the Hon'ble the Home Member referred to in his speech?" 2-15 P.M.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I am afraid I cannot give the Hon'ble Member the information he requires."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"My Lord, I whole-heartedly associate myself with the remarks of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Patel and the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea. I feel, my Lord, that I will be failing in my duty to your Excellency's Government, that I shall not be mindful of the best interests of my country or the dictates of my own conscience if I do not enter a most emphatic and earnest protest against this Bill. My Lord, this Bill admittedly aims at curtailing the liberty of the subject—the right of speech and action, and some of the provisions have certainly no precedent in the jurisprudence of any other civilised country. It is my bounden duty to bring to your Excellency's notice that the introduction of this Bill has given rise to a widespread belief among the people of this country that they are going to get this as the first instalment of reforms. Surely, the Government cannot be ignorant of the amount of strong feeling that has been evoked in the country on the subject of this Bill. There have been public meetings at almost every important centre—I have read newspaper accounts of some of the meetings, and since our arrival in Delhi, as the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea has told us, we have been receiving telegrams almost hourly from almost every place urging us strongly to oppose this Bill. The other day there was a public meeting in the Calcutta Town Hall just a few hours before I left by the Punjab Mail, and it was such a large assembly that the big hall could not hold all the people and an overflow meeting had to be held outside the hall. So far I do not think I have come across anybody whose opinion is worth having who does not seem to feel alarmed that if this Bill is passed into law, untold misery will be brought on this land. My Lord, last Saturday I had the pleasure of meeting a gentleman in the Senate House in Calcutta, a gentleman who is universally esteemed for his deep learning, his unblemished character and the sobriety of his views, a gentleman who never mixes in politics, and this is what he told me: 'What will all these reforms of His Excellency the Viceroy and the Right Hon'ble Mr. Montagu be worth if this law is passed? Better try to save the country from this law rather than have these reforms.' Now I submit, my Lord, that that is a typical case. We all know that at the present time the 'Bengalee,' which is edited by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea, and the 'Leader' of Allahabad, admittedly two of the most influential moderate newspapers, differ from the 'Amrita Bazaar Patrika,' 'New India,' the 'Hindu' and the 'Bombay Chronicle' very widely as regards Constitutional Reforms. But what is their attitude towards this Bill? Both sets of papers write in absolutely the same strain, and it is difficult to say which of them condemn this Bill more strongly—the 'Bengalee' and the 'Leader' or the 'Amrita Bazaar Patrika' and the 'Hindu.' Last Sunday the 'Bengalee' published the considered opinion in a signed article of Raja Kishorilal Goswami, the first Indian member of the Bengal Executive Council—a gentleman whose views, I believe, are held in respect by Government, a gentleman who, if anything, errs on the side of ultra caution; and he strongly urges the Government not to proceed with this measure. My Lord, I do not think there can be any manner of doubt that persons of all shades of opinion are absolutely at one as regards this Bill. There may be one or two solitary exceptions, but even they have not come forward to offer any thing in support of this Bill. It is obvious, my Lord, that whatever other results may follow if this Bill is proceeded with, Government will lose the goodwill and support of the people and communities whose support is at all times a most valuable asset. My Lord, there seems to be a class of critics, English gentlemen, both official and non-official, who persist in misunderstanding the attitude of our leaders and politicians in regard to this matter. While coming up here I read an article in the 'Englishman' of the 4th instant which seems to be typical of this view. This is what it says :—.

'In spite of the established fact that a large number of policemen, chiefly Indian, have been fatally shot or bombed, in spite of numerous dacoities in which Indians were killed and Indians robbed, in spite of many evidences of political crime, the average Indian politician and his mouthpiece, the indigenous press, have shown only sympathy for those who have, in order to prevent further political murders and dacoities, been interned in one fashion or another. Indian politicians and newspapers have never attempted really to defend their attitude. All the excuse they had to offer was embodied in the suggestion that the gangs who have been held in restriction for the good of the country were not guilty of the crime.'

"My Lord, that is not true. It is a libel on Indian politicians who are not in sympathy with these criminals. It is Indians themselves, as this article says truly, who are killed, Indians who are victimised, and Indian politicians would be demented, would be lunatics, if they sympathised with these anarchists. My Lord, it is not the anarchists that they sympathise with, but the innocent victims of police oppression. It is assumed that the persons who are hauled up before the Magistrates are always the miscreants who are guilty of the crimes which are sought to be established against them. This is what is at the back of our minds when we oppose the measure. I will not waste the time of the Council by quoting a large number of cases, but I will quote one instance from the Report of the Sedition Committee, on the findings of which the Bill is based—the attempt on the life of Basanta Chatarji, Deputy Superintendent of Police. The case is known as the Musulmanpara bomb case and is referred to in paragraph 66.

The report says :—

'From information now available it appears to be clear that this was the work of the Dacca Samiti and that the bombs had been procured from Chandernagore.'

But what was the judgment of the High Court? A young lad, a student of the Presidency College, was sent up for trial before the special tribunal presided over by the Chief Justice and Justice Sir Asutosh Mukerji. Lord Sinha (then Sir Satyendra Sinha) who was Advocate-General conducted the case for the prosecution. His conduct of prosecutions was always marked by extreme fairness, and he was impressed with the innocence of the lad, and he himself called the respected Head of the Oxford Mission to prove an alibi for this young man who was acquitted in spite of the attempts of the Criminal Investigation Department to swear away his life. The judgment of the High Court stated that 'the attempt of the police to connect an innocent lad with a dastardly crime had failed.' The Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Mukerji made strong comments, and in fact suggested an inquiry into the police evidence; but up to now we have not heard that anything has been done. As I said, my Lord, I could quote other cases from this Report, but it would be tiring the patience of this Council. I shall therefore only refer to one more—the Sindhubala case in which two innocent respectable young ladies were subjected to all sorts of atrocities. They were kept in confinement for days and days. Has any notice been taken of the persons who were responsible for that? My Lord, if it is an offence and a crime to have sympathy with people like the Sindhubalas and the Musulmanpara case's accused, I must plead guilty. But that is what is really at the back of our minds when we oppose the Bill. My Lord, this Bill is admittedly based on the recommendations of the Sedition Committee. We all know that that Committee was presided over by an eminent Judge of the

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.]

English High Court, and that with him was associated another eminent Judge, the Chief Justice of the Bombay High Court.

"We shall always speak of their findings and their recommendations with the utmost respect. But, my Lord, I cannot help saying that as I read some of their findings and recommendations I was reminded of an anecdote I read somewhere, probably in Serjeant Ballantyne's Reminiscences. A man was tried on a charge of stealing a horse; the case against him was very strong and everybody expected that he would be convicted But his Counsel, a Serjeant-at-Law or Queen's Counsel, I forget which, made a strong appeal and the Jury returned a verdict of not guilty. Of course he had to be acquitted, because fortunately or unfortunately—I do not know which—our Criminal Procedure Code is not in force in England. The Judge after acquitting him addressed him 'Now that you are acquitted, there is no fear of your being put on your trial again. Will you tell me whether you did not steal the horse?' The man replied 'well, my Lord, I always thought that I did it, until I heard the address of my Counsel, and now I begin to think that I did not do it.' This is my feeling, my Lord, after reading some of the findings and recommendations of this Committee. I think it will be not in order, at any rate it would be taking up the time of the Council unnecessarily, if I were to refer to the findings I had in my mind. I shall simply mention this fact that the circumstance that their decision is based upon expert evidence which was not sworn and which was not sifted by cross-examination is bound to detract somewhat from the value of their recommendations. Apart from that, it appears from the report (paragraph 176) 'that proposals for legislation for the period after the war were, however, drafted and had been under consideration when it was decided to appoint our Committee.' I submit, my Lord, that this must have tinged to a large extent their decisions in this matter.

"Before coming to this legislation four points have to be considered. The first is whether there is any need for this legislation; secondly, whether it is wise or expedient to introduce it at this moment; thirdly, the provisions of the Bill itself, and fourthly, whether this Council has the power to pass this legislation. My Lord, I will not dispute the findings of the Committee at this moment. I will accept their findings, that there was a revolutionary party and that there were criminal activities and anarchical movements, and that there were difficulties in dealing with them. Accepting all this, I submit, my Lord, no case is made out for this legislation. What is the present state of things? Is there any clear finding in the Report that the state of things which led to the passing of the Defence of India Act and the regulations thereunder is still in force, still in existence? Is there any clear finding that after that law lapses automatically there will be a recrudescence of crime which we will not be able to deal with unless we have this law? So far from that being the case the Committee say (paragraph 175).

'This as expressed appears to us to be applicable to the state of circumstances under which the difficulties referred to were encountered. These difficulties have, however, been circumvented for the time being by special temporary legislation and they have not been in operation at the time of our inquiry. When this legislation lapses, circumstances may have altered and the position may be better or worse. We do not think it is for us to speculate nicely on these matters.'

Is this a clear finding that after this legislation lapses the state of things in the country will be such as to require the special law? They simply say they do not know what it will be; they do not speculate. Is there clear ground for launching into this special legislation in anticipation of what may happen? Is there any instance, my Lord, of anticipatory repressive legislation like this in any country? You have heard the Hon'ble the Home Member say that it appears from evidence furnished by these criminals themselves that this movement is still in force. Unfortunately for me I could not get at the evidence and gather for myself whether it was important. May I point out that the presumption of the law is that evidence that is not produced, if produced, would be adverse to the prosecution? Well he admits in his statement that the Bengal Government have taken advantage of the improvement in the situation and let off more than one thousand of these persons who were detained. Is that not conclusive to show that the position has much improved in spite of the letters which the Hon'ble Member referred to? Furthermore, the Bengalee in its editorial column took the responsibility of making this statement last Sunday:—

'Men like Arabindo Ghosh and his brother Barin, enemies of British rule like Savarkar and men of his ilk, are coming forward to stand by pax Britannica and all that it stands for. There are a host of respectable men in the country who are prepared to stand security for a very large number of our deportees and internees and have, on more than one occasion, signified their intention to do so to the powers that be.'

In the Town Hall meeting that was held in Calcutta Mr. B. C. Chatterji, a well-known counsel practising at the High Court, openly stated that there were letters received from leading anarchists who are now in jail and in the Andamans, letters which were passed by the Censor, in which they expressed the same thing, namely, that they would stand by the Government. Mr. Chatterji also placed before the meeting an extract from an article in a Bengalee magazine called the Prabartak published from Chandernagore and which he attributed to Arabindo Ghosh wherein the writer took the same view, namely, that all ought to combine and co-operate with the Government, now that the reforms are going to be granted. Ought not this to be taken into consideration, my Lord, before we think of passing this repressive measure? My Lord, is there any investigation about the root cause of this movement? This was not referred to the Sedition Committee, and they do not come to any finding upon the point. Unless the root cause is removed, can you possibly put down by mere repressive measures this movement? My suggestion is that it is clear from the evidence of these anarchists, which I read to the Council just now and which is referred to in the article in the Bengalee, that we might take note of these facts and see what effect the reforms would have before we launch into the repressive legislation which is now contemplated. It is a case of history repeating itself. My Lord, may I refer to what Lord Morley said in his 'Recollections' at the time of the proposal to appoint Lord Kitchener as Viceroy. He said:—

'The ground on which I object is that the impression made on India by sending the greatest soldier to follow the reforms would make them look a practical paradox.' (Page 333, Vol. II.)'

"Now, my Lord, you are going to give us reforms and side by side with them and in fact before them, you are going to give us this repressive law. Will that pave the ground for the reforms in this country? If this measure is passed it is bound to create considerable agitation. I read the other day that Mr. Asquith in his election campaign was questioned by a soldier in regard to Home Rule, and this is what he said: 'The best way to get rid of the Sinn Fein is to grant self-government to Ireland. This will make short work of Sinn Feiners'. Lord Morley said with regard to the Irish Crimes Act 'If I know anything in this world it is the record and working of Irish Coercion Act since 1881, and the Irish Crimes Act was the most egregious failure in the whole history of exceptional legislation', page 328. What is there to show that what failed there will succeed in this country? Given the same cause the same result will follow whether it is Ireland or Italy or Russia or India. My Lord, our humble submission is that before you pass this measure let us see what will be the effect of the reforms in India. Where is the danger? In the first place there is the Indian Defence Force Act and that will be in force for some time yet. Peace has not yet been signed and even after it is the law will be in force for six months more. Apart from that you have got the 'rusty sword of 1818,' namely, the Bengal Regulation III of 1818. If in spite of these measures you find there is an increase of crime which cannot be dealt with by the ordinary law, surely your Lordship can pass an emergency measure, an Ordinance or even an Act in a single sitting, as was passed in the time of Lord Lytton and in the case of the Press Act. The Government would then be in a much stronger position than they are now, as your Lordship's Council would be bound to give the measure their whole-hearted support. My Lord, it will be a great misfortune if the Government wishes to go on with this legislation. Then I doubt if the Council has got the power to pass this law. In paragraph 200 of the Rowlatt's Committee's Report this is what is said: 'In making suggestions for legislation we have not considered at all whether it could be argued that such legislation is in any respect beyond the competence of the Governor General in Council. We have no authority to lay down the law on any such point, and any provisional assumption as the basis of our proposals would only cause embarrassment. We have proceeded therefore on the basis that any suggestions of ours which it may be decided to adopt will be given effect to by some legislature competent for the purpose'. Reading between the lines is there any doubt that the Committee was sceptical about the competency of the Council? It comes to this, my Lord, that the eminent judges were not satisfied that you have the power. Couple this with the findings of the Joint Parliamentary Committee presided over by Lord Loreborn and there is room for the submission that the matter ought to be considered further. I do not refer to the provisions of the Bill as it is not necessary for my present purpose: admittedly it is a repressive law which has created grave alarms in the country. My Lord, I have nothing more to add. I trust your Lordship's Government will be pleased to take these facts into consideration and see whether you cannot get on without this legislation. If you find it necessary to pass an emergent law, you can do so at a moment's notice, and this Council will then be bound to give it their whole-hearted support. With these words I support my Hon'ble colleague Mr. Patel's motion."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"My Lord, in the first place I may say that I was very glad to hear from the Hon'ble the Home Member, I do not remember his words, but I think he gave expression to this feeling that the Government were introducing this measure with considerable reluctance. I fully expected that and a great deal more from the Hon'ble the Home Member who has been, at any rate for a number of years, in the judicial line and once sat on the Bench of the High Court of Calcutta. My Lord, to any man who believes in law and justice, these measures must seem abhorrent and shocking. The Hon'ble the Home Member said, 'we have got to do this; show us some other remedy and we shall consider it.' Now, before I deal with these Bills and the speech of the Hon'ble the Home Member, I shall place before the Council the grounds on which I am opposed to these Bills. My first ground is this, that it is against the fundamental principles of law and justice, namely, that no man should lose his liberty or be deprived of his liberty, without a judicial trial in accordance with the accepted rules of evidence and procedure. My second reason is, that this is a wrong remedy for the disease, namely, these revolutionary crimes, although I for one am prepared to accept as correct the findings of facts of the Rowlatt Committee that the crimes of the nature indicated have been committed. My third ground is that the powers which are going to be assumed by the executive, which means substitution of executive for judicial, such powers are likely to be abused, and in the past we have instances where such powers have been abused. My fourth ground is that there is no precedent or parallel that I know of in any other civilised country where you have laws of this character enacted. My fifth ground is that this is a most inopportune moment. At this moment I can tell you that high hopes have been raised among the people of this country because we are on the eve of great and momentous reforms being introduced. My sixth ground is that the proposed measures are of a permanent character and not temporary measures intended only to deal with an emergency of a temporary character. And the last ground why I oppose this measure is that, my Lord, I do not wish to state it by way of any threat or intimidation to Government, but I wish to state it because it is my duty to tell you that, if these measures are passed, you will create in this country from one end to the other a discontent and agitation, the like of which you have not witnessed, and it will have, believe me, a most disastrous effect upon the good relations that have existed between the Government and the people.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

"Now, my Lord, it is not a matter in which you can put one, two or three lawyers on one side and three or four lawyers on the other side and argue this matter out. The question, my Lord, to my mind, is this. First, is it or is it not a fact that these are unheard of and novel measures. That is a fact which cannot and will not be denied. Your justification for coming here and asking this Council to give you sanction to pass them into law is this. The Hon'ble the Home Member will correct me if I have misunderstood him. We had these revolutionary movements and it was difficult for us to cope with them at first, but as soon as the Defence of India Act was passed in 1915 (though the Government for the time being took those powers for the period of the war) you were able to utilise those powers for the purpose of dealing with revolutionary conspiracies and with more success. That being so, the Government is now so enamoured with these powers that it boldly asks the legislature to enact measures of this character permanently, which to my mind is subversive of all principles of jurisprudence. Now, my Lord, there is no doubt, I think, it is common sense that by these powers you can more effectively deal with conspiracies. Nobody will dispute that. But then you will ask me, why do you object to it; why don't you give us these powers? My answer is this, my Lord, that by these powers of an executive character you may be able to get hold of more real offenders but at the risk and at the cost of many other innocent men who will be persecuted and who will have no chance, no opportunity, of a proper trial. Now that is the fundamental difference between you and as far as I am concerned. You say these powers can be effective, and so they can be. But what guarantee is there for the innocent? Then you will ask, don't you trust the executive? My answer is that I certainly cannot trust the executive, because I am a firm believer,—I do not care how many Rowlatt Committees will decide and recommend,—I am a firm believer that no man's liberty should be taken away for a single minute without a proper judicial inquiry. I say that by these executive powers you may be able to lay your finger on the real offenders, but in trying to get at the real offenders I venture to say, that you would clap many innocent people, and you will clap many innocent people who will be unable to resist the executive orders. Now that, to my mind, is the root of the whole question. And what is your answer to that? and I say, my Lord, remember you are responsible; remember, once you have passed this law in this Council, your Excellency's Government is responsible, because these laws will then be put into force; they will be put into force by Local Governments, they will be put into force by officials, they will be put into force in various ways by the police; you are giving this power, and I want you, my Lord, to consider whether such a case has been made out as to enact these measures. I am now dealing only with the preventive measures. The Rowlatt Committee themselves admit it, and they also feel embarrassed; they also recognise the fact that it will involve the infringement of liberty of the subject. Take, for instance, your first clause, the important clause in the Bill section 21, which reads thus:—

'Where, in the opinion of the Local Government, there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person is or has been actively concerned in such area in any movement of the nature referred to in section 20, the Local Government may, by order in writing containing a declaration to that effect, give all or any of the following directions, namely, that such person—

(a) shall within such period as may be specified in the order execute a bond . . . . .

(b) shall notify his residence and any change of residence . . . . .

(c) shall remain or reside in any area in British India so specified.

(d) shall abstain from any act so specified which, in the opinion of the Local Government, is calculated to disturb the public peace or is prejudicial to the public safety; and

(e) shall report himself to the police at such periods as may be so specified.'

Then come the more drastic preventive measures, clause 33, which says:—

'Where in the opinion of the Local Government there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person has been or is concerned in such area in any scheduled offence, the

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

Local Government may make in respect of such person any order authorised by section 21, and may further by order in writing direct—

(a) the arrest of any such person without warrant;

(b) the confinement of any such person in such place and under such conditions and restrictions as it may specify; and

(c) the search of any place specified in the order which, in the opinion of the Local Government, has been, is being, or is about to be used by any such person for any purpose prejudicial to the public safety.'

I do not know what is the meaning of the word 'movement,' the word might mean anything. Well now, who will give the information to the local Government that a person is concerned with a movement of the kind defined? Who will furnish the local Government with materials upon which the local Government will make its order? I venture to say, my Lord, it will be some police officer. Who else can it be, except somebody in the Criminal Investigation Department, or the police? It is the police who will furnish the local Government with information, ex-parte information, and upon that information, furnished by the police, the local Government will say, 'well, here we have got this information, we will make the order', and the order is made and it is final. I am fully alive to the fact that my friend the Law Member was a little bit annoyed when I was speaking on the Rowlatt Committee Resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde, and he pointed out to me that these orders are made subject to certain conditions. I can assure my Hon'ble friend that I was fully alive to the existence of those conditions. I would have dealt with them, but my Hon'ble friend forgets that when one is speaking on a Resolution he has only got 15 minutes of life and cannot go into every possible detail. And what are the conditions? After the order is made, after the man's liberty is taken away, under the second and more drastic preventive measures which are enacted, you have an investigating authority. After the man is either in jail, or has been arrested and is detained somewhere, you have the investigating authority. And, my Lord, what is that investigating authority? Here again I am fully alive to the fact that it is suggested that there will be one non-official member on that investigating authority. But what is that investigating authority? It will have the same materials, though it may call for more materials, but the inquiry will be anything but a judicial inquiry. The person who is either under arrest or has been detained will not be there. He may be called by the investigating authority, he may be questioned, but he may not be there. The whole inquiry will be in camera, most probably behind the back of the person accused and the investigating authority is then to make a report. I ask you, my Lord, again what is the good of that report, is it worth anything? I venture to say that the Hon'ble the Law Member, for whose fairness I have the utmost respect, if he were there and if 20 statements were placed before him, and if the accused were not called before him, and he was to investigate behind the back of the accused, without the assistance of any advocate or barrister, I venture to say, my Lord, that even he, with his great experience of the Courts, is likely to be misled. How are you really going to come to any decision? You know that even in a court of law, where you have sometimes the ablest counsel on both sides, it is difficult to decide whether a person is really guilty or not, and we know that juries, men of common sense, men of business, have differed. We know that judges have differed. We know that a Court sometimes convicts a man of murder, and you go to a court of appeal and on the same evidence the man is acquitted. This is a very serious matter when you are dealing with the liberty of the subject. How can you expect this investigating authority, sitting in camera, behind the back of the person accused, to come to any really useful conclusion? What happens then? This investigating authority will make its report and the Government is not bound to accept that report. What is the good of it? The Government will say 'we have considered it.' Now this is the condition; this is the most valuable safeguard, the great condition precedent which is made so much of. The same thing will apply in the more drastic preventive measures. Therefore, my Lord, it is no use shirking the issue, it is no use hedging round the whole of this question. It is quite clear and it is obvious that this measure is of a most serious character. It is dangerous. It imperils the liberty of the subject and fundamental rights of a citizen and, my Lord, standing here as I do, I say that no man who loves fair play, who loves justice and who believes in the freedom and the liberty of the people can possibly give his consent to a measure of this character. You have got to make out a very very strong case indeed, and then alone you can come to us and then I can assure the Hon'ble the Home Member that I will tell him 'yes you have made out this case, I shall co-operate with you.' What is the case you have made out? Because there are some revolutionary conspiracies; because, as the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea said, you have a small section, a few hundreds, or a few thousand if you like, who have taken to revolutionary methods, who have taken to anarchical methods, you come here and say that we are going to enact laws of this character, permanently placing them on the Statue-book, the result of which would be that no man's liberty will be safe in this country. I shall even go so far as to say this, my Lord, that there will be an end to political life and freedom in this country. No man will be safe. Supposing, my Lord, in some province some offences are committed. The Government of India is appealed to and the Government of India says 'very well, some offences have been committed—and mark you I have not dealt with the offences here, but the Schedule of Offences includes grievous hurt, rioting, and all sorts of other offences. If to-morrow, for some reason or another, there happen to be three or four riots in the Bombay Presidency, mind you nothing to do with politics at all, the Government of India may be asked to apply this Act to Bombay and the Government of India might intervene and make it applicable to Bombay............

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Is the Hon'ble Member quite correct in his citation from the Schedule? Will he read it? He has omitted the sentence 'if, in the opinion of Government, such offence is connected with any movement endangering the safety of the State."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"I know that perfectly well, but how is this to be ascertained. I know that the draftsman has put it in this way that provided they are connected with any offence against the State, but I say supposing you have offences of this kind. I will give you an instance. Supposing we have somebody who is dissatisfied with some individual official and happens to attack him and causes hurt............

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"May I point out that section 323 is not in the Schedule at all; the offence of simple hurt is not included."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"I said 'grievous hurt'."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"No, the Hon'ble Member said 'hurt.'"

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"I said 'grievous hurt' just now."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"'Grievous hurt' is also not in the Schedule. Section 326 deals with grievous hurt caused by a deadly weapon."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"I always understood that grievous hurt is grievous hurt with any kind of weapon. Therefore, I say that you have got a Schedule of offences to which there is no limit. Of course I can go into the whole list and take up the time of the Council unnecessarily. But you will find you have got a regular list of offences. They are not offences really confined to offences against the State. Therefore, what do you find? You find that once you get this Act made applicable to any province, then in that province if there is a particular person who is not liked or who is supposed to be undesirable, by some official, I say that person is not safe. If he happens to incur the displeasure of a few high officials in that province, I say that man is not safe, and he has got no remedy. Apart from these details, I say, as I said before, that this is not a matter which you can argue out like two lawyers arguing out a case on one side or the other. As I said before, the question to my mind is this. What case have you made out for these powers to be given to the Government? The answer I give to the Hon'ble Member who appealed to me and said the Council must consider its responsibilities, the Council must realise its position, is this, that you have made out no case. The only case that you have made out is this, that by means of these extraordinary powers which happened to be placed in your hands owing to the war, perhaps you have been able to deal with this particular kind of crimes more efficiently than otherwise you would have done. Now that is no reason for placing these Statutes permanently on the Statute-book. I say you have ample powers as it is; use them by all means, because I do not wish for a single moment to be understood to say that I do not want you to deal with those crimes. Deal with them, but you must also remember this. Are you going to deal with these crimes in co-operation with the people, or are you going to deal with these crimes independently and in spite of the people? You may say that we do not care what the non-official Members think. I venture to say, my Lord, that there is not a single non-official Member that is going to support these measures. There may be one or two exceptions, but, as far as I know, barring one or two exceptions, the rest of them are going to oppose these measures. Not only that. Although the non-official Members in this Council certainly represent a very important volume of public opinion, you have also got the public outside, and I venture to say that the whole of the country is opposed to these measures.

"Then you say of course 'we have got the official block; we have got the official majority; we are going to carry this.' Well of course you can carry it because you have got the official majority. But I ask you, my Lord, and I ask your Government, do you or do you not accept our assurance when we say that nobody condemns those crimes more strongly than we do; nobody is more ready and more anxious to stop them than we are; nobody is more anxious to co-operate with you than we are? Therefore, will you not listen to us? Does our opinion count for anything or does it not? Does the opinion of the overwhelming majority of the non-official Members in this Council count for anything or does it not? I know it counted when you wanted £45 million. Is it or is it not going to count to-day, and, if so, why not? That is the question I ask. My Lord, we have got this question to face. As the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea has put it, this Act is not going to expire for six months after the peace is signed. You have got Regulation III in your hands. You have got the power of Ordinance; you can enact this very measure, if necessary. And if in the new Councils, when they are formed, if we find and our conviction is this that there will be no occasion; we may be wrong, I am not going to be very emphatic on that point, we may be wrong, but we feel, and, my Lord, I feel convinced that this announcement of the 20th August by His Majesty's Government followed up by the visit of the Secretary of State for India and the fact that your Lordship and the Secretary of State for India went all over the country to ascertain the public opinion on the question of constitutional reforms and the publication of your Report which I for one had never any hesitation in recognising as an advance, and I have said so not in this Council but outside had tremendous effect on the people. And whatever differences there may be between your Government and ourselves with regard to those proposals, if we eventually get those reforms in the substantial form that we expect—and on that point we mean, my Lord, to fight to the end, we will do all that lies in our power, we will do our best, we mean to go further than that Report—but, my Lord, after we have fought the fight, whatever may be the end of it, once these reforms are introduced, I can assure you, my Lord, that you have got men in this country who will then say this: 'We have fought a constitutional battle, we have done all we could in our power, but we have not succeeded to the fullest, but it is a real and substantial advance now these reforms are introduced, let us make the best of them.' And I hope that the Civil Service, on the other hand, will act in the same way. They may fight now, they may resist us now, they may think that they are going to be endangered and they may think that even these proposals go too far; but once the fight is over, I hope that you and we will work in co-operation and do our best to see that those reforms are made a success. At that time, I can assure you, my Lord, and I can assure the Government, if we find that there still exists these revolutionary conspiracies, and if we find in co-operation with your Government that measures of a drastic character are essential, I assure you that you will find men amongst my own countrymen who will stand side by side with you and will be ready to give their assent to laws however much they may dislike them. Even then I can assure you I shall be loath to give my consent, but I shall do so if it is necessary.. Now, therefore, do you think that you will lose anything, do you think that anything serious is going to happen if you accede to this request of ours, namely, to postpone the introduction of the Bill? That is all that we ask. Do you think that you will gain more by carrying this measure by means of your official majority against the will of the people? I say it is against the will of the people throughout the country,—and mark my word, what I say is true and will be proved to be true—against the will of the people. Are you going to do that? And I say your only justification for that would be if you can say this to me: 'The danger is so imminent—after all, we are here as a foreign Government and we have got to protect ourselves and we have got to maintain peace and order in this country—it does not matter whether you like the method or not, we are absolutely driven to this desperation, that against the will of the entire people, against responsible opinion in this country, we find we are in such great danger that unless we arm ourselves with these powers our Government is in peril.' Is that so? I venture to say No; it is not what is going to happen. You have got already more than ample powers with you, I assure you have got, I would not care to go so far as to say the entire community—there may be a small section on whom you cannot count—but almost the entire community at your back; because, believe me, we do not wish, and nobody wishes, that there should be anything but ordered progress in this country. What have you found? I cannot, my Lord, quote your Excellency's actual words in your speech to-day; but what has India shown during this War? The good sense of India, the loyalty of India—not loyalty in that stupid sense in which it is sometimes used, but free sincere co-operation—have been acknowledged. Has India failed during these last few years? Then, my Lord, what is the danger, what is the necessity, that calls for pressing on with this Bill at this moment? My Lord, I do not wish to take up the time of the Council unnecessarily. I say, first of all, as I said before, the Bill is really opposed to the fundamental principles of British justice; secondly, I say it is not opportune; thirdly, I say it will create a most disastrous effect on the public mind.

"Then, with regard to the details, the Hon'ble the Home Member said that in the Select Committee, if there are any suggestions made on matters of details, they will be considered; but the difference between us is not so much a difference as to details. The difference, as I have pointed out, is with regard to the principles,—the fundamental principles. If there were only a difference with regard to details, I have no doubt that the Select Committee would be able to solve it; and there are many matters of detail which might be suggested to the Select Committee. Take, for instance, the question about the statements of persons who are either spirited away or cannot be found and so on by the accused. You say these statements should be allowed as evidence. Well, personally I think that would be a most dangerous thing, and I will give you my reasons for it shortly. First of all, you will admit that this is going against the ordinary law of evidence—section 33—which lays down that you cannot have statements of this kind. But without the test laid down in section 33 you propose that these statements should be admitted in evidence if the person who made the statement has been spirited away by the accused. Now, how is this to be proved to begin with? If the police or those who are interested in putting in these statements without being tested, without being cross-examined upon—if they want to put in these statements, the simplest thing for them to do is to say, if the people who made the statements do not appear, that they have been spirited away. How is this to be investigated? And instead of the real investigation whether a man is guilty or not, you will ask the Court to investigate whether three or four persons who made statements have been in fact spirited away by the accused or not. In other words, you will have a trial within a trial. That is a most objectionable thing at any time, and in matters of this kind you will simply encourage a practice which might be abused. And therefore I say that in the first instance that provision should be taken out altogether. Then you have got many other matters of detail, but I do not want to weary this Council. I have no doubt the Select Committee—if the Bill goes to the Select Committee—will consider these matters.

"My Lord, therefore in conclusion I would again make an appeal to your Lordship's Government as a man, my Lord, who is a lover of the Constitution, as a man, my Lord, who is a lover of law and order, as a man who believes in discipline and authority, I would appeal to you to reconsider your position before you proceed with this Bill any further, and I hope that when the new Councils come into existence, there will be no occasion for the enactments of such subversive laws, but I can tell you this that if things do not improve, if things do not change, if things get worse, believe me, you will get responsible men who will stand by you and who will stand by you as strongly as anyone can. I still hope that the Government will consider this, and I say that your persistence with this Bill will be most disastrous."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, before I proceed to discuss the Bill, may I, under rule 13 of the Rules for the Conduct of Legislative Business, ask that any papers or returns relating to the Bill which is before the Council, any Minute which may have been recorded by your Excellency's Government, and any correspondence that may have passed between your Government and the Secretary of State, may be supplied to me? That rule says— 3-23 P.M.

'Any Member may ask for any papers or return connected with any Bill before the Council.'

I beg to ask for these papers."

His Excellency the President:—"There are no papers or returns in the custody of the Secretary to the Council."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, my request is that if your Excellency's Government has minuted upon this Bill, and if any correspondence has passed between the Secretary of State and your Excellency's Government, copies of these may be supplied to me."

His Excellency the President:—"Rule No. 13 says—

'The President shall determine, either at the time or at the meeting of the Council next following, whether the papers or returns asked for can be given.'

I will give the Hon'ble Member an answer to-morrow."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Thank you. My Lord, at the conclusion of his speech in introducing this Bill to-day, the Hon'ble the Home Member reminded us, non-official Members of the Council, of the great responsibility which rests upon us in dealing with this matter. He went further and he told us that we shall be judged as to our capacity for having a large measure of responsibility by the attitude that we take up in relation to this Bill. My Lord, I entirely endorse that view, though I do not agree with the Home Member as to his object in making this remark. I hope that not only we non-official Members but that we all of us, official as well as non-official Members, will approach this question with a full sense of the responsibility which rests upon us in dealing with such an important matter.

"Now, my Lord, the motion before the Council is that the Bill in question be referred to a Select Committee. In the first instance, I raise my respectful protest against the manner in which Government have proceeded in connection with this Bill. My Lord, I cannot imagine any Bill of greater or graver import than the Bill which seeks to deprive His Majesty's subjects of the protection for their liberty which they at present enjoy under the law. This Bill proposes to substitute for the judicial machinery that is provided under the authority of Parliament and of the Imperial Legislative Council for dealing with cases affecting the liberties of His Majesty's subjects, an extra-judicial authority, an executive authority, to deal with such cases. I submit, my Lord, that if there was any Bill which required to be proceeded with strictly according to the forms and methods laid down in the rules relating to legislative business before this Council, this was one. Those rules provide that ordinarily when a Bill is introduced, a motion is to be made in the first instance that the Bill may be published in the official Gazette or Gazettes as the Council may direct. In the present case action has been taken under the exceptional provision contained in rule 23, which says : 'The Governor General, if he sees fit, may order the publication of a Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons which accompanies it in such gazettes and languages as he thinks necessary, although no motion has been made for leave to introduce the Bill. In that case it shall not be necessary to move for leave to introduce the Bill, and if the Bill be afterwards introduced, it shall not be necessary to publish it again.' My Lord, I take it that this provision has been incorporated into the rules to meet cases other than the one which is now before us. The departure from the ordinary method prescribed has resulted in this : here is a measure of very great importance. If a motion was made for leave to introduce it in the ordinary way, it would have been followed by a motion that the Bill should be published in the gazettes and circulated for opinions. The Bill would have then been circulated in the country and among public bodies for opinion ; the opinions of High Court Judges, of other Judges and Magistrates, of the various Local Governments and of public associations interested in the question would have been elicited. These opinions would have been circulated to Members of this Council, considered by your Excellency's Government and possibly also by His Majesty's Government; and after all this had been done there would have been a motion made in this Council that the Bill should be referred to a Select Committee. But what has actually been done here ? The Bill was published in the Gazette, if I am not mistaken, on the 19th January or some date about that.......

The Hon'ble Mr. A. P. Muddiman :—" On the 18th January. "

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" Thanks. Now, a fortnight after that the Bill is introduced here to-day under the provisions of rule 23, without any motion for leave to introduce it. I would not have concerned myself about the formal motion to ask for leave to introduce it, but for the fact that the great advantage which the legislature intended to secure by such a motion in the first instance, namely, the publication of the Bill in the Gazette and its circulation for opinions before it should be referred to a Select Committee, has been lost to us by the course followed.

"The second thing which I complain of is that, while rule 25 provides that 'after publication of a Bill in the Gazette of India, the Select Committee to which the Bill may have been referred shall make a report thereon. Such report shall be made not sooner than three months from the date of the first publication in the Gazette of India, unless the Council orders the report to be made sooner'; here is a proposal emanating not from an ordinary Member, but from the Home Member, who held judicial offices for many years, disregarding that very useful provision and proposing that the Select Committee to which it is proposed to refer this Bill should report on or before the 6th March 1919. I submit, my Lord, the Home Member owed it to the Council and the public to explain what reasons of State existed which justified or led the Government to adopt a procedure which violates the ordinary rule which has been laid down for dealing with legislation. He has not done so; I hope he may yet do so. But I submit in the absence of any such explanation, the public have a right to complain that the procedure which has been followed has been followed. Your Lordship is aware, the whole Council is aware, that these Bills have fallen like bolts from the blue upon the public. Your Lordship is aware, most of us are aware, how numerous are the meetings which have been held and are being held in different parts of the country to send up protests against the introduction of these Bills. Is it fair to the public to hurl such measures as these over their heads without the slightest attempt at justifying the procedure?

"My Lord, I have no sympathy with sedition; I am sure no Member has. We hate sedition, we reprobate it. We do so for two reasons, it is bad in itself, and it hurts my own countrymen. I am sincerely sorry for the young men who have been misled into the paths of sedition; I grieve their fate. I would do anything reasonable which it were possible for us to do to save them from their fate. We have no sympathy with either anarchical crime or revolutionary crime. When necessity for legislation to deal with anarchical or revolutionary crime has been shown, the proceedings of this Council bear witness to the fact that we have given our whole support to the measure that was introduced. I will refer to the passing of the Defence of India Act. When Lord Hardinge's Government found it necessary to introduce the measure known as the Defence of India Act, every Member of this Council lent his support to that proposal. We supported it as a temporary measure. I will invite attention to a few passages in the debate on it which made this clear, one from Lord Hardinge and another from Sir Reginald Craddock. Speaking on it, Lord Hardinge said: 'You will observe that it is a war measure, to last during the period of the war and for six months afterwards. There is no one in the land more jealous than I am of the honour of India and of the striking reputation of India for loyalty that India so rightly deserves, and I am not disposed to allow the honour and fair fame of India to be tarnished by the criminal acts of a few ill-balanced minds at a moment when India's sons are shedding their blood on the battle-field for the King-Emperor and country.' Sir Reginald Craddock, who introduced the Defence of India Bill, said in the course of his speech : 'In the first place, my Lord, it is a great tribute to the loyalty of India and the peaceful behaviour of the vast majority of her people that, while the British Government passed a Defence of the Realm Act at the outbreak of the war, we are now in India half way through the eighth month of the war, before we have found it necessary to enact a similar measure in India, for, though under another name, it is really a Defence of the Realm Act to which we are to-day inviting the assent of the Council.' Sir Reginald Craddock went on to say : 'The powers that we are now asking for are the powers which in our opinion are required for the purpose of securing the public safety and the defence of British India, and we require these powers only during the continuance of the war and for six months thereafter ; that is to say, until the excitement and disturbance of the general calm, which the state of war engenders, have had time to subside.'

"The position having thus been made clear, every Member of the Council gave his whole-hearted support to the proposal. I need not quote from the speeches of all the Members who spoke, but I beg to quote one short sentence from a speech of mine on that occasion. I said :—

'The living present demands from us that in the exceptional circumstances which have been created by the war, we should lend our loyal support to the Government in adopting every measure which is necessary in order to prevent and crush mutinous acts, to preserve public peace and to protect the civil population, the law-abiding people from the evils of the misguided action of a few ill-balanced minds. We are all agreed, as the debate has shown, to the principle of the measure so far as it is needed by the exigencies of the situation for securing the public safety and the defence of the realm'.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

"I think it cannot be questioned by any Member of this Council or by anybody outside that we have given cordial support to the Government in passing a very exceptional measure such as the Defence of India Act when its necessity was made clear to us. We did so because we were told and realised that it was an exceptional measure needed by the exceptional times of the war, and that as a temporary measure it was to come to an end six months after the war. Now, my Lord, what is it that we are now asked to do? We are asked by the Hon'ble the Home Member to give our support to this exceptional measure being placed permanently on the Statute-book, and we are told that if we shall not do so, we shall be regarded as not sufficiently responsible men. I ask the Hon'ble the Home Member, and I ask every Member of the Government to tell us, what are the facts which justify such a course. I agree with Mr. Jinnah that no case has been made out for such a measure. I submit that we must have a case made out for placing provisions of such an exceptional character in the permanent Statutes of the land.

"What is the position we have to deal with? There are two kinds of crimes, revolutionary and anarchical, which the Rowlatt Committee have dealt with. Let us analyse the two. The Rowlatt Committee have not said that there was any such crime in existence in this country up to the year 1897. The first crimes to which they have referred were the unfortunate murders of two English officers in Poona in 1897. They have shown that the murder of one of these was the result of an accident, and that of the other was accountable by the fact that strong feelings had been excited against him among the people by the maladministration of plague measures in Poona. Now before I proceed further, I may say at once that so far as the findings of the Rowlatt Committee are concerned, I accept the facts which they have stated largely as they have stated them. We have to exercise caution because, as the Rowlatt Committee have themselves pointed out, they have not placed before us all the evidence upon which they based their conclusions; and without any disrespect to any Member of the Committee, without any reflection against them or any suggestion of a want of a desire on their part to do the right, we may not accept their conclusions as entirely satisfactory. The Committee have pointed out that the great mass of the statements which they had to rely upon were statements which, unfortunately, with few exceptions, they felt themselves bound to treat as confidential and that they were not able to place them before the public. The reasons which they have stated for not doing so are, I submit, not satisfactory. They have pointed out that there would be difficulty created if they had published their statements. I submit, however, that that is not a sufficient reason. In paragraph 35 of their Report they mention the reasons why they have not been able to place the statements as a whole before the public. These may have been very good reasons in their judgment for withholding the statements, but I submit that if the evidence had been made public, it is possible that the public might have come to different conclusions from those at which the Rowlatt Committee arrived. We had no doubt a Judge of His Majesty's High Court, presiding over the Committee. We also had several other experienced officers on it, one of whom I have the pleasure of seeing on my right; we also had on it an Indian Judge and a non-official Indian lawyer; all very honourable and capable men. But we know that judgments of the Judges of the High Courts have been set aside by His Majesty's Judges of the Privy Council. It is possible that the conclusions at which the Rowlatt Committee had arrived might not have been accepted by other Judges if they sifted the evidence. Take another instance. A special tribunal that sat at Lahore three years ago recommended that a certain number of persons, I think 24, should be hanged; as the result of the appeal that was made to your predecessor, 17 of these persons were saved from the gallows, because your Excellency's predecessor and his advisers felt satisfied that the tribunal in question had not sifted the evidence correctly. Therefore, granting that the considerations which prevented the Rowlatt Committee from publishing the statements may be very weighty, the fact does stand in the way of our accepting all their influences and conclusions. But with this reservation, I may say at once that I accept the statements of facts they have arrived at. They have been very careful in making those statements, and these will help us in deciding what should be our attitude in regard to the Bills before us.

"Now what is the position disclosed by the Committee's report with regard to this class of crime? There was a little crime in Poona in 1897; the Rowlatt Committee have dealt in their report with the prevalence and growth of revolutionary ideas in the Bombay Presidency. Their report shows however that the movement is practically dead in that province; they do not refer to anything that has happened since 1914 so far as Poona and the Bombay Presidency are concerned, Obviously therefore so far as Bombay is concerned, there is no need for legislation of the kind here proposed.

"Let us now take another Province, let us come to the United Provinces. The Committee have gone exhaustively into the state of things that exist in the United Provinces. They have come to the conclusion that though a little trouble was imported into the United Provinces, there was no indigenous anarchical tendency in the provinces. Their statement is to be found in paragraph 124 at page 136. After citing a few incidents that had taken place, regrettable and deplorable incidents though they were, they say:—

'These incidents show clearly that so far the revolutionary movement has not taken hold of any section of the people of the United Provinces, but that the position and circumstances of Benares will always render that city a point of peculiar peril.'

This does not show that in the United Provinces there is any need for perpetuating this legislation.

"Let us now look at the case of Bihar and Orissa. The Committee in paragraph 119, at page 130, say:—

'We find that the province of Bihar and Orissa has been slightly affected by the revolutionary movement, although it has been the scene of two of its worst crimes.'

Even assuming that these crimes were revolutionary, I submit that so far as Bihar and Orissa are concerned, they have not made out a case, at least the Committee's Report does not lend support to the proposal to perpetuate this extraordinary legislation there. The Committee go on to say: 'This province, however, has been used, and will in all probability continue to be used—' there I beg to differ from them because they have not stated any reason for it—'both as a seed-bed for propaganda and as a harbour for absconders.' This might be said of any part of the country. But what is more important is, as the Committee observe, that 'hitherto the character of the general population and the vigilance of the authorities, assisted by the operation of the Defence of India Act, have been able to prevent graver mischief.' That is an assumption which we can always make in favour of any province. But there is no ground shown to justify a supposition that Bihar and Orissa stand exposed to any danger of anarchical crime being revived or taking root in that province.

"Let us now come to the Central Provinces. In paragraph 126, at page 139, of their Report, the Committee say: 'The Central Provinces did not, so far as we are aware, again come into contact with dangerous movements until February 1915.' The first was in 1908. From 1908 to 1915 they did not notice any trouble in the Central Provinces 'until in February one Nalini Mohan Mukharji, one of the Benares conspirators, was deputed by Rash Bihari to induce the troops at Jubbulpur to join the rising planned by the Ghadr party for that month.' But in the next page, in concluding the chapter, the Committee say:—

'The incident is a neat illustration of the way in which a revolutionary from outside sows evil seeds in a place free from indigenous disaffection and also of the way in which, by firm action taken in time, mischief can be arrested.'

Clearly, the Central Provinces do not support the case for proposed legislation.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1918.]

"Then, my Lord, let us look at the case of Madras. Regarding Madras, after reviewing certain events that took place there, the Committee have stated their conclusion in paragraph 153 of their Report. They say:

'Since the trial of the Tinnevelly conspirators (in 1911) there does not appear to have been any trouble from criminal revolutionary conspiracy in the Madras Presidency. We do not consider that there was any indigenous revolutionary movement in Madras, and but for the influence of a certain gentleman and the revolutionaries plotting in Paris and Pondicherry there would have been no trouble in Southern India.'

"Now, my Lord, whether the inference that the trouble in Southern India was due to the influence of a certain gentleman is correct or not, I cannot say; but the fact to which I wish to draw attention is that the Committee do not consider that there was any indigenous revolutionary movement in Madras, and that there had been no trouble there since 1912.

"I shall next take the case of the Punjab. In the Punjab, as the Committee have pointed out, the trouble arose in 1914 because of the return of certain emigrants from Canada and other countries. Now, my Lord, we know how that trouble arose. We know that there has been for a long time past a real genuine grievance in the minds of those Indians who have gone out of this country regarding the treatment which has been meted out to them in other parts of His Majesty's Empire. A certain number of Indians returned very much dissatisfied with the treatment they had received, and there were the incidents generally known as the Komagata Maru incident and the Budge Budge riot wherein a number of His Majesty's subjects were shot dead. With great respect, I submit that the fault for that deplorable incident did not lie entirely upon those poor people who died or were interned or otherwise suffered, but upon those also who could have taken steps to prevent misunderstanding. However, these and other emigrants returned to the Punjab and disaffection spread through some of them amongst a certain number of people. There was trouble, therefore, due in this case not to any indigenous revolutionary tendencies in the province, but to the return of a certain number of Indians from Canada and other countries. Then the Government of India was requested by the Punjab Government to pass the Defence of India Act and to frame rules under it by which they could deal with the situation. The Government of India did help the Punjab Government by passing that legislation at one sitting of this Council. The result was that by the application of the rules passed under the Defence of India Act, those unfortunate tendencies, these evil tendencies subsided in the Punjab. A number of persons were tried and punished by Special Tribunals; a certain number of persons were interned; there were other measures taken. But the trouble such as it was soon subsided. On the 31st January 916, the Punjab Government reported that the returned emigrants were settling down, and that the feeling among the Sikhs was reported to be more satisfactory than at any time for some years. And the great fact which stands out in connection with the whole episode is that the people at large helped the Government, they co-operated with the Government in tracing these misguided men, and even in trying to bring them to justice. In paragraph 145 of the Report the Rowlatt Committee say:—

'Under the Defence of India Act 30 persons were interned in jail, 113 were restricted to their villages, 25 were restricted to other villages. Under the Ingress into India Ordinance 331 persons were interned between October 1914 and December 1917, of whom 224 are accounted for by the period of October 1914 to April 1915. Two hundred and forty-two of the 331 have been released. Of the emigrant revolutionaries, 2,576 in all have been restricted to their villages. We are informed that so valuable has been the work of the Sikh advisory committees in regard to restrictions, interments, relaxations and releases, so strong has been their influence on the side of law and order, that although a considerable number of suspects continued to arrive in the Punjab after the troubled period, especially from the Far East, at the end of 1917 the total of persons restricted in any way under the Ingress Ordinance was only 914, while the number of those at first restricted and then released from restriction had risen to 1,513, and releases were steadily progressing.'

The Committee say that there was a Sikh official witness who said that there were thousands of persons who had returned to India with revolutionary ideas still at liberty. That may be the caution which an official anxious to show his zeal or show that he is a very far-sighted man, might express. But the fact remains that in the Punjab, what little disaffection was imported from outside has subsided, under the operation of the Defence of India Act, and I submit, my Lord, no justification has been shown—I should not say shown because I do not think the Committee could be accused of being anxious to show such justification,—no justification is to be found in the Rowlatt Committee's Report for perpetuating an extraordinary piece of repressive legislation in the Punjab. I will invite attention to what they say in paragraph 116. They say :—

'It is evident that the Gadhr movement in the Punjab came within an ace of causing widespread bloodshed. With the high-spirited and adventurous Sikhs the interval between thought and action is short. If captured by inflammatory appeals, they are prone to act with all possible celerity and in a fashion dangerous to the whole fabric of order and constitutional rule.'

Now I draw attention to this to show that the action taken by some Sikhs ought to be judged in the light of these remarks. They had cause for irritation, and to that irritation which they brought back when they landed in India other irritation was unfortunately added, as I submit with great respect but with a clear mind, by the action which was taken by the authorities at the time. The Sikhs being an impressionable people, if they were to be misled......

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—"The Komagata Maru incident!"

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"Yes, the Komagata Maru and the whole of the incidents which took place at Budge Budge. Now, my Lord, I draw attention to this to show that the Sikhs being the impressionable people that they are and the action of the Sikh Advisory Committee having led to calm being restored, the existence of any ill-feeling among the Sikhs does not justify the perpetuation of the Defence of India regulations.

"Then, my Lord, we come to Bengal. Every one knows that there was no revolutionary or anarchical crime in Bengal until 1905. Your Excellency and your distinguished colleague Mr. Montagu have dealt with the causes that gave rise to discontent in Bengal. In considering the present diseased state of the minds of a few persons in that province, we ought to bear in mind all that has preceded. The facts which have been stated by the Rowlatt Committee and which have been referred to in the Reforms Report show how discontent arose in Bengal. Up to 1905 Bengal was entirely free, I submit, from any revolutionary tendency. In 1904, Lord Curzon introduced the Universities Bill. As has been pointed out by the Committee that unfortunate measure marked the beginning of a period of misunderstanding between the Government and the people. Following closely in its wake, came the Partition of Bengal, carried out, violently carried out despite the protests of the people, and the evil effects of that measure are too well known to require any mention. Everybody knows what the people of Bengal did after that event. Everybody knows how memorials went up from a hundred platforms, from numerous associations, how meetings of respectful protest were held all over the Province of Bengal; how deputations waited on the Lieutenant Governor, how every effort was made in this country and in England to have that measure rescinded, but the attitude unfortunately taken up at that time was that the matter was 'a settled fact,' and that it should not be unsettled. Now, my Lord, in view of the attitude taken up by the Government, the people of Bengal were driven, in the first instance, to adopt every constitutional measure which it was open to them to adopt to impress the justice of their contention upon the Government. They adopted the vow of swadeshi, they adopted the vow of boycott. Their object was to draw the attention of the English public and the English Ministry to their piteous cry, that their province should not have been cut asunder as it had been, that it should yet be re-united. Those cries did not succeed in drawing the attention of the authorities. The authorities kept up a non possumus attitude; they would not be moved. The result was that all the leading men, the men who were in the forefront, the men of the most moderate views who had waited upon the Governors and the Government in deputation, who had sent up memorials, who had sent up reasoned objections, found themselves unable to satisfy the people why the Government should not reconsider the matter. It was then that ideas of a new character began to force themselves upon the minds of some people. As the attitude of the Government stiffened, the attitude of the younger men also stiffened The young men were naturally more impressionable than the older people. Those of us who are growing old know that this is a natural law. Now the younger men could not bear what the older men could bear, therefore naturally but regretfully, I say they were led into paths of unconstitutional agitation. And we know what happened in subsequent years With the prosecutions and the punishments of students the feeling between the authorities and the general public grew from bad to worse from day to day. It was in this state of things that some of the young men were led into the path of unconstitutional agitation. As I have said before, nobody deplores that this should have been so more than we Indians do. We regret it for the sake of the country generally, and for the sake of the young men in particular. We wish they had not been so misled. But in dealing with an evil, it is not statesmanship to shut one's eyes to the facts which gave rise to the evil, to propose remedies without recognising the root cause which gave rise to the disease. Now, my Lord, this state of things went on in Bengal. And though the partition was undone, was unsettled by His Majesty the King Emperor when he visited this country in 1911, the evil ideas which it had given rise to were still left behind. There were some men who had been led into the wrong paths of revolutionary ideas and methods, and they continued in them. This is a matter to be deplored, to be provided against and not to be overlooked in dealing with the situation. Then the war, which broke out in 1914, brought in another trouble. We had then the Gadhr party also making an effort to create mischief in India. Now, my Lord, I beg the Government to keep these two causes, or rather these two movements separate in considering the questions. Such disaffection, such sedition as existed before the war could be traced to causes, which one could understand The attempts which were made during the war by the Gadhr party and by the Germans to mislead Indians also was a cause which contributed to disaffection and to evil results. Now the war has ended, and happily with it are ended all German plots and all the evil which they gave rise to. Therefore, we can thankfully brush aside all the incidents relating to the Gadhr party, and we can fervently and reasonably hope that none of its evil results will be seen in India any more. So far as the problems created by the war are concerned, we are entitled to ask the Government to consider that the war being over, and a new state of things having come into existence, the evils which the war gave rise to will not be heard of again.

"We have then the other class of revolutionary ideas and crimes which did not, entirely according to the Report of the Rowlatt Committee, spring out of the war. Now here, too, my Lord, let us fairly and squarely look facts in the face. Let us recognise, as your Excellency and Mr. Montagu have done in your Report, what is the real state of things in the country. Your Excellency and your noble colleague have in the first chapter of your Report taken a survey of the political situation in India. You have pointed out how the desire of Indians to have a larger and larger share in the administration has been growing; you have pointed out how pledges have been unredeemed and promises unfulfilled, except partly; you have pointed out how good measures like those of self-government which have been promulgated have not been allowed to fructify; how grievances which Indians have been repeating year after year in a constitutional manner have not been attended to.

"Now, my Lord, for thirty years since the Congress came into existence in 1885, the thoughtful people of India, the most responsible men among the educated Indians, have year after year brought a number of grievances before the Government in this country and in England. They have stated in a most reasonable form what those grievances are, and they have in the most reasonable spirit asked for the remedy of those grievances. Some of them have been remedied; some reforms have been introduced for which we are thankful; but the measures that have been introduced have not been sufficient. The causes for complaint have not been sufficiently removed. There are three factors which have come into prominence out of this state of things. There are the economic causes of discontent, there are the social causes of discontent, and there are the political causes of discontent. The economic causes have been partially noted by the Rowlatt Committee where they point out how the bhadralog in Bengal have found it more and more difficult to find suitable employment; that the schools have not been sufficient; that the education has not been of a varied character, and that new avenues of careers have not been provided for young men which might relieve the pressure so far as the Government services and offices are concerned. They have received a largely literary education and the two doors open to them, namely, Government service, and the Bar, are both overcrowded, and cannot accommodate a limitless supply of men. That has given rise to serious hardship and discontent. Then there is the social factor. We know, unfortunately, that the dealings between Europeans and Indians in this country are not altogether as they should be. We know that even in the matter of the services the distinctions of race which ought to have been obliterated, which it was promised would be obliterated so long ago as 1833, which it was promised would be obliterated when the gracious Proclamation of Her Majesty was issued, have not been removed. We know that scholars and students in Bengal saw that a man so distinguished as Dr. P. C. Ray, now happily knighted, though he was acknowledged to be one of the finest scholars in the country, was still rotting in the Provincial Educational Service when men far inferior to him had been put into the Indian Educational Service. Young Indians saw many such cases. They saw their own countrymen, eminent and honest, devoted to learning, devoted to the cause of education, passed over in favour of younger men from England. All this tended to add to the discontent which was felt in Bengal. So also in regard to other matters. Then there were political causes. They found that there was much in the state of things in the country which the Congress had long sought to remedy, which the best men in the country had long endeavoured to rectify by constitutional appeals to Government which had not been rectified. The Committee have taken note of a letter in which one of the revolutionaries condemned the Congress. I can very well understand why he should condemn it. The Congress would not encourage revolutionary ideas and unconstitutional methods. And, finding that the appeals of the Congress, repeatedly addressed to the Government, over the course of 25 years or so, had failed to achieve their purpose, it is a matter for regret but not for surprise, that some young men were misled into thinking that unconstitutional methods would be more efficacious.

"Now, my Lord, what is the Rowlatt Committee's finding in regard to the origin of these revolutionary and anarchical ideas? They have found that the movement was the outcome of perverted religion and perverted patriotism. They have found that these men had got the idea that it was their religious duty, that it was their patriotic duty, to attempt to subvert the English Government. They have found that these young men were not prompted, at any rate in the beginning, by any sordid idea of personal gain. These young men made up their minds to sacrifice their lives in the cause to which wrongly they gave their adherence. Now that being so, what is it that should be done? I submit, my Lord, with great respect and with great reluctance, that the responsibility for this state of things coming into existence does not rest merely upon the young men who went the wrong path. It rests upon the Government, it rests upon the administration, both Provincial and Imperial, it rests upon all of us who failed to persuade the Government to adopt the right measures to remedy the grievances, to set them right. But while we take note of the causes, we do regret the effects. And why is it that I am asking your Excellency's attention and the attention of the Council to this fact now? It is for this reason, that, while we all deplore the existence of such anarchical tendencies, such revolutionary crime as exists in Bengal, we should take note of the root causes which have fed those diseases, and strike at those causes as well as their effects. It is only then that we can reasonably hope for a lasting improvement in the state of things which we all join in regretting and condemning. That is what I most respectfully and most earnestly submit to your Excellency's Government and to the Council. Let us adopt those measures which will be efficacious in removing these root causes as well as their effects.

"Now, my Lord, as I have shown, there are two classes of revolutionary and anarchical crimes. The one was connected with and sprang out of the war. So far as that is concerned, the existing provisions of the Defence of India Act are ample to deal with this class of cases. As my esteemed friend the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea has pointed out, those provisions will continue in force for six months after the war. Any disaffection, any anarchical or revolutionary tendency arising out of or by reason of the war, can well be dealt with under the Rules made under the Defence of India Act. So far as this class of cases is concerned, therefore, it is not that we are running away from making provision for anarchical or revolutionary crime. There is neither veiled nor unveiled sympathy in the minds of any reasonable Indian with such crime. We all deplore, we all detest it. We want to root it out, but we want to apply the right methods, and not to foster it by adopting wrong methods.

"As regards the other class of revolutionary crime which has arisen out of and has been fed by political, social and economic causes of discontent, we reasonably expect that as reforms are introduced things will alter and improve. Now let us see what is the state of things in regard to that? Whatever was the position before the war, during the war, His Majesty's Government have made a most momentous pronouncement in regard to their relation with India. They have said that the goal of British policy is responsible government in India. Now that goal may be achieved in five years, in ten years, in twenty-five years, or even in fifty years. But the goal having been fixed I have not the least doubt, no resonable man has any doubt, that that goal will be achieved. It must be. Your Excellency and your colleague, Mr. Montagu, have made a most memorable contribution, for which we are grateful, of proposals for progress towards that goal. These proposals are before the Government. Your own Report on constitutional reforms furnishes the most excellent reasons why we ought to take a fair, a judicial and even almost a lenient view of the misguided activities of the few men who have gone into the wrong path. You yourself have pointed out how many causes of complaint there have been; how many matters there are in which Indians have been complaining without their grievances having been redressed. You have formulated your proposals for redressing those grievances. The matter is before the Government. The Reform Committees which have been appointed will shortly recommend what should be the franchise, for the reformed Councils, and what should be the subjects which should be made over to them. We are expecting that the Statute which is to initiate the proposed changes will be introduced into Parliament about Easter.

"Now, my Lord, this is the hopeful state of things in which we find ourselves. There is another important circumstance to which I wish to invite attention. The war has come to an end. During the war India made a glorious contribution to the cause of the Empire. Whatever doubts, whatever misgivings some men might have had before the war about the loyalty of India, India has proved her loyalty by the blood which Indians have shed in the several theatres of war. India has proved her loyalty by the contribution in men, money and munitions which she has made, and to which your Excellency made a handsome reference even this morning. Now, in the face of that loyalty, in the face of that deep-seated, wide-spread, proved loyalty—loyalty which has been demonstrated beyond cavil or dispute, what is it that we, the people of India, expect of the Government of India? We expect that even if there should be some misguided youths who have not yet been influenced by the new trend of events, we should deal with patience with them. We should trust to liberal and just measures of reform in order to win them over to the side of constitutionalism and of the Government.

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

"Now, my Lord, in the Report to which I have referred so many times, your Lordship and the Right Hon'ble Mr. Montagu said:—

'We have tried to describe India's chief pre-occupations at the time when war broke out. The war has affected India in many ways, but above all it has become the predominant factor in the present political situation. Whatever qualifications may be needed in the case of particular classes, the people of India as a whole are in genuine sympathy with the cause which the Allies represent. The reasons of the entry of Britain into the war appealed to the educated classes, and they have never faltered in their allegiance. However much they may find fault with the Government, they are true in their loyalty to the British Crown, and, as it would be easy to show from their own lips, they fully recognise and value the higher aims of British policy.'

In the next paragraph your Excellency and your noble colleague said:—

'The loyalty of the country generally was emphasised by the attempt made by very small sections of the population to create trouble.'

I submit, my Lord, that with that deliberate conclusion which you have embodied in the Report and which represents nothing but the fact, I submit that with that conclusion established beyond cavil or dispute, we were led to expect that even if the evil tendencies had not entirely died out, the Government of India would resist, most strongly resist, any suggestion for legislation of the character that is now proposed; that in recognition of the part that the people of India have played in this great war, the Government of India would stand forth boldly and firmly to oppose any suggestion that there should be a perpetuation of special emergency measures which were adopted for the period of the war under the Defence of India Act; and I must say, my Lord, with respect, but with regret, that we have been disappointed beyond expression that the Government of India itself should have come forward at this juncture with the proposed legislation. I ask, my Lord, that the Government should consider its position. I ask that the Government should not lead people to think that all the great sacrifices which they have made during the war have already begun to be forgotten. The Government should give no ground, no room for thinking that the magnificent effort of India during the war has already begun to be forgotten. The Government should show by their acts that they still do trust the people, and that what they say about the deep loyalty of the people is a reality which they believe in and not an unreal sentiment expressed to flatter the people. I submit, my Lord, with great respect, that that is the attitude which the Government of India should adopt. I fear that by taking up the attitude which the Government of India have taken up, they have already to a great extent destroyed—I regret to say it—the excellent results which had been produced by four years of joint effort during the war, four years of comradeship in the war, and all the sentiments of mutual trust and esteem which it engendered. But it is not too late yet to mend, it is not too late yet to rectify the mistake; and I appeal to your Excellency that the Government should, with that sense of responsibility which the Hon'ble the Home Member asked, and rightly asked, us non-official Members to display, I appeal with all respect and deference that the Government of India should reconsider the situation and as a very special measure withdraw the Bill. Now, my Lord, what would be the result if this recommendation is accepted? I know the Government of India, constituted as it is, does not easily go back upon any legislation which it has set its heart upon. We know that to our regret; but I submit that, if in view of the very special circumstances of the situation, in view of the very special circumstances which the war has brought about, if at this time the Government should unite with the non-official Members in burying the Bill, no evil will result to the country, no evil will result to anybody, and the Defence of India Act will continue in operation for some six months after the war. The ordinary legislation which stands in the Statute-book provides ample means for dealing with all classes of crime, and if six months after the war is over, if after-measures have been introduced to remove the causes which have fed discontent, which have given rise to revolutionary and anarchical tendencies, the Government should still find that there are young men who are working in wrong paths, and that the ordinary law is not enough to deal with them, then, my Lord, would be the time for the Government to consider what measures should be adopted—not a measure like the present one—but what other reasonable measures should be adopted.

"It is proposed that this Bill before us should extend to the whole of India. I have endeavoured to show that the Rowlatt Committee themselves have pointed out that revolutionary tendencies and crime have not been discovered in every province equally. They have shown that in some provinces there has been no indigenous activity of that kind, and I submit that with that Report before us we cannot reasonably legislate equally for all India. In the summary of their conclusions, paragraph 166, they set forth the conclusions at which they had arrived. They say:—

'We have now investigated all the conspiracies connected with the revolutionary movement. In Bombay, they have been purely Brahmin and mostly Chitpavan.'

The report shows that it is not a living thing in Bombay now. There did exist certain individuals there, they were punished for their crimes and there was an end of their activity many years ago.

'In Bengal', the Report says, 'the conspirators have been young men belonging to the educated middle classes.' Now that is a statement to which I beg to invite your Excellency's particular attention and the particular attention of the Council too. It is not that you are dealing with criminals or men addicted to crime. The Report says: 'The conspirators have been young men belonging to the educated middle classes.' I submit that a Government which has not been able to wean such young men from the evil tendencies in question, is not justified in blaming those young men alone for such tendencies. It is the part of Government, it is the part of statesmanship, to take every step which can rightly be taken to wean these young men, who a few years before did not show any criminal tendencies, from the path into which they have been misled. Then the Report goes on to say:—

'Their propaganda has been elaborate, persistent and ingenious.'

True, but that only shows that they are men of intelligence, men of education, and it should be easier therefore to wean them from the path of evil:—

'In their own province,' the Report continues, 'it has produced a long series of murders and robberies.'

This is unfortunately true; but we must try to adopt measures which will show these young men how very deplorable it is that they should indulge in any such activities, that they should commit murders and robberies, measures which will show them that a new chapter has opened, a new day is dawning on India—a day of liberalised administration, a day of greater recognition of the rights of Indians, of more adequate provision of careers for them, and of the treatment of Indians generally as they should be treated in their own country.

'In Bihar and Orissa', the Report says, "In Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Central Provinces and Madras, it took no root, but occasionally led to crime and disorder. In the Punjab the return of emigrants from America, bent on revolution and bloodshed, produced numerous outrages and the Ghadr conspiracy of 1915.'

" But I think we can safely say that it is not now a factor in the Punjab which would justify the proposed legislation.

"There is another sentence, my Lord, in that part of their Report to which I beg to invite attention. After stating that 'all these plots have been directed towards one and the same objective, the overthrow by force of British rule in India'; a silly attempt—'sometimes they have been isolated; sometimes they have been interconnected; sometimes they have been encouraged and supported by German influence.'

" But the Committee go on to say—'all have been successfully encountered with the support of Indian loyalty.' I ask you, my Lord, I ask whether in fairness, whether in justice to that loyalty, the Government should not say 'No' to the proposals of legislation before us, whether it should not still rely upon that loyalty to curb these evil tendencies and to eradicate it from the land. They go on to say: 'It is not surprising that in dealing with conspiracies so elusive and carefully contrived Government has been compelled to resort to extraordinary legislation.' But that work has been done; that extraordinary legislation will still be available for six months after the war; let it have its course till then and be done with it. Let us hope and pray that the evil will be dead in the new state of things which will dawn.

"My Lord, in the presence of this report, I cannot understand how the Government could make up its mind to propose legislation of the retrograde and repressive character, subversive of the principles of justice for which England has always stood up, which are the glory of the English constitution subversive of so many ideas of justice for the protection of the liberty of individuals? How could Government have made up its mind to introduce such a legislation and to propose that it should extend over the whole of India? I shall not be content with a mere general statement of the character of the legislation. I would invite the attention of your Excellency and of the Council to the actual proposals which the Committee have to put forward and show how they themselves looked at this question. In the first instance they have rightly raised a doubt to which attention has already been drawn by Mr. Chanda, about the competence of the Indian Imperial Legislative Council to introduce and pass a measure of such extreme severity and so far inconsistent with the established rules of evidence and justice. In paragraph 200 they say 'In making suggestions for legislation we have not considered at all whether it could be argued that such legislation is in any respect beyond the competence of the Governor General in Council. We have no authority to lay down the law on any such point, and any provisional assumption as the basis of our proposals would only cause embarrassment. We have proceeded therefore on the basis that any suggestions of ours which it may be decided to adopt will be given effect to by some legislature competent for the purpose.' I should like the Hon'ble the Home Member to tell the Council whether any note was taken by the Government of this paragraph in the report of the Rowlatt Committee, and, if so, whether any reference was made to His Majesty's Law Officers in England, to consult them on the question raised by the Committee.......

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"I should like to intervene, my Lord, at this stage and state that no reference has been made to the law officers in England. There is no basis upon which such a reference could be made. If either of the two learned lawyers who have suggested that this Council is not competent to legislate, would give us something more to go upon than merely that paragraph in the Report, we shall be glad to meet them; but at present there is not in my mind the faintest shadow of doubt that we have got the power to legislate. Whether we should do so is another question."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"I thank the Hon'ble the Law Member for telling us that no reference was made. I take that as a fact, but I think in view of the fact that a doubt was raised by a committee which the Government themselves had appointed, a committee that was presided over by a Judge of the High Court of England and consisted of three other gentlemen whom the Government had selected to advise them, this matter deserved to be treated with greater consideration than evidently the Government treated it with. However, I am not going at present—possibly I may do so later—to give my friend all the reasons upon which a doubt has been raised as to whether this Council is or is not competent to deprive any fellow-subject of ours of the safeguards of liberty which the English law provides for him, which ensure that no man's liberty shall be interfered with, that none shall be deprived of it for a day without a regular trial according to the ordinary rules of evidence and procedure laid down therefor. We have heard a great deal of the British character of the Indian administration. We have heard a great deal of the British sense of justice and of fair-play. I ask the Council, I particularly ask my Hon'ble friends, who are members of the British community, I ask them to say how they can really reconcile themselves to proposals which are embodied in the legislations we are dealing with. It seems to us impossible, incredible, that the British members of the Government should have without the fullest consideration agreed to such a course being adopted.......

(At this stage His Excellency the President left the Chair and the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes took the Chair.)

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"May I ask, Sir, whether the Council may not now adjourn? The rules provide that the Council shall ordinarily go on till 4 o'clock and it is now half past four. I have not gone through two-thirds of what I have to say, and I shall not be able to.........

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I am afraid you must go on with the remaining third."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I do not know that I shall be able to finish."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I hope you will."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I definitely propose, Sir, that the Council should now adjourn. If you will kindly turn to the rules, rule No. 3 of the rules for the Conduct of the Legislative Business of the Council says 'The Council shall ordinarily meet at 11 A.M., and shall not prolong its sitting after 4 P.M., unless the President otherwise directs.' There has been no direction that it should be prolonged, and I submit therefore that under the imperative words of the rules, namely, that the Council shall not prolong its sitting after 4 P.M., the Council should now adjourn.

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"If you think it necessary I will direct that the Council shall continue its sitting."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I again submit a point of order as to whether that direction should have been given before my motion was made. I submit if the direction had been given before the motion was made, it should have been unquestionable, but as it has been made upon my motion, I request the Vice-President to consider whether my motion ought not to prevail."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"It is not open to the Hon'ble Member to question my ruling. I rule that the Hon'ble Member must proceed."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Mr. Vice-President, I have dealt before with the conditions which the end of the war has brought into existence, and I have submitted that in view of those conditions the Government should reconsider its decision. I have also submitted that when a question has been raised as to whether this Council is competent to deal with this legislation, it is at any rate a matter which should not be rushed through in the way in which it is proposed to rush it through the Council. In regard to the question as to whether this Council is or is not competent to deal with the Bill, I will deal with this matter later. Now, Sir, the position being what it is, I submit that the Government should consider the situation. I ask the Government to consider what are the provisions of the Bill to which it asks the Council to give its support. Let us look into them. In the first place as I have already said it says—'Whereas it is expedient to make provision that in special circumstances, the ordinary criminal law should be supplemented and emergency powers should be exercisable by the Government.' Now, Sir, to make provision in special circumstances, to supplement the ordinary criminal law is a matter which, I think, is open to exception. If it was meant to pass a special Bill providing for a special procedure, as the Defence of India Act did, we could understand it. It would have been a measure of a temporary character, it would expire by efflux of time whenever that time was fixed. But, in this case, it is sought to make the measure a part of the permanent law of the land; it is sought to incorporate it in the Indian Penal Code and Criminal Procedure Code. My first submission is, that if there was a clear necessity for such a measure, if the Defence of India Act was not in existence, a special measure of a temporary character should have been passed, and this attempt to incorporate the measure in the permanent law of the land should have been abandoned. Then by sub-clause (2) of clause 1 the provisions are extended to the whole of British India. I submit that in view of the Report of the Rowlatt Committee, the Government should seriously consider whether there is any justification for passing any all-India legislation of this character. Let us assume for one moment, which I hope will not be the fact, that in Bengal tendencies of an evil character will not entirely disappear after the war. I am very sorry to make such an assumption, but let us do so. In that case it might be left to the Bengal Government to introduce legislation to deal with the crime that may show itself in that province. Does that justify the casting of a slur on the loyalty of the whole of India; the passing of a measure which would lead the outside world to think that India was seething with disloyalty and discontent. The Punjab, the United Provinces, Bombay and the Central Provinces need not be grouped together with a province where revolutionary crime may be shown to exist. That is my second point. Part III says 'If the Governor General in Council is satisfied that scheduled offences have been or are being committed in the whole or any part of British India to such an extent as to endanger the public safety, he may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make a declaration to that effect, and thereupon the provisions of this Part shall come into force in the area specified in the notification.' What are these scheduled offences? They include offences which constitute grave charges against the person and honour of people. Is it right that they should be tried in that fashion? You want to provide for a speedy trial of such offences. It is evident to anybody that the Government of this country and of England have provided a most elaborate and careful procedure for the trial of grave offences; summary trials are restricted to ordinary petty offences, trials of a grave character are to be Sessions Court trials or High Court trials; a very elaborate procedure has been provided, the question of delay has not been overlooked and the mere circumstance that it would cause delay need not lead anyone to propose legislation of the drastic character now before us. May I ask the Hon'ble the Home Member, or any member of the Government, what will be the gain on the one side by a speedy trial of such offences? There are certain offences the speedy trial of which is contemplated. It is not said that there shall be no trial, all that the Act seeks is a speedy trial, there is no suggestion to the contrary. It is not shown that there will be such a large number of offences of the character contemplated that the Courts will not be able to deal with them. The Rowlatt Committee have themselves shown a judicial mind when they state that they cannot say what the state of things will be after the war. In Chapter XVII they say 'The last part of our task is to advise as to the legislation, if any, necessary to enable Government to deal effectively with the difficulties that have arisen in dealing with conspiracies. This as expressed appears to us to be applicable to the state of circumstances under which the difficulties referred to were encountered. These difficulties have, however, been circumvented for the time being by special temporary legislation, and they have not been in operation at the time of our inquiry. When this legislation lapses, circumstances may have altered and the position may be better or worse.' They have not shut their eyes to the possibility that circumstances may so alter as to make it unnecesary to have legislation of a special character.' They say it may be worse, no doubt, no sober, no responsible man can definitely and firmly say that there shall be no crime in India after the war, no crime of a revolutionary or criminal character. England herself has not been entirely free nor have other European countries, while the bulk of the population has remained loyal. A maniac, a misguided man, one suffering from some aberration of the mind may commit some evil act, but that would not justify the passing for the country as a whole of such drastic legislation. They also say that when this legislation lapses circumstances may have altered and the position may be better. There have been two possibilities foreshadowed, one is that circumstances may alter and the position may be better; if that possibility should happily be realised, then there will be no need from the point of view of the Rowlatt Committee for such legislation. If unfortunately the other alternative should be realised, that is to say if circumstances should show that the position is worse then, as Mr. Jinnah has pointed out, the Council will regretfully but firmly lend its support to any special legislation which may be necessary.'

(At this stage His Excellency the President resumed the Chair.)

After referring to the special legislation which has enabled the Government to deal with cases of a special character by the help of the special temporary legislation which has been passed, the Rowlatt Committee go on to say in paragraph 175 of their Report.

'When this legislation lapses, circumstances may have altered and the position may be better or worse.'

"Now, I submit, my Lord that there are two possibilities which they hold before themselves. One is that circumstances may so alter and things may be so much better that the need for legislation may not arise. I submit we should hope and pray that this happier alternative may be realised. If it is realised then there will be no cause for such legislation as is proposed. If unfortunately the other unhappier alternative should be realised, then as my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah has pointed out, it will be time for Government to propose a measure like the one before us or somewhat on the lines of the one that is proposed, less drastic I hope, but more amenable to the rules of justice than the present measure, but such a measure as may be needed to deal with the special circumstances which may have been found to exist. The Committee go on to say :—

'We do not think it is for us to speculate nicely on these matters.'

True, my Lord, it was not for them to speculate, but it is a serious thing and the Government and the Council have to speculate very carefully upon these matters, and they cannot in fairness to the people shut out, they cannot rule out, the other possibility, the brighter, the more hopeful possibility, of things improving. Then the Committee go on to say :—

'We must of course keep in view that the present war will have come to an end, but cannot say with what result or with what ulterior consequential effects or possibilities of consequential effects upon the situation.'

They did take note, my Lord, that these were possibilities. They did bear in mind that these possibilities might be realised, and I submit, therefore, that it would be fair and wise to hope for these possibilities and to work for these possibilities, and not to legislate in the conviction that these happier possibilities will not be realised and that evil will come. The Committee further say :—

'On the other hand, the persons interned under the Defence of India Act will be due for release and the terms of imprisonment of many dangerous convicts will be coming to an end.'

True, my Lord. But has not the Government already released a large number? Were we not told to-day that a large number has been released and a growing number is going to be released? Is there any danger or apprehension that they would again fall into bad ways? If danger should arise, the Statute-book does contain any number of laws, preventive and punitive, which should enable the Government to deal with cases that may arise. Then the second thing the Committee say is 'Further, there will, especially in the Punjab, be a large number of disbanded soldiers, among whom it may be possible to stir up discontent.' This, my Lord, is a most unkind sentiment. In view of the sacrifices which the soldiers of the Punjab have made, in view of the deep-seated loyalty which they have shown by sacrificing their lives and everything else that they could in the cause of the Empire, I must say, with due respect, that it would have been well that Government had not taken this view. I no doubt see that they have said that 'it will be possible to stir up discontent.' But men who have stood the trial, men who have withstood all temptations and all efforts to mislead them during the prevalence of this great world-wide war, may be trusted to stand firm in their loyalty if later on anybody should wean them away from their loyalty to the King Emperor. These soldiers, my Lord, have seen something of the world. They have seen what a war is. They know better than people who have not been to the front what a war is, and I am sure they have also seen the majesty and the might of the British power. They are the least likely persons among whom discontent can be aroused now, and if the Government will take the right measures to recognise in practice, in reality, with generosity, the sacrifices which they have made, to improve the conditions under which they live, to educate their sons, to find more food for them, to make it possible for them to have more clothing, to provide them with better comforts, to enable them to live lives better than the lives of mere ordinary animals, I am sure no efforts will succeed to wean them away from their loyalty to the King Emperor and the Crown. At any rate, my Lord, sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. Let us wait in patience. It is only just and fair that we should wait with patience until these soldiers who have fought in the cause of the Empire show any tendency to be carried away by evil counsels, then it will be time, not to adopt miserable measures like the one that is before us now, but to devise measures of a gentle character, the object of which should be to prevent them from falling into wrong hands and to keep them in the path of duty and honour. However, the Committee go on to say :—

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

> 'Nevertheless if we thought it clear that the measures taken against the revolutionary movement under the Defence of India Act had so broken it that the possibility of the conspiracies being revived could be safely disregarded, we should say so.'

They could not say so. I do not quarrel with them for their not being able to say so. But they say, 'if we thought it clear'. They do not think it clear, but they do not say that it is clear that the measures taken against the revolutionary movement under the Defence of India Act have not broken that movement. They do not say so. They simply say that they are not clear that the measures taken against the revolutionary movement have so broken it. Well, it is for the Government to consider whether it is clear that the steps that have been taken under the Defence of India Act and also the other circumstances which have come into existence, whether the changes that the world has seen, that India has seen, and that the people of India expect that they are going to see, whether those changes and those circumstances will not bring about such a change in conditions as to make it impossible that the revolutionary movement should again have any life in this country. They say 'if they felt clear' that the possibility of the conspiracies being revived could be safely disregarded, they would not have recommended such legislation, and I submit, my Lord, that the Government and the Council should not shut out that possibility from their purview and therefore should hesitate to legislate.

'That is not our view, and it is on this footing that we report,' say the Committee. Well, I do not quarrel with the view of the Committee which they honestly believe to be their view. But the Committee may possibly have come to a wrong conclusion. It often happens, I mean no disrespect to the Committee when I submit that the path of those who have to deal with certain events and to advise as to those events is different from the path of the Statesmen who have to consider what measures should or should not be introduced in the country. Judges of the High Court may be very eminent men to express an opinion as to what alteration should or should not be made in the law, but it is not for them to suggest policies; their function is to decide cases and not to devise or suggest policies or legislation of so large, comprehensive and drastic a character as the one you have proposed.

"With due deference to the Committee, therefore, I submit that they were wrong in recommending that this legislation should be undertaken, and think that they should have leaned more to the possibility of a happier alternative being realised rather than considered the other possibility was greater.

"Then, my Lord, the next thing to which I shall invite attention in the report of the Committee is in paragraph 177. They have said clearly—'The measures which we shall submit are of two kinds, namely, Punitive, by which term we mean measures better to secure the conviction and punishment of offenders, and Preventive, i.e., measures to check the spread of conspiracy and the commission of crime. We may say at once that we do not expect very much from punitive measures.'

"Now, my Lord, they say they do not expect very much from punitive measures. That being so, it was well that these punitive measures had not been suggested, but they are there and they rely upon the preventive measures. It is the preventive measures which they rely upon, and it is with these that the Council is at present dealing. Now, my Lord, what do the preventive measures recommend and what are the difficulties which the Committee felt confronted with in suggesting these remedies I will invite attention to those difficulties. One great difficulty they have felt has been the want of evidence. In Chapter XVI they say, in paragraph 169 :—

'The main reason why it has not been possible by the ordinary machinery of the criminal law to convict and imprison on a larger scale those guilty of outrages and so put down crime is simply want of sufficient evidence.'

That is the conclusion they have arrived at. Now, my Lord, they refer to the cases in which this difficulty was felt. Now, if there is want of sufficient evidence, the right thing to do is to make provision for getting that evidence in a reasonable, just and proper way, and not by allowing evidence which by ages of tradition of British justice has been excluded as evidence. It is want of sufficient evidence which they are confronted with. Is it better that some persons who are guilty should escape or that many men should be exposed to the danger of their liberties, their honour being affected by a wrong piece of evidence being accepted. Evidence which has not hitherto been acceptable to British Courts should not become acceptable simply because a want of evidence has led to the acquittance or discharge of certain persons who are accused. This is not the only country where a number of persons who have been suspected of crime have been discharged or acquitted for want of evidence. There are other countries where this difficulty has been felt. The English lawyers and jurists have jealously guarded against any attacks upon the rules of evidence which constitute the best guarantee that justice, pure justice, shall be administered to every subject of His Majesty. Another difficulty which they have mentioned is the difficulty in establishing proof of possession of arms. They say :—'Where incriminating articles such as arms or documents are found, it is often hard to bring home the possession to any particular individuals. This occurs where the same premises are occupied jointly by undivided families, or even where a house or garden is used as a mess or meeting place for a number of youths.'

"Now, my Lord, what is the remedy? They go on, and I will quote the portion that follows :—'The latter difficulty is illustrated by the following passages from the judgment of the Sessions Judge of Dacca in the Adabari arms affair :—

'I hold it safe to infer that there was a close connection between the young men seen running away and the arms found, and that the garden was used as a meeting place for young men banded together for an illegal purpose. I also think it safe to infer that the appellants were members of this band. But I do not think it safe to infer that every member of the band had control of the arms and ammunition concealed in the garden. Unless this inference can be drawn the charge against the appellants has not been established . . . . There is no evidence of the appellants being leading members of the band . . . . . From Lakhan chaukidar's evidence it appears that the teacher called Sarada was their captain, who used to teach them lathi play. For the reasons stated I hold that it had not been proved that the appellants had the revolvers and ammunition in their possession or under their control.'

That is a quotation from the judgment of the Sessions Judge of Dacca and then follows the following remarks by the Committee :—

'It is also true that evidence as to identity has in practice to be overwhelming. Having regard to the difficulties to which we have adverted, it is possible that the principle is a sound one. The same may perhaps be said of the feeling which seems to pervade these trials that there is but a slight presumption that a witness, however serious his testimony, is telling the truth. Indeed, even where a prisoner has confessed before a Magistrate in a way that makes his statement evidence under the Indian Evidence Act, it is common for his advocate at the trial formally and seriously to 'retract' the statement for him. This is treated as making some difference. Even this may be a sound practice. But if it is, it only shows how difficult it is to establish anything.'

"It may be difficult; it may be regrettable; it may be that some criminals will escape punishment; but, as the Committee have themselves observed, it is possible that the principle is a sound one, it is possible that this is a sound practice and it is proposed that this practice should be departed from, should be given up, and evidence should be admitted which has hitherto not been treated by English judges and jurists either in this country or in England as proper legal evidence. I submit, therefore, my Lord, that the recommendations of the Committee are not such that the Government are bound to accept them. They felt a difficulty, they did not feel clear that the state of things which would come into existence after the war would be sufficiently satisfactory to make it unnecessary for any special legislation to be continued. They did not feel clear about it. The Government might feel clearer. They have made the recommendations on the basis that possibly the other alternative might come into existence. But, I submit that there is very slender ground upon which to base proposals of the drastic character which have been presented to the Council to-day.

"Now, my Lord, let us examine these proposals in some detail. In Part I it is said that 'if the Governor General in Council is satisfied that scheduled offences are prevalent in the whole or any part of British India, and that it is expedient in the interests of the public safety to provide for the speedy trial of such offences, he may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make a declaration to that effect.' Now, I have submitted before that the attainment of a speedy trial is not a need sufficiently grave, sufficiently serious, sufficiently in the interests of justice and the public interests to justify the introduction of a measure the object of which is to curtail the length of trials. It is not a sufficient justification. Even under the special procedure that is proposed in this Bill a trial may be protracted for several months. There may be any number of witnesses called; there will be three High Court Judges sitting. They will not record the evidence verbatim, but still there will be three High Court Judges sitting, they will take time in examining witnesses, and as there will be no appeal, a person who has the misfortune to be accused will have to do all that he can to strain every nerve, to spend every pice that he has, in order to procure the most excellent counsel's aid, to defend himself. I am not at all sure, my Lord, I say it with confidence. I am not at all sure that really, in practice, the length of the trials will be shortened. It will be that there will not be trials in the ordinary course, first before the Magistrate, then before the Sessions Judge, then before the High Court. It will be so, and possibly some time may be saved. But I am not at all certain that the time saved will be at all commensurate or at all worthy of the consideration of being weighed in the scale against the danger of injustice to the accused. Besides, my Lord—I can understand that during the time of war, when there are possibilities of contagion spreading in the country, the Government might desire to have trials speeded up. That may be possible, but when we come to normal times, when the war has come to an end and when peace has been fully restored, I cannot understand why there should be this desire for speedy trials. I ask you, my Lord, to consider what it means. It may mean that while you are following your motor car procedure, there may be some poor innocent soul crushed under the weight of that car, under the speed of that car. To him it may be the end of his life, his liberty and everything he holds dear. It will be no consolation to the State, it will be no gain to the public interests, that a man's trial was finished in 2 months rather than in 6 or in one month rather than in 3; but it may mean the loss of everything that a man holds dear, and I would ask any Member of the Council how he would like to contemplate the matter if he found himself placed in that position. I submit let us not secure a speedy trial at the sacrifice of doing an irreparable injury to a fellow man.

"Besides, looking at it from another point of view, as I have said, if a single Joint Magistrate hears a case and makes a preliminary investigation, if the matter comes into the Sessions Court, many matters and much of the evidence is weeded out, and by the time the case comes before the Sessions Court, both the prosecution and the defence know where they stand. If the matter comes straight before such a tribunal as is contemplated, I am not at all certain that that will not involve longer delay, for the man knowing that he has no appeal from the judgment which that Court may pass, will be anxious to produce every possible evidence that he can and will have to summon all the witnesses that he can, and I therefore apprehend that the trial will not really be a speedy trial but that it will be prolonged.

" Now, my Lord, assuming that this condition for the application of Part I is found to exist, what follows? The Governor General in Council declares that certain scheduled offences are prevalent in the whole or any part of British India. I ask you, my Lord, seriously to ask yourself whether, after the war, it is likely that the offences which are mentioned in the Schedule or which it is proposed to put in the Schedule, are likely to prevail in the whole or any large part of British India? I submit that it is not likely. There may be spasmodic cases; there may be some few instances here and there of misguided young men or other people falling into wrong paths; but it is not likely that offences of this kind will prevail over a large area in any part of the country. Well, suppose that the Governor General is satisfied that such offences are prevalent in any part of the country, then what happens? In this country, my Lord, the Government has to take its information from the subordinate Government. The Governor General in Council is not directly in touch—except in very small parts of the country—perhaps with the local administration. The Local Governments are the Governments which must supply information to the Governor General as to whether scheduled offences are prevalent in the part of the country which is under them or not. The Local Governments must gather their information from the Police Department and from their subordinate officials. Now, my Lord, in this country we know what has happened in the past. While we deplore the evil tendencies which some young men have betrayed, while we deplore the crimes into which some young men have been betrayed, while we deplore the crimes that have been committed, we cannot forget that the Police has not a thoroughly clean record in this country, and the police, my Lord, have been guilty in the past of outrageous crimes which I do not want to refer at greater length. They have been brought to the notice of the Government in this Council, they have been brought to the notice of Parliament in England. Now, I do not want to say that those things will be repeated. I hope and pray they will not be; but is it right to shut out the possibility and to think that the police will always act in absolutely the right way, that there shall not sometimes be mischief created in order to show that in certain parts of the country certain crimes are prevalent? I do not say that it will be—I hope it will not be—but I beg the Government and the Council to remember the possibility of such ideas being circulated. And what will be the result? In that area, under clause 4 of the Bill,—

'Where the Local Government is of opinion that the trial of any person accused of a scheduled offence should be held in accordance with the provisions of this Part, it may order any officer of Government to prefer a written information to the Chief Justice against such person.'

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; The President.]

"Now, my Lord, the clause says 'where the Local Government is of opinion that the trial, etc., etc.'. I ask you, my Lord, how is the Local Government to arrive at a decision? It must have the fullest evidence before it before it can come to a safe and satisfactory conclusion that a fellowman should be deprived of the safeguards of justice which the ordinary law provides. I should like to know how many members of the Government would like to take that responsibility upon themselves, and I should like further to ask that if such cases should be numerous, is not the danger of their coming to wrong conclusions one which ought to be taken into account in dealing with this legislation? The Local Government being of opinion that the trial of any person accused of a scheduled offence should be held in accordance with the provisions of this part, it may order any officer of Government to prefer a written information to the Chief Justice against such person. What follows?

'No order under sub-section (1) shall be made in respect of, or be deemed to include, any person who has been committed under the Code for trial before a High Court, but, save as aforesaid, an order under that sub-section may be made in respect of any scheduled offence whether such offence was committed before or after the issue of the notification under section 3.'

"What follows, then, my Lord, is that this man is not given an opportunity before the Chief Justice to show cause why his case should not be tried under the special provisions herein referred to. He is not to be given that opportunity. His fate is sealed. The Local Government being of the opinion that he should be tried under the special provisions of this Bill any officer can give written information to the Chief Justice and the Chief Justice is powerless. The Chief Justice has not the power to ask the man to show cause why he should not be tried according to the ordinary law, or why he should be tried according to this law. The Chief Justice has no option; he must try the man according to the special provisions of this Bill.

"Now, my Lord, what is the material upon which this order is to be passed? Sub-clause (3) of clause 4 says:

'The information shall state the offence charged and so far as known the name, place of residence, and occupation of the accused.'

The Hon'ble Mr. A. P. Muddiman:—"I desire to draw your Excellency's attention to the fact that this debate is on a motion to refer the Bill to Select Committee, and the general principles of the Bill only should be discussed at this stage, but it seems to me that the Hon'ble Pandit is taking each clause separately."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"May I explain, my Lord.. ...

His Excellency the President:—"You are not at liberty to discuss the details of the Bill."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I beg your pardon, my Lord. I want to explain the matter from my point of view for your Excellency's consideration."

His Excellency the President:—"There are certain rules and principles of debate which are usually observed on these occasions, and on this particular motion the principle of the Bill only is to be discussed, and then subsequently you will be able to discuss questions of detail. I think you are abusing the patience of the Council in pursuing any other course this afternoon."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, I am sorry that you think I am abusing the patience of this Council.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Mr. A. P. Muddiman; The President.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

I think I am doing my duty. I submit for your Excellency's consideration—I will stop if your Excellency wishes—that here is a Bill which it is proposed to refer to the Select Committee; a special procedure has been followed; I can only speak once on this motion; and I am giving all the reasons I can for saying why this proposal to refer the Bill to Select Committee should be defeated, should be dropped by the Council. I submit, my Lord, with great deference, that I am entitled to give every single reason that I can in support of my proposal; but if your Excellency thinks I should not, I will stop...........

The Hon'ble Mr. A. P. Muddiman:—"I only meant to suggest that the Hon'ble Pandit was taking every individual provision and discussing it separately. I did not suggest that the general principles should not be discussed by the Hon'ble Member."

His Excellency the President:—"No one has suggested that the Hon'ble Member should not discuss the general principles of the Bill; but as the Hon'ble the Secretary to the Council pointed out, you are dealing with each particular provision of the Bill separately. I hope the Hon'ble Pandit will obey my ruling and discuss the principles and not the details of the Bill."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I bow to your Excellency's ruling. I shall refer to the provisions of the Bill only in so far as they involve a consideration of the principles. I shall do that and in doing so my reference to the provisions will be only for that purpose and to that extent.

Now, the next point —may I continue, my Lord?"

His Excellency the President:—"Proceed."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"The next point to which I would invite attention as another matter of principle involved is that referred to in section 6.

That section says :—

'The Court may sit for the whole or any part of a trial at such place or places in the province as it may consider desirable :

Provided that the Governor General in Council, if he is satisfied that such a course is expedient in the interests of justice, may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct that the Court shall sit for the whole or any part of a trial at such place or places as he may specify in the notification.'

"Now, I submit, my Lord, that one of the principles of British justice is that the trial of a person who is accused of a crime shall be held in open Court at a place which is open to the public, and I submit that this provision which gives power to the Court to decide that a trial shall be held in a particular place, is an infringement and violation of that principle. To that extent, I submit, it goes against the principle which is at present embodied in the Codes.

"Then, my Lord, I come to another very important principle which is embodied in section 10. I should be very sorry if I should give the impression by any of my remarks that I am not fully respecting your Excellency's ruling. I am trying to limit myself to questions of principle, and I hope your Excellency will please take it from me that I have no wish to say one word more so far as the details are concerned, except in so far as they refer to principles. Now, my Lord, in section 10 it is said that :

'The Court shall be required to make a memorandum only of the substance of the evidence of each witness examined and, subject to the adjournment provided for by section 9, shall not be bound to adjourn any trial for any purpose, unless such adjournment is in its opinion necessary in the interests of justice.'

" Now, my Lord, one of the most important principles relating to the recording of evidence has been that the exact words uttered by a man when he was arrested or by other men who were examined at a particular time should be before the Court. I have myself had the honour of practising the profession of law for many years, and I know, my Lord, how careful, how jealous the Court is in noting down the exact words which have been used by an accused person. This practice has been so strongly insisted on in the United Provinces that the record which is kept of the statement of an accused person, made in the vernacular, is looked into to find out exactly what he said. Sometimes a single word makes a great deal of difference; the insertion or omission of a word may lead to his being deprived of his liberty or to his being able to save his liberty. So I submit, my Lord, that this principle which is proposed to be introduced is dangerous. I submit, my Lord, that anybody who is charged with such serious offences as will be put into the schedule should have the opportunity of having every word of the statement which affects his life or liberty recorded. Now, my Lord, sometimes a trial takes months, sometimes it takes weeks. I have known some Judges who can carry a great deal in their heads of the evidence they have heard; but they can carry after all only a small amount. I do not think that any Judge will take it upon himself to say that he will be able to carry all the nice points that arise in evidence in a long trial in his head, and that, therefore, there is no danger of his being led into error by the exact language used by a witness or an accused person not being recorded by the Court. I submit that here is a departure of principle which is worthy of consideration.

" Then, my Lord, I will not go into any more details, but there is one of a cardinal character, namely, that which is embodied in section 17. That section lays down that—

'The judgment of the Court shall be final and conclusive, and, notwithstanding the provisions of the Code or of any other law for the time being in force, or of anything having the force of law by whatsoever authority made or done, there shall be no appeal from any order or sentence of the Court, and no High Court shall have authority to revise any such order or sentence or to transfer any case from such Court ....'

" I submit, my Lord, that this is a very grave departure in principle from the rules which have been hitherto laid down for the trial of offences, which enable a man to know what the charges are that are brought against him. Then the matter goes before either a Sessions Court or a High Court. There a judge or judges sit to hear and record the evidence and to come to a conclusion. We are all human beings, and judges also are liable to err like everyone else. It is possible that two or three or more judges sitting together to hear a case in the first instance may attach too much weight to certain evidence which they ought not to, and may not attach the weight to some other evidence that they ought to. If they are to try the case from the beginning they start with ideas relating to the accused from the beginning to the end; and there is the possibility. I do not say more, there is the possibility of their judgments not being correct. Where a man's life is concerned, where a man's honour or liberty is concerned, is it fair to deprive him of the opportunity of having his case considered by another tribunal, by another two judges who will be able to bring a more detached mind to a consideration of the circumstances ? I submit this is a very great departure from the principles of justice which have hitherto been embodied in our Codes. Then, my Lord, another important thing is that one embodied in section 18. Now, the result of section 18 is that a statement which was hitherto not regarded as admissible in evidence will be regarded as admissible in evidence; and the condition imposed is this : where the statement of any person has been recorded by a Magistrate and such statement has been read over and explained to the person making it and has been signed by him, or the statement of any person has been recorded by the Court, but such person has not been cross-examined (at present this will not be admissible, my Lord, under the existing rules of evidence in the Evidence Act and of the best Codes that we have) such statement may be admitted in evidence by the Court if the person making the same is dead or cannot be found or is incapable of giving evidence and the Court is of opinion that such death, disappearance or incapacity has been caused in the interests of the accused. I submit, my Lord, this is a very dangerous and novel principle introduced in the Bill. Hitherto, the Courts have insisted upon the accused having had an opportunity to cross-examine the man whose statement was to be used against him. If that opportunity was not available that statement was not used against the accused. Now, my Lord, it is urged that if the Court is of opinion that such death or disappearance or incapacity to give evidence has been caused in the interests of the accused—that, my Lord, as my friend Mr. Jinnah points out will create a case within a case and that lets in a great deal of danger and injustice being done if this novel principle is accepted. I can at least understand that under section 114 of the Evidence Act if evidence which should have been produced is not produced, there may be a presumption made against the person who does not produce it, or if the Court is satisfied that the accused had had a hand in the disappearance of this evidence it may make a presumption against him and it may take that into account; but I submit that to admit the statement of a man who out of enmity or out of any other evil motive or under the influence of some enemy of the accused makes a statement is going too far, the person who got him to make that statement knows or suspects that it is not the true statement. Now if this man by any chance happens to die or is removed, and if some evidence is given which satisfies the Court that the man was removed in the interests of the accused person, the statement of that man becomes evidence. I submit, my Lord, it is a very great wrong which lurks there to the accused person; hitherto the Courts have stuck to the principle that the person against whom a piece of evidence is to be used must be given an opportunity of cross-examining the man who has made the statement against him, and this section proposes to depart from that principle. This is wrong.

"Thus far I have dealt with Part I of the Bill. I will now go on to Part II. Now, my Lord, this is more dangerous than even Part I, and the principles, which are involved in it are such, my Lord, that I submit with great respect Government should not accept them and should reject them. These are preventive measures 'If the Governor General in Council is satisfied that movements which are, in his opinion, likely to lead to the commission of offences against the State are being extensively promoted in the whole or any part of British India, he may by notification in the Gazette of India make a declaration to that effect, and thereupon the provisions of this part of the Bill shall come into effect in that area.' Now, what does happen? If in the opinion of the Local Government there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person is or has been actively concerned in such area in any movement of the nature referred to in section 20, the Local Government may by order in writing containing a declaration to that effect give all or any of the following directions, namely: Then follow the directions. I submit, my Lord, that this is a very dangerous provision. Hitherto the principle has been as it is reiterated in the Criminal Procedure Code, that if the Government has any reason to suspect that a man is concerned with offences and the evidence cannot be proved against him, there is a procedure provided to ask him to give security or to bind him over or to make investigations about it, and when material has been found to justify a prosecution being launched against him, to prosecute him. Hitherto it has been the judicial Magistrate who has been asked to deal with such cases; a complaint is made by the Superintendent of Police or the District Magistrate or by any private individual against a certain man; then the Code provides that the Magistrate shall call upon that man, that he shall record evidence and call upon the man to give evidence against it, and where there is ground to bind him over or to direct him to furnish security or some such thing. The Magistrate would deal with the case, in which case there is an opportunity for a revision against the order of the Magistrate by a higher authority. What is substituted for that is the opinion of the Local Government. Now, my Lord, I will give you one instance. Mr. Tilak was bound over to give security in a certain case a couple of years ago or less than two years ago. The Magistrate asked him to give security. He appealed and had the order revised by the High Court. The High Court set aside that decision and let him free. Now, if this Act comes into force, if in the opinion of the Local Government any person is in that position the fate of that person would be sealed; he will have no chance of going to the High Court. The Local Government's opinion is law; it will have deprived him of liberty, locked him up without giving him a fair chance of having the matter tried in a judicial way. I submit, my Lord, that is a dangerous principle and ought to be eliminated from the Bill. The Bill bristles with principles of a very novel and dangerous character. What the Bill does is this: the Local Government has to express the opinion first that a man is of that character and thereupon that opinion being formed, the Local Government has to issue orders which under the existing Code a judicial authority would do. Having done that, the Local Government goes to the investigating authority and that investigating authority has to investigate the matter as to whether the Local Government's order is right or wrong. I submit, my Lord, that is putting the cart before the horse; it is a preposterous procedure. The right thing to do is to give the man a chance before you shut him up; here you shut him up, you pass that order, create a black mark against him and then constitute an investigating authority to consider. What is it to consider? After the Local Government makes the order under section 21, such Government shall (it is imperative; it is not left to the discretion of the Local Government) as soon as may be, forward to the investigating authority to be constituted under this Act their statement in writing setting forth plainly the grounds on which Government consider it necessary that the order should be made, and shall lay before the investigating authority all material facts and circumstances in its possession in support of its action.

"Then, my Lord, the investigating authority shall hold an inquiry in camera. That is a departure from existing principles. It is said 'the investigating authority shall then hold an inquiry in camera for the purpose of ascertaining what, in its opinion, having regard to the facts and circumstances adduced by the Government, appears against the person in respect of whom the order has been made. Such authority shall in every case allow the person a reasonable opportunity of appearing before it at some stage of its proceedings and shall, if he so appears, explain to him the nature of the charge made against him and shall hear any explanation he may have to offer, and may make such further investigation (if any) as appears to such authority to be relevant and reasonable.' The right thing is to let the matter go before a Magistrate or before a High Court Bench; why should there be executive officers in place of judicial officers? Is there not a danger of injustice being done when the Local Government arrives at conclusions on materials set before it? This is a principle which is novel and ought to be discarded. Then, my Lord, there is another principle of a novel character which is incorporated in the first proviso which says that 'the investigating authority shall not disclose to the person whose case is before it any fact the communication of which might endanger the public safety or the safety of any individual.' I submit that my liberty is all to me, and unless I am found to be unworthy my liberty must be protected I submit that this is a wrong procedure. If a man is assaulted or accused, he has the right to know by whom and there is a danger of injustice being done if these facts are withheld. This is another case of the subversion of principles which have been always honoured in the United Kingdom and wherever British Courts have been established. The next sub-clause says 'subject to the provisions of sub-clause (2) the inquiry shall be conducted in such manner as the investigating authority considers best suited to elicit the facts of the case; and in making the inquiry, such authority shall not be bound to observe the rules of the law of evidence.' Now, your Excellency, as a member of the Bar you know what the rules of evidence are and how jealously judges have guarded against any attack upon these rules, and here the Bill lays down on behalf of Government that the investigating authority shall not be bound to observe the rules of the law of evidence. That is connected with the statement of the Rowlatt Committee that many persons were unpunished simply for want of sufficient evidence. If some persons went unpunished for want of sufficient evidence let them go unpunished, the world will suffer less by that than that one innocent person should be punished and deprived of his honour and liberty under a wrong procedure,

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

This Bill wants to put this on the Statute-book. Now, my Lord, I come to the third part, the whole Bill is in progression, the second part is stiffer than the first part and the third part is stiffer than the second. Now in the third part it is said 'if the Governor General in Council is satisfied that scheduled offences have been or are being committed in the whole or any part of British India to such an extent as to endanger the public safety, he may by notification in the Gazette of India make a declaration to that effect and thereupon the provisions of this Part shall come into force in the area specified in the notification' Then the next clause goes on 'where in the opinion of the Local Government there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person has been or is concerned in such area in any scheduled offence the Local Government may make in respect of such person any order authorised by section 21.' This is a plain and unvarnished attempt to substitute the executive for the judicial. I submit that is subversive of all principles of justice. How is the Local Government to decide whether any particular person has or has not been concerned in scheduled offences without giving him an opportunity of defending himself by the law as provided; no Local Government should be permitted to sit in judgment upon him in the manner proposed. Then the Bill goes on to say that the Local Government may order '(a) the arrest of any such person without warrant; (b) the confinement of any such person in such place and under such conditions and restrictions as it may specify; and (c) the search of any place specified in the order which, in the opinion of the Local Government, has been, is being or is about to be used by any such person for any purpose prejudicial to the public safety.' I submit that this is arming the Local Government with very great powers; the judicial and executive have been separate departments under British administration, let them continue so. You have claimed, and rightly claimed, a great deal of glory for your system of justice; do not, I pray you, touch that system in the manner in which it is proposed to touch it, let them stand separate; the constitution of England does not contemplate that any executive authority shall sit in judgment on any man or deprive him of his liberty or his honour; that function has been entrusted to the judicial Courts properly constituted. The Bill goes against that principle completely; this is in reality substituting the Local Government for the judicial Courts. The Bill next says 'the arrest of any person in pursuance of an order under clause (a) may be effected at any place where he may be found by any police-officer or by any other officer of Government to whom the order may be directed. Sub-clause (3) An order for confinement may be carried out by any officer of Government to whom the order may be directed and such officer may use any and every means to enforce the same.'

Clause 34 says :—

'Any person making an arrest in pursuance of an order under clause (a) of section 33 (1) shall forthwith report the fact to the Local Government and, pending receipt of the orders of the Local Government, may by order in writing commit any person so arrested to such custody as the Local Government may by general or special order specify in this behalf.'

"Now, my Lord, I am entitled, if I have erred, to have an opportunity of knowing where I have erred, and of defending myself. The Local Government issues an order and the man is not only arrested but is locked up in custody. I do not know, my Lord, how such a proposal has commended itself to any Member of this Council.

"At this late hour I shall not go into the details which are dealt with in the last part. Now I ask your Lordship to consider whether, in view of the very cautious way in which the Rowlatt Committee has put the case for legislation, in view of the fact that they have accepted one alternative which has been the unhappy and dark alternative, and that they have regarded the bright one, in view of all the changes that have happened and are going to happen, in view of the great part which India has played in the war, in view of the loyalty of the Princes and people of India which has been acknowledged in high quarters, I ask, my Lord, is this the time to introduce a measure of this kind?

[6TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar; The President.]

I would remind the Council of what the Government did in South Africa. In South Africa General Botha fought against His Majesty's Government in the Boer War. How did the Government treat him? They established self-government in South Africa and made friends with him, and in this great war the part which General Botha has played and the magnificent services which he has rendered have been acknowledged with gratitude by British Statesmen and the whole world has admired him. That, I submit, is the way to win people who are subjects of His Majesty who may be led into wrong paths; that is the way to win people by liberal administrative measures. Let race distinctions be obliterated; let the recommendations which have been made in your Lordship's and Mr. Montagu's Report be adopted with such further recommendations as have been made by public bodies and let the question of the Services be dealt with in the liberal manner in which it has been suggested in the Report. Let Commissions in the Army be thrown open to Indians. Let there be industries multiplied and encouraged. Let there be fresh courses of education and fresh careers provided to young men. Then there will be gratitude in the land; there will be satisfaction in the land; there will be contentment in the land, and we shall not hear any more of revolutionary crime If there should be any crime still lurking anywhere, the way to deal with it will be a much gentler and a more parental way, and not the way which has been suggested here. For these reasons, Sir, I oppose the motion that this Bill should be referred to a Select Committee. I submit that the Bill should be dropped."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar:—"It is already high time, your Excellency. . . . . 5-50 P.

His Excellency the President:—"You have 10 minutes Mr. Ayyangar."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar:—"My Lord, we are very thankful to your Excellency for the toleration and forbearance with which you have heard the opinions of the opposite camp. Your Excellency went so far as to suspend all rules and allow the first two speakers 45 minutes and the third 150.......

His Excellency the President:—"That is not the case, Mr. Ayyangar. Read your rules."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswamy Ayyangar:—"My Lord, by objecting to a Bill like this a certain section of the press pronounces unjust judgment on us thus: 'Those who oppose the Bill lay themselves open to the obvious inference that they secretly sympathise with the rebel and the sedition-monger, and that only a wholesome regard for their own skins keeps them from openly throwing in their lot with these enemies of Indian Society'. It was also regrettable that a responsible member of the Government gave vent to a similar sentiment some time ago. First of all, one should be devoid of any sense to seek the help of an assembly like this for the protection of the type of the individual who is sought to be tackled by this Bill. The absurdity of such a purpose should be apparent even to the least brained. Secondly, it is more the society that is the sufferer. It is the hands of the clock of their progress that are said to be set back. All the bad reputation is to the society, and it is the society that suffers from losses to person and property more than the members of the governing race. When all these should weigh with us to support any and every means to weed out the objectional elements, why should the whole of India without the wonted acrimonious party dissensions vehemently oppose these Bills? I should say that it is the result of the civilised century we live in and also due to the imbibing of the British spirit. Drunk deep in the methods of the British administration and assimilating the true spirit of justice, we cannot but oppose such a piece of legislation. Had a primitive Government three centuries ago commanded us to give them counsel as to how they should be guided in such a situation, unhesitatingly we would have advised them to resort to more imposing and summary forms of punishment that would at once go to the heart of the people and terrify them by these methods. As councillors of Timur and Nadir Shah we might have countenanced remedies of the most drastically deterrent character, such as burying the offender waist-deep in the market-place and causing him to be trampled upon by an elephant. But which is the Government that asks our assent? It is the Government that gives a place in the Cabinet to a Sinnfiener, a Bolshevick and an open rebel. It is the Government with up-to-date liberal institutions and whose national pride lies in the best forms of the Government. We surely cannot give our counsel as a primitive ruler would expect us to give. The illustrious committee which has advised the Government to adopt such measures were furnished with at least a one-sided evidence to come to their conclusion. In the absence of even that evidence and with blanks and asterisks at our disposal, how could the Government really expect assent to this Bill from us. Further, we have seen how all the assurances that the Press Act and the Defence of India Act would be used only against controlling anarchism and enemy action, respectively, have been set at naught by the executive and how these Acts have been used to put a stop to political and constitutional activities Many who supported these measures were said to have repented for their actions after it was too late.

" When the recommendations of so many other Committees and Commissions await giving effect to, to hurry up the recommendations of the Sedition Committee, especially at a time when the Peace Conference is sitting now, displays disproportionate attaching of value to activities of mushroom growth. It gives a handle to the traducers that India is badly governed and it has to be kept down only by repression. It also gives edge to political agitation and a section hails it as then alone there will be the counter-effect of strong sentiments and alienation of feelings.

" Now what is it that we are doing? Admitting the existence of political crimes, are the terms of reference and the actions of the Committee thereon correct? Are private crimes less dangerous than the political crimes? Will not the approvers in private crimes be harassed in the same way as those in public ones? Will not the Jury and the evidence be obsessed even in crimes of private character? The differentiation by the Government between the two crimes is quite blameworthly and deplorable. The action suggests that the one crime is more serious and unpardonable while the other is not so. And is there any parallel to these measures to be found anywhere in any of these civilised countries? What must we say of the unheard of provisions which deny to the political offender the right of appeal and those ordinary safeguards guaranteed to the merest cut-throat and the murderer? Is political crime more heinous, more deleterious to society than the worst crime against property and person, that it is proposed to create special and altogether arbitrary Courts and arm the executive with unheard of powers to deal with it? Why must one who simply exceeds the bounds of restrained expression be treated as if he had forfeited all the rights and privileges ensured to common criminals? Why is the Government so suspicious of the ordinary rules of procedure and of evidence that it is proposed to suspend the most wholesome of them in dealing with political offenders? The Bill also displays an exaggerated suspicion not only on the people, but also on the Judges and the Jury. If not, why should there be the powers to create special tribunals and dispense with the Jury. Criminals who commit crimes for private purposes may harm the Jury in the same way as those for public purposes; the same number of cases where assaults are made on the Judges and the Jury even in criminal trials other than political may be cited if required. Does the remedy of a civilised Government lie in giving a differential treatment to different crimes and in dispensing with the ordinary laws of the jurisprudence which is, perhaps, the only pride of the British Government? By all means improve the methods of detection so that their reasons and arguments for implicating an individual may stand the test of the ordinary proceedings and cross-examinations. Because a branch of the Police Department is unable to stand to a certain test then the proper way is to make the department more efficient. It is certainly not to reduce the test. I am reminded of a member of a depressed class petitioning to some of the Educational authorities to reduce the standard of test in the University examinations for the convenience of their class. No other ,parallel can be cited. To meet the inefficiency of the detecting branch or to hide their inaccuracies, laws unknown to jurisprudence are invented, established rules of evidence and the jury system are set at naught and a great encroachment on the liberty of the people is made.

" I think economic trouble it is that has made this section desperate. I do not come to their defence and suggest that they cannot but be otherwise, but I say these Bills are a worse remedy. These only aim at the summary ways of sending them to the prison and unless the root cause which is the economic trouble is relieved, it would be very difficult to cope with the existing accommodation in the prisons and the increasing defiance of authority necessitated by enconomic strain.

" With these few words I beg to oppose the Bill."

The Council adjourned to Friday, the 7th February 1919, at 11 A.M.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Friday, the 7th February, 1919.

PRESENT :

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., G.C.B.E., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 58 Members, of whom 51 were Additional Members.

CRIMINAL LAW (EMERGENCY POWERS) BILL—contd.

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. D. Shukul :—" My Lord, after the eloquent speeches of my Hon'ble colleagues Mr. Bannerjea and Mr. Jinnah and the comprehensive survey of the whole situation and detailed examinations of the provisions of the Bill made by the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, I do not think any elaborate argument is further needed to convince the Council of the utter inadvisability of adopting the measure which is now before us. But, my Lord, the principle involved in the Bill is so important, so serious and so far-reaching in consequences, that I do feel that I should not give a silent vote. The Bill affects the natural rights and liberties of the people, their freedom of speech and action, the tranquillity of their sweet homes and, above all, their future attitude towards the Government. In a matter like this, it is not only the spirit in which a measure has been conceived that has to be taken into account, but also the effect which it will produce upon the minds of the people in general, and the amount of hardship that its actual operation would entail. Judged by these vital tests, the proposed Bill will be found to be open to serious objections, as has been so clearly pointed out by the previous speakers.

" My Lord, we stand at the threshhold of a momentous epoch, we have just emerged victorious from the worldwide war, the greatest of all wars in history, in which Indian soldiers have fought, side by side with their European comrades, for the highest ideal of humanity, for defending the cause of justice and liberty, and for the establishment of the victory of right over might. To-day the ideas of freedom and liberty are pulsating the life of the nations of the world. Is this, I most humbly ask, an opportune moment when the Government should have brought forward a measure for the approval of the Council which marks yet another step in the policy of repression, which has never been known to have succeeded in achieving its purpose? My Lord, whenever and wherever it has been resorted to, it has only served to stiffen the people's determination for national freedom and to create a feeling of bad blood between the rulers and the ruled.

"Your Lordship and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State have just revived the buoyant faith of the people in the British sense of justice and their spirit of liberalization by inaugurating a noble scheme of reforms, and it is a sad irony of fate that your Excellency's Government should have thought of embarking upon a policy which would only serve to further feed the glowing embers of political discontent. My Lord, the present moment is a most delicate one. You hold in your hands the future of India. It is for you to mend or mar it, and our best hopes for the future of this great country are centred in your Lordship, and in the steady pursuit of a policy of wise conciliation on the part of your Excellency's Government, which your Lordship has already inaugurated and which I am sure you do not want to go back upon.

"My Lord, India has always been loyal to the British Crown. The outburst of loyalty and devotion to the Empire displayed by her people, particularly during the time of war, has established her claim to a place of trust and honour in the Empire, and it must be a matter of poignant grief to us all that at a time when India has been led to hope to become ere long a self-governing unit of the British Empire, a hope which has now grown into confidence since the inauguration of the recent scheme of reforms, the Government should have thought the present to be an appropriate occasion for the introduction of this Bill. This is an occasion when we are in the midst of rejoicings and when the people expected many an act of grace from the benign Government in recognition of their loyal services. And consider, my Lord, what the feelings of the people would be when you foist this retrograde and regrettable measure upon them, instead. Indians after all are sentimental people, and any action of the Government which would tend to cast a slur upon their loyalty, particularly at this juncture, is sure to evoke universal discontent. My Lord, when I say this my motive should not be misunderstood. I have not the least sympathy with those misguided youths, the anarchists, who have disregarded all dictates of humanity and tarnished the fair fame of India, the holy land of Rishis. Nothing could be more repugnant to Indian sentiment and feelings. It is as much in the interest of the people as in that of the Government that anarchy should be stamped out of the country altogether, but, my Lord, I have my own doubts and misgivings as to whether the measure now placed before the Council will be able to attain that object. On an occasion like this I cannot help recalling to my mind the wise counsel given to the world by that philosopher and man of the world combined, I mean Bacon, who ordained that 'the surest way to prevent seditions is to take away the matter of them, which is of two kinds—much poverty and much discontent.' Repression may afford temporary relief, but as a radical cure it has never proved successful. This is why Lord Morley denounces the policy of repression as worse than useless. Unless and until you alter the very conditions which constantly tend to stir the existing evils into fresh activities of anarchism, how could you check it? The only right way is to find out the root cause, and the true statesmanship would then lie in removing it. Then and then only the Government can achieve the object in view, with which you have my full sympathy.

"The evil in itself which we are called upon to grapple with is not an old one. The very cult of anarchism is foreign to the nature of the people of India, and we have to congratulate the Government and the people that it has been nipped already, and how, not by mere force of repression. I have only to draw your Lordship's attention to the compliment paid to Indian loyalty by the members of the Rowlatt Committee. They state in their report in paragraph 166 that all (these conspiracies) have been successfully encountered with the support of India's loyalty, and I put it to the Council and to the Government whether it would be fair, just and expedient to put a premium upon that loyalty and pass a measure which would throw a serious reflection upon the character of the Indian people as a whole? This is an aspect of the question which I particularly wish to impress upon the earliest attention of the Council and the Government. Had the proposal been to enact a temporary measure for a limited period, say for one year or so, the matter would have been quite different.

"But here you come with a different proposal altogether. You wish to place permanently upon the Indian Statute-book a piece of repressive legislation, which constitutes in itself a novel departure from the established principles of criminal jurisprudence, and which is regarded by Indians as casting a permanent slur upon the fair fame of the Indian Nation, and will, I am afraid, if passed into law, become a new source of discontent. My Lord, the feelings of the people with regard to the manner, in which the Indian Defence Act has been administered in the past, are not concealed from your Lordship. The people have been emphatic in their disapproval of the action taken by Government in the exercise of the extraordinary powers conferred upon the executive by that Act. So long as the war lasted, the people put up with any amount of inconvenience caused thereby, without a murmur, as they did not wish to create difficulties in the way of the Government. Now the war is happily over. The imminent danger has passed and the era of peace and prosperity has once more dawned upon the world. At this juncture, any attempt to perpetuate measures justified by the exigencies of war and continue them in normal times and under normal conditions, would not only be inexpedient, but I say unwise, and I say so advisedly. It will be fraught with dangerous consequences. It will raise a tremendous storm of opposition and will provoke an agitation of unparalleled magnitude hitherto unknown in the history of India, and I for one shall not advise the Government to take that risk. It is going against the very pledge that the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock gave to the people on behalf of the Government while introducing the Defence of India Bill in 1915. He then assured this Council that those powers were required 'only during the continuance of the war and for six months after, that is to say, until the excitement and disturbance of the general calm, which the state of war engenders have had time to subside.' In view of those definite assurances, my Lord, on behalf of the Government, would it be fair to recede from the position when the war is over? Well, all of us are for the maintenance of law and order in the land. Keep order by all means, but excess of severity, my Lord, is not the path to order, to use the words of Viscount Morley. On the contrary, it is the path to the Bomb. We are as anxious as you are that India should have a long spell of peace and prosperity. We do not wish that India should be plunged into a state of anarchy and rapine, bloodshed and chaos. But, at the same time, we do not wish that India should become desperate and be forced to play the rôle of another Ireland in the East. While we are strongly of opinion that anarchy should be suppressed with a strong hand, it is our sincere desire that, in suppressing anarchism, you do not unreasonably infringe the natural rights and liberties of the people and do not frustrate their legitimate aims and aspirations.

"Well, so far as the present Bill is concerned, without entering into the details thereof, I make bold to say there is a real danger, as the people anticipate, that the Bill will seriously threaten the liberties of even the innocent people. You do not only legalise secret inquiries and trials, but you dispense with all rules of evidence. The accused has no chance to prove his innocence before he is arrested; you deprive him of the right of trial by the ordinary Courts of Justice; you deprive him of the right of trial by jury, and above all you withhold from him the right of appeal and revision. The provisions of the Bill on the whole are immensely wide and drastic, and yet they do not go to the root of the evil, and why? Obviously, because they do not affect the causes which helped the propaganda of anarchism to spread. The authors of the Report of the Rowlatt Committee state in paragraph 23 of the report that 'The education which the people receive is generally literary and ill-adapted to incline the youthful mind to industrial, commercial or agricultural pursuits; they have not succeeded in finding fresh outlets for their energies. Their hold on land too has weakened owing to increasing pressure of population and excessive sub-infeudation. Their economic prospects have narrowed, and the increasing numbers who draw fixed incomes have felt the pinch of rising prices.'

"My Lord, this is the crux of the whole situation. These are the real and important problems that the Government have to face and face them boldly. So long as you do not relieve the acuteness of the present situation of economic helplessness, so long as you do not adopt bold measures to make the Indian peasantry happy and prosperous, and so long as you do not improve the system of your education and made the prospects of the educated middle class brighter and more hopeful, and unless and until you satisfy the legitimate demands of the people and set aside all racial distinctions giving rise to perpetual discontent, rest assured, my Lord, that you may go on, if you will—as you have the power to do—employing measures of more and more drastic nature than those you propose even to-day, till you eventually exhaust your resources of repressive legislation, but you will never be able to achieve the object, which both you and we have in view, namely, the suppression of anarchism, and it is for your Lordship to consider whether it would be fair and expedient to permanently place upon the Statute-book a measure which may prove ineffectual in stamping out anarchism, but may yet cause unnecessary interference with the rights and liberties of those who are innocent. The Bill, I find, has already made the people nervous, protest meetings are being held all over the country, representations and protest telegrams are pouring in daily, and a violent agitation has already been set on foot, and if the people have their own misgivings and fears about the operations of the Bill, the fault is not theirs, but of those who were responsible for indiscriminate administration of the Indian Defence Act in the past. The Hon'ble the Home Member has assured us that the provisions of the Bill will be used against no activities other than those of sedition, but may I ask your Lordship if similar assurances were not held out to the country by the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock while introducing the Indian Defence Act? We have known but too well what these assurances are worth and we have been forced to the conclusion that the very system which is inseparable from the policy of distrust and suspicion underlying this Bill, is responsible for the miscarriage of justice, and it is for this reason, above all, that I hesitate to accord my support to this measure. I do so, not in any spirit of opposition, but from a sense of duty and as a token of the earnestness of my desire to whole-heartedly co-operate with you, in your attempt to prevent and suppress anarchism. Let me tell your Lordship that, if you really wish to have our whole-hearted sympathy and support, first take us into your confidence, give us full opportunity to examine for ourselves the whole material available on the subject and enable us to form our own independent judgment about them. Besides enlightening us on the subject, that will give to the country necessary time to think and consider. So long as this is not done, I for one would hesitate to accord my support to the Bill. My Lord, I fail to understand as to why the Government should be in such a great hurry about the enactment of this Bill. The war has been just over. The Defence of India Act has yet many a month to run its course. The early prospect of the new constitutional reforms being brought into force has considerably eased the situation. The effect of the release of a very large number of detenues has still to be seen. Why not let the country enjoy a little respite, and watch the result of the new reforms and the effect of the adoption of such ameliorative measures, as are recommended by the Industrial Commission? First pursue a policy of trust and conciliation, initiate reforms for which the people have been urging for the last 30 years, meet their legitimate demands, remove their wants and grievances and see how they behave. I am sure, my Lord, you will not have to be disappointed. Should that policy fail, and should you notice a tendency for increase in the number of anarchical crimes, then the time for adopting a policy of stiffer character will certainly come, and we shall all willingly co-operate, but not till then. My Lord, the Government called on us to co-operate with it, and so we did. While the war lasted we supported every measure which the Government thought fit to introduce for the purpose of maintaining law and order in the land, but now when there is all calm and quiet in the land, will it be too much to ask the Government to accede to the wishes of the people in this matter, and as appealed to by my Hon'ble friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya follow the example of that great country England which has served as our ideal, on which are based all our future hopes and aspirations, and I hope and trust that the Government will withdraw the Bill. My Lord, do not forget that the existence of British rule in India is 'to implant those ideals of justice, law, humanity which are the foundations of your own Western civilization' and let not the Government of India do any act which is not consistent with those noble principles or fall short of the high expectations that India holds of you. If the Government do not heed this and let the Bill proceed, there will certainly follow a violent agitation the like of which India has never witnessed before, and the responsibility for the same will then be yours, my Lord, and not ours."

His Excellency the President:—"As the Hon'ble Pandit Malaviya is now in the Council, I will give him my decision on his request that he might be supplied with the minutes of my Government and any correspondence with the Secretary of State in regard to the Bill now under consideration. I have decided that the papers in question cannot be supplied to the Hon'ble Member, and I will take this opportunity of stating for the information of the Council that in my judgment records of the confidential deliberations of the Executive Council are not papers or returns within the meaning of Rule 18. I may add, for the information of the Hon'ble Member, that the Secretary of State was asked to agree to the publication of the Bill under Rule 23, and that his reply was in the affirmative." 1

The Hon'ble Sir Verney Lovett:—"My Lord, as a member of the late Rowlatt Committee, I would like to begin by thanking the Hon'ble Members of this Council who have criticised our recommendations, sometimes in unflattering terms, for the courtesy and consideration with which they have referred to our findings of fact and ourselves. I trust that in whatever I have to say I may show an equal courtesy. 1

There is no need for me to justify our findings of fact. They have not been seriously impugned, and such remarks as I have to make will proceed on this basis. We each did our utmost to ascertain the real facts, and when we had found them, we considered possible legislative remedies and preventives. The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah says that the present Bills which simply embody our recommendations are "entirely against the will of the people." Do the people really understand what the issue is and have they grasped the facts? In my opinion they have not, in spite of the earnest endeavours of the Rowlatt Committee to state the issue and to detail the facts in such a manner as to admit of no misunderstanding. I do not think that the Hon'ble Members of this Council who have spoken have grasped the real issue, but I will endeavour to make it clear, and if I succeed in doing so, I will ask Hon'ble Members to explain it to their constituents. They are here after all because they lead and not because they follow, however heavily they may be bombarded by telegrams. There is yet time for them to lead wisely. The issue to-day is this. Is the Government to take legislative measures or not to cope with blood-thirsty crime and sedition in India, and to protect from these hideous evils its subjects and loyal servants? That is the present issue. There is no other. The issues before the Rowlatt Committee were first, what do you consider to be the nature and extent of criminal conspiracies connected with the revolutionary movement? Secondly, are you able to suggest to Government new or additional laws by which such violent crimes can be prevented? I would venture to remind Hon'ble Members that the law does not cease to be the law because it is supplemented or altered in the light of bitter and tragic experience. We are told that the Rowlatt proposals outrage ordinary ideas of British fair play. We were not all British on our Committee. We had the invaluable assistance of two Indians, men of great legal experience and of sterling independence, from whom we parted with the highest respect. They are not men who enjoy newspaper abuse any more than do the Hon'ble Members of this Council. I maintain that our proposals violate neither British nor Indian ideals of fair play. I need not discuss them in detail now, as the Bill has to go to Select Committee. Our most prominent suggestions were devised to meet possibilities, possibilities ranging as we said from incipient sedition to incipient anarchy. These possibilities will not be prevented from materialising by cheerfully ignoring them. Dangers are visible. They were visible to the Rowlatt Committee, and they are visible more clearly now. They are not lessened by the triumph of blood-thirsty violence in Russia, even though that triumph be partial and temporary. We know from the foot-note to page 15 and from paragraphs 90 and 94 of the Sedition Committee's Report that Russian terrorist methods have been already carefully studied by Indian fanatics.

"But apart from such influences there are special perils waiting for impressionable young Indians. Let me read the statement of Narendra Dutta Gupta on page 193 of the Report. After confessing to the murder of a brave and loyal servant of Government he said :—

'I make this statement so as not to injure Jatin but as I have come to understand that anarchism will not benefit our country, and the leaders who are now blaming me, now thinking the deed that of a head-cracked boy, to show them that I alone am not responsible for the work. There are many men behind me and Jatin, but I do not wish to give their names in this statement The leaders who are now blaming me should be kind enough to come forward and guide boys like me in the good ways.'

"This statement was made some years ago, but does any reflecting reader of the Report believe that the 'leaders' who first depraved and then blamed this miserable victim have vanished from the earth? The Rowlatt Committee did not think so. And it is clear from the Home Member's speech and from a speech recently made by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler in the Bengal Legislative Council, that the Committee was right, that such men not only exist but intend to renew their villainous work when opportunity offers. They are even now encouraged and assisted by speeches and newspaper articles instinct with bitter racialism and published broadcast which, every one knows, are only too common. Does past experience show that such speeches and articles produce no fruit? It shows the very contrary. They frequently produce fruits which astound their authors. The Hon'ble Mr. Bannerjea in advising Government to withdraw these Bills urged that they violated the principle that conciliation should precede coercion. Has it not in fact done so here? Long before these Bills were projected, before even the report of the Sedition Committee was published, the Reform proposals of your Excellency and the Secretary of State were given to the world. When these proposals were published, your Excellency and the Secretary of State had read the Report of the Committee, but were none the less determined to endeavour to meet political aspirations. Your proposals were hailed with only slightly qualified enthusiasm by that party of Moderates of which Mr. Bannerjea is the leader. The Hon'ble gentleman and others have proposed amendments asking for delay in introducing these Bills, but it is plain that their real objections are to the Bills themselves. Failing the withdrawal of these Bills for good and all they wish the Government to wait and see how the Reforms operate, how far the economic and social conditions improve, and whether the revolutionary movement claims any more victims or not. Now, it is these unfortunate victims who find no place whatever in this specious programme. Not one speaker has considered them at all; we have heard a great deal about the poor young men who may be wrongly condemned by three fallible High Court Judges and subjected to police supervision by the orders of an untrustworthy executive. But what about the persons who have to be protected from the movement of which these young men are the exponents? They too are God's creatures, and they are generally, though not always, Indians. What is to happen to them? We know from the Report what has happened to them in the past. I will give two samples. The first is from the record of the year 1915. The Report says :—

'It remains to mention three murders which occurred in Eastern Bengal this year. On the 3rd of March Babu Sarat Kumar Basu, the Head Master of the Zilla School at Comilla, was shot dead while walking with his servant. The servant was wounded in the stomach. A Muhammadan who pursued the murderers received two shots in the chest and a woman was accidentally struck by a bullet from one of the pistols. Five empty Mauser pistol cartridges were found upon the scene. The Head Master's servant eventually died. The victim of this murder had come into antagonism with political parties in Bengal in 1908, and shortly before his murder had had occasion to report to the District Magistrate about two students concerned in the distribution of seditious pamphlets. None but political reasons can be assigned for this murder.'

"The Report goes on to mention the murder of a Police Officer who was shot with his child by four or five youths armed with Mauser pistols. The second passage which I should like to quote is from the record of the year 1917 :—

'Another dacoity in 1917 remains to be specially mentioned. It was committed in a goldsmith's shop at No. 32, Armenian Street, Bura Bazar, Calcutta, at about 9 P.M. on the 7th May. Two young Bengalis entered the shop and asked to see jewellery. Then four young Bengalis entered the shop and began firing wildy with pistols. Two brothers of the owner who were in the shop fell mortally wounded. There were also in the shop an assistant and a servant, who were both wounded, two women, one of whom escaped and the other hid under a bench, and a Muhammadan who escaped. The dacoits decamped with jewellery to the value of Rs 5,459, and some of them drove away in a taxi-cab that they had in waiting.'

"In neither of these cases was a single conviction obtained. There have been many such cases. The fate of these poor victims seems to me to deserve a little more than conventional regrets from the Members of this Council. My Lord, what has come from delaying and hesitating to grapple adequately with these evils in the past? What has resulted from the absence of laws broad enough to cope with terrorism and revolutionary conspiracy working together among a simple and heterogeneous population in an enormous country? We know from the Report what has happened. As the Committee pointed out in paragraph 174, it was only when the Bengal conspiracies had enjoyed a two years' run, when two English ladies had been murdered, and as Lord Minto said 'the seeds of wickedness had been sown among a strangely impressionable and imitative people' that the first preventive Bill of these latter years was enacted. Enormous mischief had been done. The Government of India waited then. Again they waited, during that critical period from the 19th December 1914, when the Punjab Government asked for the very early promulgation of a draft Ordinance, in order to deal with the prosecution and suppression of violent crime, waited up to the passing of the Defence of India Act in March 1915. Would they have waited had they foreseen the long tale of intervening crime, had they known that within this period conspiracy would almost achieve widespread bloodshed at large centres from Calcutta to Lahore? Why did they wait? They waited because they were reluctant to supersede the ordinary statute law. The Rowlatt Committee did not think that they would have hesitated to employ special preventive laws had such been ready to hand. My Lord, surely the past teaches us that sacred as is the name of liberty, it should never be so interpreted as to cover license to enemies of us all, of the Government and of Society, to work out their plots as they please. I wonder if Hon'ble Members have read those words spoken on the scaffold, in a last hour of awakening, by one of the victims of the

[Sir Verney Lovett.] [7TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

French Revolution who had assisted to raise the storm which swept her away. 'Oh, Liberty! What crimes are committed in thy name!'. This is indeed a true saying. We are told that the crimes of the Terrorists will disappear before political concessions, that they are merely the product of unsatisfied political idealism. Persons who really think this fail entirely to understand the frenzied and irreconcileable spirit which guides this insane, this inhuman war against Society. It is a spirit which, as the Report shows, burns with racial hatred and spurns political concessions. I am speaking of the spirit of the directors of the movement, men like-minded with the notorious Hardyal. The others are their tools. The criminals are comparatively few, but their facilities are great, and their organisation has been elaborate and widespread. Their achievements would, as the Report points out, have been more considerable had they been able to procure a more abundant supply of arms. Their designs have been furthered all along by the absence of anything like determined, persistent non-official opposition to their propaganda of racial hatred. I remember indeed one fine courageous speech of Mr. Gokhale's delivered to the Students' Brotherhood at Bombay on the 9th of October 1909. I commend it to all true Indian patriots. It should be graven in their minds. Had there been more of such speeches and had such speeches been followed by determined, widespread action and organisation, a number of misguided youths would have been a credit and a joy instead of a disgrace and sorrow to their parents. and there would have been no Rowlatt Committee. As it is, the attitude of too many politicians towards the Terrorist movement has resembled that of a nervous person who hearing a burglar in his bedroom feels happier and safer when he pulls up the blanket over his head. My Lord, things being as they are, and not as we all hope they will one day be, I do not see how without special legislation of the kind proposed by the Rowlatt Committee, revolutionary plotters are to slink back discouraged and loyal subjects and servants of His Majesty the King-Emperor, whose sole offence is wealth or their loyalty, are to receive from the law that protection which no self-respecting Government in the world would refuse them. The Government of India cannot sit down and twiddle its thumbs, as apparently some Hon'ble Members wish it to do, because all judges and policemen are fallible, the Executive is human and prone to err, and high provincial officials are a truculent lot. When the Congress and Moslem League deputations arrive at Bombay en route for England, they will not be deterred from embarking by the reflection that 'ships are but boards, sailors but men and then there is the peril of waters, winds and waves.' Perhaps these pessimistic members forget that in future far more of these frail judges and officials will be Indians than are Indians now. This reflection may reassure them. Be this as it may, Indian parents have a right to expect that Government will take as effective steps as possible to prevent revolutionary plotters from depraving and ruining their sons. There are, too, others who have the strongest claim on all of us, non-officials and officials. It is pre-eminently due to the loyal Police Officers of the Crown, British and Indian, to the loyal landlords and peasant proprietors of the Punjab, that India was not disgraced in the first year of the war, despite the valour of her soldiers and her own general loyalty. They frustrated the plots of the revolutionaries; they stood in the van; they bore the brunt. Should the Government of India fail now to do its utmost to shield the homes of its loyal Indian servants from cruel bereavement, would its own roof-tree stand the firmer? It would not. It would gradually totter to well-deserved catastrophe.

"My Lord, I appeal to our non-official colleagues to look at facts that stare us in the face. It is only by recognising existing facts that we can hope to build truly now. As Mr. Gokhale once said 'Life is not like writing on a clean slate. We have to take the words existing on the slate, and add other words, so as to make complete sentences and produce a harmonious whole.' We must, my Lord, take things as they are, build on what is sound and right, remedy what is horribly wrong if we would indeed rise to higher things and realise the future which your Excellency has so earnestly sought, with infinite labour, for the people of this country."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—"My Lord, in 11
introducing this Bill yesterday the Hon'ble the Home Member assured us that it was in no light-hearted spirit but after very careful and anxious consideration that the Government had decided to take this step. My Lord, may I similarly, on my behalf and on behalf of many of my Indian colleagues, venture to say that it is in no light-hearted spirit but after very careful and anxious consideration, and after very close study of the provisions of this Bill, that we have come to the conclusion that it is our duty to oppose this Bill. My Lord, it is a duty that we owe to ourselves, it is a duty that we owe to our countrymen, it is a duty that we owe to you and to the Government, that we should frankly and without equivocation tell you what we feel about this Bill. My Lord, I think no Indian who is worth his salt in this Council would be true either to his own convictions or to the Government if he were to equivocate on an occasion like this. My Lord, the path of duty being clear, I have decided that I must oppose this Bill and support the motion which has been put before this Council by my Hon'ble colleague, Mr. Patel.

"My Lord, there is one other matter to which I wish to refer at this moment. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent also reminded us yesterday that our critics in England and our critics in India would judge of us by the attitude that we adopt towards this measure. In other words, the position that is placed before us is this. If we want to establish our capacity for self-government, or responsible government, we must be prepared to support the Government in carrying this measure through. My Lord, if an argument like this did not proceed from the high quarter from which it did, I should not have been disposed to attach much weight to it. We have been hearing this argument for the last several months. We have been reading arguments of that character in various newspapers in India and also in England for some time. But, my Lord, let us examine the position carefully and dispassionately. If we do not support this measure, we are not fit for responsible government or self-government. If we do support this measure we are again not fit for responsible government, because admittedly the country is seething with discontent and anarchy, and where there is anarchy there cannot be self-government or responsible government. My Lord, I frankly confess that whatever other important issues may be raised with regard to the reforms, I think an issue of this character is absolutely a false issue. I do not think that it is the pivot on which the question of reforms turns. My Lord, may I, in all humility, ask our critics to tell us on some authority whether, if we were prepared to support this measure to-day whole-heartedly, they would be prepared to give up all their opposition to our claim for self-government and say 'Oh, well, Indians have now established to the hilt their fitness for self-government.' My Lord, the resources of our critics are inexhaustible, and if an argument like that will fail them I have no doubt that we shall be face to face with a multitude of arguments of a different character to show that we have not yet developed character and capacity for self-government. Therefore, my Lord, whatever else you may do, I will beg of you, and I will earnestly entreat you, not to confuse this issue which we have to consider this morning with the issue of the reforms.

"My Lord, my Hon'ble colleague Sir Verney Lovett in his very spirited speech just now told us that we had absolutely missed the issue, and as he formulated the issue it was like this. Are the Members prepared to realise whether, under the circumstances which exist at the present moment and under the circumstances which had existed during the last few years, the Government is or is not justified in taking large legal powers to cope with the situation. My Lord, I may assure Sir Verney Lovett that we have not missed the issue. We realise that issue. We are fully aware of the issue that has been present in the country, but the real issue now to-day before us is not whether the Government should not assume new legal powers to cope with the situation, but whether this Bill is really the sort of Bill which the Government should put before the country, and whether the powers which Government want to cope with the situation are precisely the powers which they should take under this Bill.

"My Lord, the Indian politician is somewhat of an unfortunate being. His attitude is seldom correctly appreciated. Indeed, it is far oftener the case that his attitude is misunderstood than appreciated. Throughout the discussion it has been assumed that those of us who are not prepared to support the Government on this occasion have got a soft corner in their hearts for the anarchist or the revolutionary. But let me assure you, my Lord, that that is not so. No one regrets more than the Indian politician or the Indian reformer does that there should have sprung up in this country a breed of that type. But, my Lord, what the Indian politician wants to know is this. Are the measures that you have been taking, is the measure that you propose to take to-day, the sort of step that is necessary, that is essential, for the uprooting of this evil which has grown in this country? My Lord, I have no doubt whatsoever in thinking that these are not the measures which will undo the mischief that has come about in this country or that will uproot the evil that has grown. You have tried repression during the last ten years on various occasions, and yet you find to-day that you are not in a position to say that you have been able to quell or suppress all those activities, and I venture to think, my Lord, that even this measure will fail.

"And I venture to think, my Lord, that this measure will fail. Now, my Lord, I oppose this Bill on many grounds. In the first place, I have no hesitation in saying that it is wholly wrong in principle, unsound in its conception, dangerous in its operation and too sweeping and too comprehensive, indeed far more comprehensive than many of us are prepared to admit at the present moment. In the next place, my Lord, the Bill which is now before us is sought to be placed permanently on the Statute-book, and I say that is not the right thing to do. In the last place, my Lord, I say that this is not the time to introduce a measure of this character. I will take up the question of principle first. My Lord in Part I of this Bill what do we find? You seek to create a new Court. Now I do not for a moment say that you cannot create a new Court. Perhaps that point is no longer open to me to urge, having regard to the recent decision of a High Court in India, but what I do say is, that it should be clearly recognised and realised that you are not conferring a special jurisdiction on the High Court, you are creating an altogether new jurisdiction with a new procedure for admitting evidence and for the examination of the accused. Now, my Lord, it may be that the Court which you are creating, consisting, as it will be, of men who have been, or who are, judges of the High Court is in some respects better than the special tribunals to which we have been accustomed during the last few years. I submit that the other provisions in this part are open to serious objection I do not propose to go into those objections at this moment, as I have no doubt that the Members of the Select Committee will take care to press their point of view in the Select Committee. It is only when we come to Parts II and III that we have some idea of the dangerous character of this measure. In fact, if we examine Part II what do we find? Section 20 says:—

'If the Governor General in Council is satisfied that movements which are, in his opinion, likely to lead to the commission of offences against the State are being extensively promoted in the whole or any part of British India, he may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make a declaration to that effect, and thereupon the provisions of this Part shall come into force in the area specified in the notification.'

"Well, what is exactly the meaning of that expression 'movements' I am not in a position to say. It is not a word of art, it is not a word of law, and as that word stands, it may cover any movement, political, social, or economic, in this country. My Lord, the Governor General in Council having declared a movement to be dangerous, disappears from the scene, and the rest of the powers are exercised by whom? By the Local Government. And what does the Local Government do after that? The Local Government may pass any one of those orders which are specified in Section 21. It may pass an order that a person—

(a) shall, within such period as may be specified in the order, execute a bond with or without sureties to be of good behaviour for such period not exceeding one year as may be so specified;

7TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.]

(b) shall notify his residence and any change of residence to such authority as may be so specified;

(c) shall remain or reside in any area in British India so specified; provided that, if the area so specified is outside the province, the concurrence of the Local Government of that area to the making of the order shall first have been obtained;

(d) shall abstain from any act so specified which, in the opinion of the Local Government, is calculated to disturb the public peace or is prejudicial to the public safety; and

(e) shall report himself to the police at such periods as may be so specified.

"Now, my Lord, the Local Government having done this, there appears on the scene certain gentlemen who have been dignified with the name of investigating authority under this Statute These gentlemen must carry on their inquiry in camera, within closed doors, with the accused before them, but with no right to the accused to have the benefit of legal advice or legal support. Having finished his work, these gentlemen must submit their report again to the Local Government, and it will be then for the Local Government to decide what order it shall pass consistently with the provisions of section 21. My Lord, when you come to examine Part III, which was admitted to be much more drastic than Part II, inasmuch as under that Part the Local Government may cause any person to be arrested or to be put in confinement and order an investigation to be made in a similar fashion, you realise how very dangerous it is. My Lord, if it is not undiluted coercion, I ask what is it in all humility? If it is not substituting executive discretion, or may I say indiscretion, for judicial process or judicial form of law, what is it I ask? My Lord, I submit that the entire provisions in Parts II and III are so subversive of elementary principles of British jurisprudence, they are so shockingly unlike anything known to British institutions or British law, that I venture to hope that the Statute-book will not find a standing place for this uncanny intruder. My Lord, the homage that is sought to be paid to law in the constitution of this investigating authority is in my opinion nothing but a mockery. Either you must abide by the law inherited by us through ages, or you must frankly say 'we do not care for these judicial forms and we will frankly reserve this power to the executive, and do not care that there shall not be any further inquiry.' Well, if it is supposed that this inquiry by the investigating authority will lead to any satisfaction, I venture to dispel the illusion. I say that an inquiry by the investigating authority under the limitations proposed will not bring satisfaction to popular mind. My Lord, therefore as a lawyer trained in the British system of jurisprudence, as an Indian who loves his country and who is interested in the ordered progress of this country, who wants self-government, who is anxious to have responsible government, at an early date, and who is anxious for the permanent connection between India and England, my Lord, I think it is my duty to oppose this measure. My Lord, I also said that it was an ill-timed measure. My Lord, during the last few months I have been going all over the country with the Reforms Committee, and what has been my experience? My experience has been that the feeling for the proper reception of reform is fast growing in the country. It was growing until day before yesterday, and I venture to think that if nothing untoward happens, it will grow in strength and force very soon. I think, my Lord, it is very unfortunate that a measure like this should have been conceived at this juncture, and it is much more unfortunate that it should have been introduced in the Council at the present moment. My Lord, already unkindly critics of the Government are saying in every part of the country—'well, reforms may come or may not come, goodness only knows whether they will come or when they will come or how they will come, but meanwhile undiluted and pure repression is coming.' My Lord, as one who is deeply interested in the reforms, who realises the difficulty of evolving any scheme of reforms, having worked on that Committee, and who is anxious to have those reforms, who thoroughly appreciates the honesty of purpose of your Lordship and Mr. Montagu in regard to reforms, I think it is my duty to raise my humble voice against this measure on this occasion. I will beg of you and entreat you with all the earnestness that I can command to consider whether you will not be immensely gaining in moral strength and prestige by dropping, or even postponing, a measure of this character.

"My Lord, I have not the smallest possible doubt that if you do listen to those who are earnestly pressing this request upon you on this occasion, you will not regret it. On the contrary, you will find that you will have strengthened your position beyond all measure and that, when any untoward situation arises afterwards and you come before this Council or its successor and say 'here is a dangerous situation', I have not the smallest possible doubt that every one of us, if he happens to be here then, will rally round you and try to do everything to strengthen the hands of Government to meet the situation. My Lord, let it not be said that Indian Members fight shy of responsibility, or let it not be said that they are so meek and so timid that they cannot resist public criticism. My Lord, the history of this Council bears witness to the opposite view. Was it not the Indian Members who supported Government in passing the Indian Press Act? Was it not the Indian Members who unanimously supported Government in passing the Defence of India Act? I can give many more instances, my Lord. There have been men among us who have deliberately courted unpopularity, men among our countrymen who have shown that they can stand public criticism when it is a matter of conviction that they should take one line of action rather than another. Therefore, my Lord, if criticism of this nature is levelled against us, I for my part am not disposed to attach any importance to it. My Lord, I will again repeat that this is not the time to go on with a measure like this. I do not say that that is the sole ground on which I oppose it. I oppose it, first and foremost, on the ground that the whole measure is wrong and unsound in its principle. But even if I am wrong there, I will beg you, my Lord, to take into consideration the question of expediency.

"And lastly, my Lord, there is one more point which I would urge upon your Lordship's attention and upon the attention of your Government. I do so not without hesitation, but I do so in the hope that perhaps your legal advisers may throw some light upon that question. My Lord, if there is one principle which is embedded in the British constitution and in the British law it is that no man shall be deprived of his liberty and freedom, without a proper judicial trial. My Lord, I venture to doubt—and my doubts are serious—whether the Government of India have got the power to pass a measure of this character. My Lord, I will refer to section 65 of the Government of India Act, which says that 'the Governor General in Legislative Council has not, unless expressly so authorised by Act of Parliament, power to make any law repealing or affecting any part of the unwritten laws or constitution of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland whereon may depend in any degree the allegiance of any person to the Crown of the United Kingdom'.

"My Lord, the bond of allegiance, the strongest bond of allegiance between the subject and the Crown, is that the Crown protects him against arbitrary executive power and that the subject is entitled, before he is deprived of his liberty and of his freedom, to be tried according to the recognised forms of law. My Lord, I have no doubt that your Government have satisfied themselves that they have such power; but, speaking for myself, I am not free from doubt on that matter, and I should very much welcome any explanation on that point of law.

"Lastly, my Lord, I will beg you to realise the situation as it has been growing during the last few days and as it threatens to grow in future. My Lord, already there is a wave of indignation running through the country; from one end to the other protest meetings are being held. Do not dismiss them with a wave of the hand and say, 'Oh! well, all this will pass away'. My Lord, what was impossible in this country ten years back is no longer impossible now. Political feeling has been growing in this country; political consciousness is much stronger to-day than it was ten years ago, and what the country was prepared to put up with ten years ago it is not prepared to put up with now. As one who does not want this country to be thrown into a vortex of agitation, who is deeply anxious that our programme of work in the future should be constructive rather than destructive, who wants that we should not dissipate our energies in mere protests, I feel, my Lord, that you are going to throw the country into a whirlpool of agitation such as it has never witnessed before. My Lord, that will be prejudicing the Reforms, and I am interested in the Reforms. I beg of you, and I entreat you, to give the Reforms a fair chance and do not prejudice them before they have come into force. Give them a fair chance, and then you will find that you will not have taken a wrong step, a mistaken step, in having listened to your advisers to-day in this Council.

"I would therefore strongly oppose this Bill and support Mr. Patel's motion".

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde :—"My Lord, it is said that every rose has its thorn or that there is no rose without a thorn. Our rose is this Reform Scheme. We have seen it blossom in the air to a certain extent; we have smelt its fragrance; but the unfortunate part of it is that the thorn has begun to prick earlier than was expected, and that is where the trouble of the situation is.

"I will preface my remarks by reading out one sentence from Lord Morley's 'Recollections'. I have copied it out. Here it is: 'Shortcomings of Government lead to outbreaks; outbreaks have to be put down; reformers have to bear the blame and their reforms are scotched. Reaction triumphs, and mischief goes on as before, only worse'. Lord Morley is a great philosopher and a great writer, but it appears to me as if he has produced an aphorism which ranks very high in political life, and deserves to be embodied in a work higher than mere recollections. It happens, as it happened, that there were certain shortcomings which fostered this anarchical spirit in Bengal. Unfortunately, the Rowlatt Committee takes no notice of these shortcomings. Outbreaks have to be put down, I thoroughly agree, no matter what the shortcomings have been. When they are put down, what unfortunately happens is what has actually happened, namely, that the reformers have to bear the blame. Here it has not been made as an allegation, certainly not as an accusation. Nobody has said so much, but there is something in the air, an airy nothing, which implies that people who oppose these measures are people who in their heart of hearts sympathise with the anarchists. This part of the suggestion if I may call it so—it is not even so clear as to call it a suggestion—well, this suggestion or implication or whatever it may be called, I humbly submit is not right, and as Lord Morley foresaw we have got to bear the blame, though really we have absolutely nothing to do with the anarchists. We do not sympathise with them; we would much rather suppress them altogether if we could. But the blame still comes to us. It would not much matter if we had to bear the blame alone and that was all. What becomes worse is that our proposals get scotched and the reforms we propose get to be viewed with some amount of suspicion, and what little is given is diluted a great deal, so as not to be effective.

"'Reaction triumphs and mischief goes on'. This last portion it is which I wish to dwell upon to a certain extent. The Rowlatt Committee in their report did not notice any of the shortcomings, nor suggest any remedies: all that they are concerned with is to propose measures to suppress them, and in the carrying out of those measures reaction triumphs. To that part of the case, therefore, I wish to address myself. This is not the first time that I speak on this subject. This Hon'ble Council may remember that last year in Simla I brought in a motion asking that all action on this report should be kept in abeyance pending certain inquiries. Speaking on that occasion I dwelt on the ex parte character of the inquiry. I dwelt upon its being in camera. I also dwelt upon all the numerous defects and omissions that I had found in the report, omissions in the face of which it was impossible for us to form an opinion. To-day I propose to raise a question which has already been raised and argued first by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Chanda and then by my Hon'ble friend Dr. Sapru. That question is, whether it is within the competence of this Hon'ble Council to pass this Bill as it is put before us here. Have we got any jurisdiction in a matter of this kind? Our opinion is that we have not. It was mentioned yesterday by the Hon'ble the Law Member that no serious argument had been brought forward on this point, and that so far as he was concerned he was satisfied that there is not the least objection. I shall endeavour to indicate the serious part of the argument that bears on this matter. Section 28 of the Indian Councils Act of 1861 has this paragraph:—

'Provided that the Governor General in Council (unless expressly authorised to do so by Parliament) shall not have the power of making any laws which may affect the authority of Parliament . . . . or any part of the unwritten law or constitution of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland whereon may depend in any degree the allegiance of any person to the Crown of the United Kingdom.'

"This provision has since that time been reproduced in every Act and also finds its place in the present Bill. I think the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru read it out just now. Now, what is meant by 'allegiance' here? Blackstone defines it as follows:—

'Allegiance is the tie which binds the subject to the Crown in return for that protection which the Crown affords to the subject.'

That is the definition given by one who is, I suppose, one of the greatest of English lawyers. Does this Bill affect questions of allegiance? Does it do so at all, and if it does, is this Hon'ble Council competent to make an enactment of this kind? That is the next question that arises to my mind. I submit that it does and there are some points to which I wish to draw special attention. One is the English law that nobody's property or liberty can be taken away without a proper judicial sentence. In this particular instance, that principle of English law is sought to be detracted from and in certain matters the executive authority will be able to deprive a person of his liberty and his property. This, I say, is rather a bold departure because in English law there is no counterpart to it. Even when they were enacting the Defence of the Realm Act, they provided:—

'Where a person, being a British subject but not being a person subject to the Naval Discipline Act or to Military Law, is alleged to be guilty of an offence against any regulations made under the Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914, he shall be entitled, within six clear days from the time when the general nature of the charge is communicated to him, to claim to be tried by a civil court with a jury . . . .'

"Your Excellency will see then that in the Defence of the Realm Act, which was enacted in England, and on the model of which, I presume, our own Defence of India Act was framed, a person against whom a notice was issued could claim a trial by jury. Now England in those days was in a peculiar position, it being nearer to Germany, many German spies were found there and other people who went there to give trouble and raise all kinds of difficulties. Even then, with all those difficulties to face, English law did not depart from its principle of saying that any person who is to be prosecuted can always claim a trial by jury. Whereas here, fortunately for us, being at a distance from the scene of the war, there were not so many spies, or if there were, they were probably taken hold of and all the Germans were interned at Ahmednagar and other places. There was no necessity to constitute this new kind of tribunal, which was unknown up to this time. To this a great deal of objection has been taken both in legal circles as well as in political circles. I am at present speaking of political circles only, but Sir John Simon, who is, I believe, a well-known authority on constitutional matters and a great lawyer practising in England, presented a petition to the King and asked His Majesty to transfer it to the Privy Council. From that petition I propose to read out to your Excellency the following passage:—

'Invasion by the Crown of the constitutional rights and liberties of the subject affects allegiance fundamentally. Also the authority of Parliament is seriously invaded. The constitutional rights of the subject stand upon the authority of Parliament and the Coronation Oath. No legislature of a dependency possesses the right to infringe these rights in the name of the King's Government, whether supreme or local, without the express authority of the King in his Parliament. The Governor General in Council of India has not received any express authority by Act of Parliament to pass the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915 The said rules purport to confer powers on Local Governments arbitrarily to invade or destroy, without limitation in degree or time, such rights and liberties as (1) the right of free action and conduct (so far as not prohibited by Municipal Law); (2) freedom to come and go throughout the Realm; (3) the right of free speech and publication; and (4) the enjoyment of property. Even if not so restrained by the Acts mentioned, the Governor General in Council appears to have no power of Common Law to interfere with these rights, at all events in the case of British subjects, who by virtue of citizenship retain these liberties wherever they may go within the British Dominions.' . . . .

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"Would the Hon'ble Member allow me to see this very interesting document, and does he know what the result of the application to the Privy Council was?"

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"I do not know, but I know it was after the presentation of this petition that Mrs. Besant was released. Then, on her release another petition, very nearly in the same words, was also presented."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"Am I not right in saying hat their Lordships of the Privy Council rejected this petition?"

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"No, I have not heard of it. This petition, I believe, is still pending; that is my idea about it."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"The original petition, I believe, was rejected."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"Because she was released."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"Not because she was released. The Privy Council refused to entertain the application, that is, the one from which the Hon'ble Member is reading."

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"It may be that I am wrong; it may be so, but still the point remains that these arguments are undisposed of. These arguments still remain and there was a commission appointed presided over by Lord Loreburn before whom Sir Courtenay Ilbert was examined and he gave a list of fifteen enactments which according to him were not really speaking authorised by law, that is to say, fifteen ultra vires enactments; but that list unfortunately was said to be confidential; I tried to get it but I could not get hold of it and it still stands; among them, however, it has come out that the Defence of India Act stood first. Your Excellency may remember that there was a case recently in Burma in which this point was raised; the enactment said that no person will be allowed to bring a civil suit for anything done bonâ fide under the Act, as it is said also under this Bill. Then the person did bring a suit and it was rejected and he appealed to the Privy Council and the Privy Council allowed that appeal, and they were inclined to hold that the Government of India, this Hon'ble Council, could not pass a law taking away a subject's right to sue the Secretary of State. It comes to this, that this point is still open and has been argued and in the Burma case at any rate it has been so ruled. That being so, I humbly submit that this legislation is, so far as I can see, with due respect to the eminent jurist, the Law Member, who sits opposite to me, with due respect to him, I still believe that this argument is correct and when I read this passage I read it merely to give the authority of Sir John Simon. The practical part, however, is that the enactments are there and I go upon those enactments.

[Mr. G. S. Khaparde.] [7TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

"The next point which is of importance in this case is that which prohibits all revision. Such a law is repugnant to the British constitution. The House of Lords is the highest Court of justice and to that Court every order passed should be taken. The Privy Council is not really a Court established by any law, but independent of those Courts it has grown up, and as I will show, nobody has disputed its authority, but the fact still remains that the House of Lords is the highest Court for the whole of the British Empire, and I believe one of these days this matter will be taken to the House of Lords and it will be argued there. So, if what I say is true and has got any force, then it follows that this enactment may have to be tested and may be taken by somebody who has the ability, the capability and the money to spend on it before the House of Lords, as to whether it is within the competence of this Hon'ble Council to pass this law. Taking it that we are, as a matter of legal argument, I still submit that it is not within the jurisdiction of this Council. For the sake of argument assume that it is within the jurisdiction of this Council, what is the result? The first question has been raised and argued at great length and with great ability in this Council that it would be inexpedient. It has been also argued that it would affect the reception that the people are willing to accord to the Reform proposals put forward by your Excellency and the Secretary of State. I put forward a third ground to show the inexpediency of it. It is like the old story; a traveller had gone to sleep under a tree and the sun's rays were falling upon his face. A swan was passing and (swans are generally spoken of as good) he saw this and spread his wings to throw shade on the face of the traveller to protect him from the rays of the sun and make him sleep better; in the meantime a squirrel ran across and disturbed his sleep, and the traveller got up and he believed that it was the swan which did the mischief and shot the swan. It comes to be like this here. We have been endeavouring, everybody in this Council has been endeavouring to facilitate the passage of these reforms; we have been endeavouring to speak about them and to discuss them and to bring them home to the people and so on; but there may be,—who knows what squirrels may come in and what trouble may arise?—but anyhow these Bills are to be directed against us here. In fact it was said in this Council that the way in which we dealt with these Bills will or will not facilitate the reforms or something to that effect, I do not quote the exact words, but that the debate on these Bills will have an effect on the reforms. I humbly submit that the two things stand quite apart. It is a question of expediency as it is put forward now. Your Excellency may remember that I ventured to doubt the conclusions of fact as arrived at by the Rowlatt Committee in my speech at Simla. I was taken to task for it and everybody spoke against me, but I am a little bit obstinate in that respect, and I do still adhere to that, because the whole evidence is not before me, and not being before me I am not in a position to say that the conclusions arrived at are correct. But I am willing to argue on the basis of those conclusions being correct. Taking it for the sake of argument that those conclusions were correct, even then I submit those conclusions do not justify the kind of Bill that has been brought before us now. I gave my reasons then and I do not propose to repeat what I said before, but I really wish to draw your Excellency's attention to this part of the case; to-day also an Hon'ble gentleman read out to us some passages which, I believe, are already printed in the book from the statements of persons examined then and which are quoted there. Again, the old difficulty comes back to me, that we are not in a position to read the whole of the evidence and quote passages which could refute those passages. We are only given one passage and not the whole of it, and therefore we cannot quote from the other parts of it, if there are any other parts at all, in which that conclusion can be disputed. We should have the whole of it to see if there are any portions which contradict this portion. Even taking these conclusions to be correct, what does it mean? It means at the most, not that new powers are required, nor that a new procedure is required; it does not mean that anything new is to be done. The old Act is quite enough; the only difficulty, as was pointed out yesterday, was that there was not sufficient evidence. Now, whose business is it to collect that evidence? I believe it is the business of the police or the Criminal Intelligence Department. Why don't they do it? Well, it is said, they are unable to do it. I say that points to the inefficiency of the police; it does not point to the inefficiency or defect of the law; it points to nothing else. Why not ask them to do their work properly? They say they cannot do it. Why can't they? In England they do it; they do not require these laws in England to unearth these conspiracies; they do not require these very unusual laws. Why do they want these laws here to unearth them? It is like the analogy which was put by an Hon'ble Member here 'Lower the standard of the examination because my son cannot pass now.' 'My police cannot collect evidence; kindly make the law more rigorous and relax the rules of evidence.' That is not the kind of argument that appeals to me, and I believe it will not appeal to anybody here.

"In support of this ground of inexpediency, I take the opportunity to say that I have got, since coming to Delhi, nearly 29 telegrams and letters; most of the telegrams (I hold all of them in my hand) ask me to oppose this Bill; 16 of them are from my constituency and they ask me to oppose the Bill as strongly as I possibly can. I have prepared a kind of analysis of these, because it would take a great deal of time if I read them through as they generally repeat the same thing. In my constituency there are 17 places which have sent telegrams to me, they are from Amraoti, Nagpore, Chhindwara, Wanasta, Mehekar, Wani, Chanda, Elichpur, Raipur, Wardha, Khandwa, Pusad, Yeotmal, Warora. So many places have asked me to oppose this Bill and they put forward the same ground. There are others Hyderabad in Sind, Bombay, Malgaon, Saharanpore, and there is one from Delhi itself and so on. Your Excellency will see how widespread is the feeling that these Bills, if allowed to pass into law, would seriously curtail the liberty of the people. Then there is another point; it is a little secret and it is this, we believe that if these Bills are passed they will prevent political discussions being held in India. I remember the time when the Swadeshi movement came up people who spoke about it were taken up; then I also remember that at the time when to speak of home-rule was looked on as seditious. This spirit gradually disappeared, but people have been taken up for it. There is fear in putting these large powers in the hands of the Local Governments and that speaking on politics will be looked upon as seditious. These reforms do require that we should speak to the people about them and the changes to be introduced. But it is feared that speaking on politics will become a little difficult. I remember a case where it was said 'you have no representation, you have no business to talk on these subjects, why do you do so? What right have you to talk?' I say the highest right, because we have not got it. We have a feeling that this Bill if passed will make discussions on political subjects difficult, if not impossible. Then I doubt the wisdom of the course. We want to make friends, we don't want to quarrel, we don't want to rake up old scores or to open old wounds; we want to forget all about it and to begin afresh. It is no use saying 'this was done, and that was done therefore you are unfit.' Why keep old wounds open, the proper thing to do is to forget all about this, and that is what we intend to do. I myself think it is beyond the jurisdiction of this Hon'ble Council, I say it is inexpedient and unwise, because it is to keep old grievances alive, it will cause a breach. I wish I could find the correct English word, there is not exactly a want of confidence, not absolutely a desire to confide entirely, it is somewhere between a want of confidence and a desire to confide. That feeling if allowed to continue, will spread, it does not now exist but it may have a tendency to spread. It would be very unfortunate if that happened. Apart from this there are numerous objections which I do not like to go into as they were dealt with in more or less detail by Mr. Malaviya. A living body does not tolerate a foreign substance and so Jurisprudence does not tolerate a wrong principle being introduced. A living body will throw off any outside matter, so Jurisprudence will not tolerate this principle of the personal liberty being placed at the mercy of the Executive and being taken out of the jurisdiction of the Courts. This tendency of the principle of liberty being curbed by the executive authority would lead to a number of principles being violated as was pointed out by Mr. Malaviya. Similarly, many difficulties will arise. We should stick to the good old principles which have endured for centuries, or we will go back to the old principle of personal rule, the pernicious tendency of bringing back the people to the era of personal rule. I don't think that is the tendency of the modern age, the tendency of the modern age runs counter to this kind of legislation. These are the days of democracy, people do not want that things should be decided by a Court sitting in camera, that is looked upon with a certain amount of disfavour by people. These provisions of the law run contrary to the tendency of the age. Your Excellency, for the reasons that have been advanced, I ask you not to permit this Bill to be passed into law; if it is, it will be a great misfortune and there will be a great deal of trouble. I therefore oppose the Bill and support the amendment that has been moved by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Patel."

2-40 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis :—"My Lord, I beg to associate myself with the views expressed by the Hon'ble Surendra Nath Banerjea yesterday that this legislation is rather inopportune at the present time. I do not agree with some of my friends who think that there can be no difference between political offences against the State and offences against the individual. There is a great deal of material difference, and these several offences have to be dealt with according to their relative importance, and the Government and the Council will be failing in their duty both to God and man if they do not do so when the occasion requires. As regards these Bills, there is a general consensus of opinion in the country that these Bills cast an unmerited slur on Provinces where no such anarchical or revolutionary tendencies prevailed as have led to their introduction. The public think that it would have been more appropriate if, in the first instance, this legislation had been introduced in places where Government were confronted largely with these evils. They think that it is not right to have on the Indian Statute-book any legislation of such a general character at a time, especially at a time when people eagerly look up to the peaceful results of the war and when there is a general desire among the public as loyally to co-operate in the new political development which the pronouncement of August 1917 and the subsequent reports are going to inaugurate, as they did during the continuance of the war to bring that war to a successful termination.

"Even in the provinces where such anarchical and revolutionary tendencies prevailed, we now know from statements made in leading journals and by responsible representative men that the opinion of the minority which unfortunately indulged in such vagaries and unlawful and criminal acts is, thanks to the efforts of the Criminal Investigation Department, veering round to the side of moderation and to the support of law and order. If the Government cannot take such men on trust, whom else can they ? these are the men who are to be responsible for the future administration of the country and they ought to be trusted in the statements they make. If such is the case there should be no necessity of such great hurry to introduce a general legislation for the whole country, especially when Government has in its hands the necessary power given it by the Defence of India Act and otherwise to regulate and put down any such evil wherever rampant. This legislation has undoubtedly roused passions in the country, not calculated to give this measure of such great importance that calm consideration which is necessary to solve such intricate problems. It would be appropriate if time were allowed to let these passions subside or die out and the smoke to settle by giving time for a reasonable and sober consideration of the advantages and disadvantages involved therein. This can best be done by the amendment now proposed, and I therefore give it my humble support."

2-43 P.M. The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi :—"My Lord, having given to the complicated problem now before the Council

my most anxious and careful consideration and having weighed the pros and cons of this difficult question from every point of view, I am convinced, not that the introduction of such a measure as this would not be justifiable under any circumstances, but that the enactment of the proposed law at this juncture is unnecessary and inopportune. The proposal embodied in the amendment proposed by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea furnishes what, in my judgment, is the best solution of the difficult problem which the Government and the country have to face, and I venture to add my humble voice to the earnest and eloquent appeal addressed by my Hon'ble friend to your Excellency's Government for the adoption of a course which is calculated to bring about the desired result without creating widespread nervousness and unnecessary irritation. My Lord, I for one gladly and willingly recognise that in placing this Bill upon the legislative anvil, your Excellency's Government have, in absolute good faith, been influenced to adopt the recommendations of the Rowlatt Committee. I further recognise that in view of the constitution of that Committee, its findings of fact must be accepted without any challenge. And I am sure that the Hon'ble the Home Member needs no assurance from me that, were I convinced of the necessity of the immediate enactment of this law, nothing would deter me from giving him my whole-hearted support. But, my Lord, I cannot help thinking that in arriving at their decision, your Excellency's Government have overlooked a most important part of the Rowlatt Committee's Report. Hon'ble Members are aware that the first 16 Chapters of that Report contain a review of the origin and development of revolutionary movement in India, a description of some of the more serious crimes and dacoities that have been committed from time to time by its members, in some parts of the country, and a brief sketch of the measures adopted by Government in order to put down that movement. It is in the last, that is to say, the 17th Chapter of their Report, that the members of that Committee describe the legislation which they propose, should occasion arise hereafter. To what I consider is the preamble of the proposals in the 17th Chapter, I would invite the earnest and careful attention of this Council. This is what they say in the first two paragraphs of that Chapter :—

'The last part of our task is to advise as to the legislation, if any, mark the use of the expression 'if any' necessary to enable Government to deal effectively with the difficulties that have arisen in dealing with conspiracies.

'This as expressed appears to us to be applicable to the state of circumstances under which the difficulties referred to were encountered. These difficulties have, however, been circumvented for the time being by special temporary legislation and they have not been in operation at the time of our inquiry.'

I earnestly invite the attention of your Excellency's Government to this sentence—

'When this legislation lapses, circumstances may have altered and the position may be better or worse. We do not think it is for us to speculate nicely on these matters. We must of course keep in view that the present war will have come to an end, but we cannot say with what result or with what ulterior consequential effects or possibilities of consequential effects upon the situation. On the other hand, the persons interned under the Defence of India Act will be due for release and the terms of imprisonment of many dangerous convicts will be coming to an end. Further, there will, especially in the Punjab, be a large number of disbanded soldiers, among whom it may be possible to stir up discontent. Nevertheless, if we thought it clear that the measures taken against the revolutionary movement under the Defence of India Act had so broken it that the possibility of the conspiracies being revived could be safely disregarded, we should say so. That is not our view and it is on this footing that we report.'

"Now, my Lord, a careful analysis of the two paragraphs to which I have invited the Council's attention will, I feel sure, convince all Hon'ble Members that what the Rowlatt Committee say in these two paragraphs amounts to this. The revolutionary movement came into being under certain circumstances which are connected with certain years in the past. Certain measures which have been taken since the outbreak of the war have resulted in putting an end, for the time being, to the crimes and outrages committed previously. It may be that hereafter when conditions which existed previous to the war are restored, there may be a recrudescence of these outrages and crimes. We are not in a position to say anything one way or the other. But we are not in possession of evidence showing that the revolutionary movement has been absolutely extinguished, and it is on that supposition that we report to the Government what we think ought to be done in case there is evidence of a recrudescence of those crimes. Looking at these passages as a lawyer, it seems to me that their conclusion amounts to this, that should the time be reached when special legislation such as adopted during the course of the war which has resulted in putting an end to these outrages and crimes for the time being becomes necessary, we recommend the following measures which we suggest should be adopted. Now, my Lord, these paragraphs were written very nearly one year ago. Since then India's steadfast loyalty to the British Crown, her deep-rooted attachment to the British Empire, has been vindicated in a manner beyond all praise. No outrages or crimes of the kind with which the Rowlatt Committee dealt in their report have occurred during this one year. And when we bear in mind the fact that even the very introduction of these Bills into this Council has created an amount of nervousness, alarm and agitation in the country which is evidenced by meetings that are being held all over the country, it seems to me, my Lord, that I should be failing in the duty which I, as a nominated Member, owe to your Excellency's Government if I were not, under these circumstances, to give what I believe to be true and faithful advice to your Excellency's Government. And my advice is this, adopt the course suggested to you by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea. What does that course amount to? It amounts to this, that the Select Committee shall report to this Council six weeks after the passing of the Reforms Act in Parliament, on the Bills which have been introduced in Council to-day. If by that time there is any evidence of the recrudescence of these crimes and outrages, of the existence of this revolutionary movement in India, no one will support the Government more strongly than I. And I am perfectly certain that at least a majority of the Hon'ble Members of this Council will then, because of the existence of this nefarious movement, give their whole-hearted support to Government in any measure, to these very Bills, if necessary, which may be required to meet the new situation.

"With these few words, my Lord, I give my cordial support to the amendment proposed by Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea."

-55 P.M. The Hon'ble Raja of Mahmudabad:—"My Lord, having some little property to look after, I think I can claim to value law and order. I assure you, my Lord, that I will vote for the enforcement of martial law if I think it is necessary, but, my Lord, the Bill as it stands is, in my humble opinion and in the opinion of those whom I have the honour to represent, inopportune, unsound, uncalled for and un-British. My Lord, it means the disfigurement of the political life in this country. It is a question of life and death to us. You, my Lord, have got the power under Regulation III of 1818, and also by issuing Ordinances, to suppress any kind of disorder. This legislation, I am sure, will weaken the political activity and political life in India, and it will certainly strengthen the hands of the Sydenhamites, the followers of Dr. Nair and members of the Round Table. I appeal to you, my Lord, that before it has passed the stage of this Select Committee, it may be dropped, and I do not agree with those who want to postpone it, because it is not a right remedy to suppress the present discontent. This discontent is a discontent of bread, and I am of opinion that it cannot be suppressed by repressive legislation."

At this stage the Council adjourned for lunch.

2-15 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Sahay:—"My Lord, I am one of those who believed that the Government would not hurry up legislation to give effect to the recommendations of the Rowlatt Committee. During the Simla

[7TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Mr. Krishna Sahay; Sir Fazulbhoy Currimbhoy.]

Session, only the other day, while opposing the Resolution of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde about the report of the Sedition Committee and the working of the Criminal Investigation Department, I said that there was no evidence then that the Government was actually engaged in formulating legislation based on the recommendations of the Committee. In fact, I could not understand my friend when he said that he wanted the consideration and disposal of the Rowlatt Committee's report to be kept in abeyance. And yet, only after a few months, here is this Bill, with its twin brother the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, with all its hideousness before us, conferring extensive powers on the Executive which is liable to be abused or at any rate to be misused when political feelings run high in the country, laying down special rules of evidence and of procedure subversive of all principles of law hitherto accepted in this country. It is not proposed to pass this Bill as an emergency measure, for if that course had been adopted, it would have been possible for some of us, regard being had to some political crisis, to give our assent to it. But it is now proposed that this measure should be placed permanently upon the Statute-book of India and form the law of the land. My Lord, there is a world of difference between an emergency measure and a law which is to form part of the law of the land. It is proposed that it should be referred to a Select Committee on the very day that it is introduced into the Legislative Council. My Lord, I ask why this haste, why this precipitancy over this matter? I admit unhesitatingly the importance of the Rowlatt Committee. I admit the high qualifications of the members who formed that Committee, and the weight that ought to be attached to the conclusions at which they have arrived; but with all respect to what has fallen from Sir Verney Lovett, I do not admit their infallibility, especially when they proceed to suggest the methods by which anarchism or terrorism in this country can be suppressed.

"But apart from this, my Lord, it seems to me that the present is the most inopportune moment to introduce legislation of this character; for whatever may be the criticisms directed against the Reform Scheme inaugurated by your Excellency and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State, there cannot be the least doubt that it has produced a very soothing effect on the public mind. I may go further and say that it has given rise to hopes of more spacious days to come. It has given rise to the hope that there is a brighter outlook for the people of this country in the liberal policy which has now been definitely adopted by the Government in their governance. Is this the time, my Lord, to create a feeling the very reverse of that which is necessary for the success of these reforms? The introduction of this Bill has been received with widespread alarm throughout the country, and it is clear that if it is proceeded with it will give rise to a state of things which will cause incalculable harm to the cause which every one of us has near at heart. We want peace, my Lord; we need rest. A calm atmosphere is essential for the steady and progressive development of our ideals. Above all, we wish to secure this development by co-operation between the Government and the people. It is because I believe that the passage of this Bill through the Council will blast all our anticipations, all our hopes, that I raise my voice against the motion and support the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel."

to submit my respectful protest against the principle of the Bill which has been introduced with regard to the Criminal Law (Emergency Powers) Bill and oppose its being referred to a Select Committee. It is my honest belief that the passing of this Bill in times of comparative peace and quiet would not in reality strengthen the hands of the Executive in so far as it would alarm and alienate a large body of non-official public opinion. My Lord, I associate myself with the abhorrence which is being felt everywhere of the methods of anarchical crimes in this country, and with the severe condemnation of them which has been made by the mover of this Bill, and by various Members who have already spoken. Those of us who have followed the course of Indian politics for the last few years have always deplored the appearance of what is known as the anarchist movement in India and all the forces that led up to it and have consistently supported the Government in their efforts to root it out. Many of us have seriously pondered over the tragic story of political crimes outlined by the Rowlatt Committee in their Report. The recommendations made by that Committee, unfortunately do not cover all the remedial measures which are calculated to wipe out political crime from this country. The principal means of removing them is a policy of conciliation, and all communities in this country had entertained the hope that the announcement of August 20th, and the political reforms conferring responsibility upon the people would have effectively quelled the acute political discontent which had been misdirected into these wrong and mischievous channels. My Lord, I cannot help feeling that this is a most inopportune moment for the passing of such a Bill into law. At no time in the history of this country were the forces of political anarchy so much reduced and under control as at the present moment. Coming at the time of the victory of the Allied arms and preceding the beneficent reforms which have been outlined in the Report of your Excellency and Mr. Montagu, such a legislation is bound to spoil the happy effect of circumstances that are welding together the various parts of the Empire into a great and abiding harmony. This will be the last Council called into being under the old constitution, and the life of this Council has been extended by your Lordship's behest until such time as the new Council of a more representative character on a new basis can come into existence. Would it not be better to wait until that moment and to submit this question to the judgment of that Council? Personally, I would very much prefer the exercise by your Lordship of the power vested in your Government to extend the operation of the Defence of India Act and the rules made under them for a period of six or twelve months more so that an opportunity may be given to the people to go into the merits of the case before such a law is put permanently on the Statute-book. I am satisfied that no harmful consequence will ensue if this measure is delayed for some time, and it is possible that an improvement in the political atmosphere of India may actually obviate the necessity of ultimately passing such a law altogether. As a business-man I yield to none in my anxiety for the preservation of law and order and for the maintenance of the stability of the State, but after the most serious consideration, I find myself unable to give my support to an extreme measure of this character.

"I can assure the Government that they would have the best support of the Indian communities if they used the ordinary machinery of the law with a heavy hand to bring to book that band of misguided young men who have adopted the heinous and detestable methods of anarchy and violence.

"If still your Lordship's Government thinks it essential that a Bill of this nature be introduced, I would appeal to your Lordship's Government to accept the Hon'ble Mr. Patel's amendment of deferring this Bill until the Reform Councils are formed."

3 P.M. The Hon'ble Raja Sir Rampal Singh :—"My Lord, the Bill before the Council has been very exhaustively and eloquently discussed and criticised by my Hon'ble Colleagues who have preceded me, and I know it can serve no useful purpose if the same arguments be reiterated over and over again. But the Hon'ble the Home Member has reminded us of the responsibility that we have towards the Government and the people, and I feel I will be failing in my duty towards them if I do not raise my humble but strong voice against it. Telegrams after telegrams have been pouring in from all parts of the country in protest against this Bill. I cannot help observing that the Government have not been well-advised in launching upon this measure which, I am afraid, will not prove efficacious in eradicating the evil that has unfortunately crept into the country, and which is very greatly deplored by all sensible men. But I am constrained to say that the more the repressive measures will be adopted, the more the malady is liable to become serious. The human heart and the human mind are very sensitive and very delicate mechanisms, if I may call them so, in the human body and cannot be won over and brought under control by rough handling.

"Pour more sympathy into the administrative machinery, open more outlets for the realisation of the legitimate aspirations of the people. Let India's interest, well-being and prosperity be the first and foremost consideration of the Government, and the evil is sure to die a natural death. My Lord, the provisions of the Bill are a distinct and serious encroachment upon the liberty and the fundamental rights of the people, and are sure to give rise to widespread discontent in the country at a time when it is looking forward with contentment and joyful anticipations to the Reform Scheme of which your Excellency and the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State are the authors. Is it wise, is it expedient, will it be politic to hurl this law upon the country at this juncture when self-determination is in the air, and when everything seems to point and move towards and era of peace and contentment not only here but all the world over? Both the Bills which are on the agenda paper have created an alarm and anxiety in the minds of the people, and the feeling is shared by even the so-called conservative section of the Indian community. What is the hurry, is there any remotest apprehension that a few individuals who have got their heads turned will succeed in subverting the peace and order of the country and within a short space of time of one or two years? To have any such apprehension is a direct slur upon India's unflinching devotion and loyalty to the Throne. I join my Hon'ble Colleagues in the chorus of appeal that has been made to your Excellency to drop the Bill, at least for the present."

The Hon'ble Mir Asad Ali, Khan Bahadur:—"My Lord, 2- I beg to associate myself with the other non-official Indian Members in supporting this amendment. In doing so, I would appeal to your Excellency and your Excellency's Government to drop the Bill for the present. If the Government is not prepared to drop it altogether, they can at least accept the motion which is before the Council asking for its postponement. It is a dangerous measure, and were the Bill to be passed the consequences would be disastrous to this country. I trust the Government will consider the matter thoroughly, and knowing the general feeling of almost all Indian communities to be against it, will drop this drastic Bill and give people cause to be satisfied with the Government's action and be contented, but not discontented.

"With these few words, my Lord, I beg to support the motion before the Council."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Sitanath Ray Bahadur:—"My 2. Lord, it is not without considerable hesitation—it is not with a light heart—that I rise to question the desirability of permanently placing on the Statute-book a drastic measure which, I am sure, will be distasteful to the whole country. Though I must freely admit that the internment policy has been attended with very satisfactory results, as would be evident from the absolute cessation of murders and dacoities, which were so rampant in the country only a few years before, I cannot, in view of the proposed Reforms and in the face of what India has done in the war and the sacrifices in men and money made by her, welcome a permanent measure which will seriously interfere with the personal liberties of the people of this country. The Defence of India Act was an emergency legislation and a temporary measure adopted at a time when the British Empire was engaged in a life and death struggle—the greatest war that history has ever known. We accepted it to deal with a special situation. At a time when the energies of the Empire were engaged in bringing to an end the rampant militarism of Germany, and when it was necessary that all internal disorders should be effectively kept under control and crushed out, we readily assented to a measure calculated to put an end to the mischievous activities of the anarchists. Police-officers were shot dead in the streets and daring dacoities became frequent. I am personally aware of several atrocities perpetrated in the houses of my own relatives when thousands of rupees were lost by honest and innocent men who were helpless before gangs of desparadoes armed with loaded revolvers. It was in the house of one of my near relatives that a dacoity of a most atrocious character was perpetrated in the presence of thousands of men who had assembled to enjoy a theatrical performance, and the appearance of masked marauders was considered to be a part of the programme of the theatrical party, till they made their intention clear by forcing their way into the inner apartments and demanding from the ladies their ornaments, after which they successfully decamped with a booty worth about rupees thirty thousand. I might cite another instance in which another relative of mine carrying on business near my Calcutta residence was the victim of a daring dacoity, and was quietly relieved of ₨12,000 by a band of armed ruffians. I might cite numerous other instances, but they are so well known that I need not weary the Council by reciting them. Whether it was in Calcutta or in the interior of the country, it was always the case, that the victims of these nocturnal raids had always been members of the community to which I have the honour to belong. So it will be easily realised that I should naturally feel inclined to uphold any measure intended to keep under complete control the marauders who masquerade under the borrowed plumage of patriots, but whose pleasant pastime it was to rob their own countrymen of their hard-earned money.

"In our younger days when we read in the papers here how the late Dr. Nishikant Chatterjee had been subjected to a search and turned out of his house on mere suspicion in Russia, we thought that an unfortunate country, where such things could happen and personal liberty trifled with, was no place for innocent men to live in. Yet when necessity arose we gave our unstinted support to a measure which empowered the Executive in this country to do such things.

"But I hope the time, when a permanent drastic measure like the Defence of India Act could be considered necessary, has passed away. The Allies have achieved a glorious victory and normal times have returned. At the present moment India is enjoying complete peace, and there is no sign of internal disorders. Moreover, the sacrifices in men and money that India has made in the war cementing with the blood of her sons, a brotherhood in arms with the Allied nations, fighting for a glorious cause has given her sons, as your Lordship has put it in the Reform Report 'a new sense of self-esteem.' The other day the Secretary of State for India recounted the services and sacrifices of my country and pointed out that during the war there had been recruited 11,61,789 Indians, the grand total of all ranks sent oversea from India was 12,15,338, the casualties sustained by this force was 1,01,439. 'Nobody' said the Secretary of State, 'could say that India did not bear her part in our victory and shewn herself to be, as in future, she must be treated a partner of the British Empire.' The Reform proposals made by your Excellency conjointly with the Secretary of State after the announcement of August 1917 have raised new hopes and aspirations in the Indian mind and dispelled dissatisfaction. Under the circumstances it would be a rude shock to the feelings of the people to rush a permanent drastic measure like this through a Legislative Council, whose sands of life are fast running out and whose term of office has been extended only to smooth the advent of a larger and more representative Legislative Assembly. The Defence of India Act is still operative, and though peace is within sight, the war technically is not at an end. Then to deal with persons whom the Government may consider dangerous, you have Regulation III of 1818. Moreover, the Government has the power to issue Ordinances and to bring in a fresh Bill when necessary. So with these three strings to their bow, Government can certainly wait and see how the new policy of conciliation and trust works, and whether the release of a large number of detenus would have a sobering effect on the misguided youths of the country, which I hope it would. Even the Rowlatt Committee in recommending emergency preventive measures said that every order authorising any interference with liberty must be made for a limited period.

"My Lord, to make my position clear I beg leave to say that I might have been willing to give my assent to a temporary measure to last for a short time in order to keep lawless element in society under effective control, provided the necessity for the measure had been proved, but as the Defence of India Act is still in force and is to run six months after the war, I fail to see the necessity for hurriedly enacting a permanent measure which will hurt India's sense of self-esteem and cast a slur on her loyalty and which, I am sure, will go to neutralise the high hopes and aspirations raised in the Indian mind by the proposed Reforms Scheme. With these words, I beg to support the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, certain arguments have been addressed to this Council which I ought to deal with; but before doing so in any detail, I propose to make a few very short general remarks with reference to this debate. No one can conceal from himself that it is a very important debate in this Council and, as representing Government, I admit frankly that we have practically the whole opinion of the non-official Members against us. One Hon'ble Member has asked whether, as a Government, we desire to pay no attention to the opinion of non-official Members of this Council. The answer can only be that we have every desire to do so; but if we are asked to surrender our own judgment, maturely and carefully come to, on a very difficult question of policy, it is impossible for us to do so even to the unanimous opinion of non-official Members, who are not in the position of responsibility in which the Government is. 2-38 P.M.

"My Lord, one fact at all events has emerged from this debate which to me is a very satisfactory one. Hon'ble Members in this Council have admitted on all sides that the facts as found by this Commission are proved; no one has attempted in this Council to deny the existence of anarchical revolutionary conspiracies and agitators in India, or, I think, really to belittle the importance of their existence. The facts are fully admitted, and the facts lead necessarily to the conclusion that there is still existent in India an organisation of this description which has been, if you like, repressed, held in restraint and kept down during the war, but which is none the less alive and ready to come into full activity again as soon as the repression is relaxed. That is the inevitable conclusion from the facts found by this Commission. Those are the conclusions to which the Commission itself have come, and I say it is impossible for us, if we are to accept those conclusions, to agree that a further power of repression is not a necessary weapon in the hands of an efficient Government. Hon'ble Members do not dispute the facts; they only dispute the conclusions, as deductions from the facts, to which the Commission have come. My Lord, we brought out, we created a Commission of the highest possible character, we asked an English Judge of eminence and reputation as a criminal lawyer, to come out here and advise us; they have advised us and we, as a Government, are bound to accept their recommendations. Surely we should stultify ourselves if we did not. And what have we against it? Hon'ble Members here, legal practitioners of great eminence, no doubt, in local affairs get up and tell us that they do not agree with the conclusions of the Commission. To which are we to turn? The Commission consisted of an English Judge, sitting with Indian Judges of long experience and great weight, with a non-official Indian Member as well upon it, and their recommendations were unanimous. Can we as a responsible Government refuse to follow them? Can we as a responsible Government accept as conclusive my Hon'ble friend, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's statement that he does not agree with their recommendations? Which are we to turn to? Which are we to take? Can any reasonable man doubt? Well, we have made our choice, and we think as a Government we have made the right choice and the only choice that is possible to us. The position to my mind irresistibly suggests the case of a man who is admittedly sick and who has tried the local doctors and is not satisfied with their opinion; he brings out a specialist from Europe to examine his case and associates with that specialist all the leading doctors of the place, and then it is proposed that he should not take their advice. Now, in the ordinary things of life, do any of us act like that? Would any of us resist an opinion of that kind? The committee of eminent doctors advise a nauseous pill; the friends of the patient say:—"No, do not take it; try sugar and water.' The specialists advise an operation. The friends of the patient say 'No, put it off for six months; wait for something else to happen.' Is that the counsel which the ordinary man of the world will accept and follow? I trow not. Surely, we as a Government are only acting on the lines of common-sense in accepting the best opinion we can get, which is emphatic in recommending this legislation. In the first place, we have a remedy proposed and we find it disputed in this Council whether the remedy proposed will be of any use. Some Hon'ble Members have said 'that it will be useless; that it will not effect what we desire; that we shall not be able by these means to stamp out the anarchist conspiracy; that we shall only make it worse.' Here I am glad to see at all events that we have a very definite difference of opinion among the non-official Members themselves. I remember yesterday my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Jinnah, saying frankly and with the weight of his own experience behind him, 'I do not deny that there are these conspiracies and that you can get rid of them by the means you propose; I admit you can do so, but you can do it better in another way.' Other Members say 'that is not so'; there is obviously a division of opinion on the point. But what practical remedy for this state of things which is now admitted to exist in India is put forward by any non-official Member of this Council? We have heard the facts stated by Sir Verney Lovett, who knows them probably better than most of us, and what remedy has been suggested for them. I have heard my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sitanath Ray, recounting experiences that have come very near to himself, and what remedy does he propose? What is the practical remedy proposed in this Council? Well, we have two; let me deal first with the no doubt practical suggestion in a way of my friend, Mr. Surendranath Banerjee. He says, 'You have got powers under the Defence of India Act which will last some time yet. Use them. After that pass an Ordinance to the same effect and use it for six months. Thirdly, you have got on the permanent Statute-book Regulation III of 1818. Use that.' Well, if I may take that in any sense as a mandate from Members of this Council, it is a mandate for repressive legislation of a far worse description than what we are now proposing.

"This Act does not go nearly so far as the Defence of India Act, it is surely a far milder measure than Regulation III of 1818. Therefore, I say that the constructive policy that has been put forward by my Hon'ble friend to my right, Mr. Surendranath Banerjee, and which has been backed by a certain number of Members of the Council is a far more repressive one than the measure which has been condemned in the Council to-day.

"Then what is the alternative policy that we have heard from nine-tenths of the speakers in this Council? It is the policy which is summed up in the Asquithian 'wait and see'. Well, my Lord, we do propose as a Government to wait and see, but we propose before we start on the period of waiting to arm ourselves, in case it is necessary to use our powers again. Let me again take a homely illustration of what I mean. A burglar has broken into your house and has robbed you, and you think he is coming again, or at all events, you think he may come again. If you wait behind the door for him, do you wait without a weapon in your hands, or do you before he comes arm yourself and wait for him armed? This is all we propose to do. Many Hon'ble Members have spoken as if the provisions which are to be enacted by this Bill were to be brought into force in the whole of India immediately. Surely, they cannot have studied the Bill; the whole point is that Government are to be armed with powers which can be called into operation not by the Local Governments, not by the local Executive, but by the Governor General in Council, and they will only be called into operation if the burglar comes again. Then as to the policy of what I have called 'sugar', of 'wait and see'; 'try the effect of the Reforms'. If a snake has stung your son and perhaps killed him, do you try and charm the snake, do you make him an offering and ask him not to do it again, or do you kill the snake? We are arming ourselves with powers to deal with a case of that kind, and surely that is what every prudent man would do in the ordinary walk of life.

"Then, again, I venture to say that in this debate there has been a large amount of exaggeration with regard to the effect of this Bill; a typical instance of this occurred in the speech of my Hon'ble friend opposite, Mr. Chanda, when he spoke of the 'untold miseries', I believe those were his words,—the 'untold miseries' that this Bill will bring to the people of India. Well, it seems to me that that is a great exaggeration and for all the weight with which my Hon'ble friend spoke, I have yet to learn that the pulse of India is in Assam. Then my Hon'ble friend Mr. Bannerjea talked of innocent millions suffering for the sins of a few hundred,—the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah said a few thousand. Here it was, I venture to think, his heart that led him away and not his head. We had one form of argument which really was, put into plain language, the threat of agitation. That is an argument to which no reasonable Government can give way. I venture to think that the agitation in India will be exactly what the politicians choose to make it. Then lastly, we were told, though I think I have dealt with the point before, we were told that the measure will be useless. It is admitted that something must be done, but nothing coming within the realm of practical politics has been suggested by our opponents.

"There have been other contentions raised which I should like to deal with as a legal member of this Council; they are possibly not so material to this discussion as they would be when discussing the details of the Bill, but as they have been raised, I should like to answer them to the best of my ability. The argument has been put forward that we have no power to legislate as we propose to do by this Bill. It was brought into being by Mr. Chanda and was taken up by the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya yesterday. He called for one of the Acts of the Government of India and told us he would elaborate the argument later, but went no further, and when the Council rose I did not know on what the argument was based.

"Dr. Sapru, my Hon'ble and learned lawyer friend, took up the offensive and carried it a little further, but it waited for the courage and ingenuity of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Khaparde, to bring the babe out of its swaddling clothes into the light of day. Then what was it? I hoped to hear something new and interesting. It was the old argument that was raised half a century ago in Calcutta, and which has been revived from time to time; it began in the very well-known case of Amir Khan in 1869 or 1870 and received no acceptance then. It was raised a quarter of a century ago in Bombay and met with the same fate; it has been raised recently in Patna, and has again met with the same fate. It is the old argument that you are touching the allegiance of the subject by interfering with the right of liberty. It is the old argument which has been raised for half a century and has never yet found any supporter on the judicial Bench of this country. I do not propose to deal with it at any length. Let me read a few words only from the most recent judgment of an eminent judge in Calcutta, Mr. Chaudhuri:—

'The Indian Legislature both before and after the passing of the Indian Councils Act, 1861, has from time to time passed similar enactments authorising the privation of liberty in certain circumstances, and no instance has been cited to me in which such acts have been held to be ultra vires or in which any of the above arguments* (these are the arguments which the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde has addressed to us) 'which have been repeated from time to time have ever been accepted as correct'. A similar point, I may note, was raised in England as to the power to restrain the liberty of British subjects and was carried to the House of Lords. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Khaparde read to us from a certain petition before the Privy Council. I know nothing of its contents. I only know that the petition was dismissed, and therefore it is not an unfair assumption that in the Privy Council too this argument found no favour. Is it, under these circumstances, wonderful that I, so far as I am the legal adviser of your Excellency's Government, have declined to suggest that there is any lack of power in the Government of India to legislate to this effect? Remember, that this argument could have been addressed and was addressed to the Courts after the Defence of India Act was in operation. We have had all these years of the war in which the ingenuity of the lawyers has been engaged in trying to attack the powers exercised under the Defence of India Act. We had two very big cases in the High Court at Patna not very long ago in which, as I say, all the ingenuity of lawyers from Calcutta and Patna was employed to try and make the Act of no effect. And these are the arguments upon which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Khaparde says that I ought not to have accepted the position that we have power to legislate. When I interrupted my Hon'ble friend the

Pandit yesterday it was to say that in my opinion there was not the slightest shadow of a doubt as to our power of legislating in this matter, and I say the same again now.

"Then considerable point was made by more than one speaker with regard to the provision in the Bill as to the admission of evidence which it was said was contrary to the existing law, and with that I quite agree. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah argued that we should then have a trial within a trial, in order to ascertain whether the particular person whose evidence was being adduced had been spirited away in the interests of the accused. My Hon'ble friend suggested that this was a great blot upon the clause. I do not think I have misrepresented his argument. I think my Hon'ble friend forgot that possibly it was an unwise thing to argue this in an assembly which contains so many lawyers, as we already have a similar provision in section 33 of the Evidence Act. There you may have exactly the same inquiry, the same trial within a trial......

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"Under section 33 a statement is only allowed subject to certain provisions which I should ask you to read."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"I do not think my Hon'ble friend quite understands me. This clause, of course, goes a great deal further than section 33 Under section 33 of the Evidence Act, we all know that the evidence of a witness which cannot be produced is only admissible provided among other things opportunity has been given to cross-examine him: all that I am dealing with however is the argument which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah rather unwisely, as I thought, elaborated yesterday that the real objection to this clause of the Bill was that you would have a 'trial within a trial' in order to see whether the man had been actually spirited away. All that I am suggesting to him is that we have exactly the same possibility under section 33 of the Evidence Act. He obviously forgets the provisions of section 33. The section deals with the relevancy of certain evidence for proving in subsequent proceedings the truth of the facts stated therein, i.e., when the witness is dead or cannot be found, or is incapable of giving evidence or is kept out of the way by the adverse party. This is the passage in the section to which I referred. Here you have exactly the same 'trial within a trial' in order to know whether he has been kept out of the way by the adverse party. I am only meeting the argument that has been put forward. I am not dealing with anything else. Whether it is desirable to have such a provision in this Bill may be another matter, but the particular objection taken to it is of little weight if that is already in the law under section 33.

"Another point that was made by several Hon'ble Members and which has been emphasised by such an eminent lawyer as my Hon'ble friend the Pandit was that by this Bill we were taking away the birth-right of every man in taking away the right of appeal to the High Court which is part of the charter of liberty. I am not suggesting that these are his own words, but that is the trend of his argument. But does my Hon'ble friend and those who follow the same line of argument forget that until a very few years ago there was no right of appeal whatsoever in any criminal case in England? It is only a very modern innovation in the English law which has allowed a criminal the right of appeal...........

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"Have you any trial by jury?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"In many cases in India we have a trial by jury."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"Give us that and we are quite content."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"It is not merely going

[7TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Sir George Lowndes; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Mr. K. K. Chanda; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

what the law in India is. There is no appeal in a criminal case in India where the case has been tried in the High Court in a criminal Sessions. There is no appeal then, and why? Why have we adopted in India from very early times the right of appeal in criminal cases from the district Courts, from mofussil Judges, but not where the case is tried in the sessions of the High Court? . . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" Is there not always a jury in the High Court?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—" We have juries in the districts just as much. But there is no appeal from a criminal trial in the High Court because of the higher status of the Judges; that I say is the difference. Here we are providing a tribunal to deal with these cases consisting of three High Court Judges, and therefore I say there is no necessity for a right of appeal and that the taking away of the right of appeal is not to deny . . . .

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—" Is it not practicable to appeal from decisions of a High Court on a certificate by the Advocate-General or on a point of law reserved?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—" I am afraid my Hon'ble friend is not quite correct. He will, no doubt, remember clause 25 of the Letters Patent. It reads thus. I am reading from the Calcutta one :—

' And we do further ordain that there shall be no appeal to the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal from any sentence or order passed or made in any criminal trial before the Courts of original criminal jurisdiction which may be constituted by one or more Judges of the said High Court. But it shall be at the discretion of any such Court to reserve any point or points of law, for the opinion of the said High Court.'

" I am, therefore, correct in saying that there is no appeal where a trial is in the High Court, and here the trial that we are providing for is before three High Court Judges.

" Well, I do not desire to follow all the arguments that have been addressed to this Council to-day nor to go into all their ramifications. The various points that have been raised will be dealt with by the Select Committee which, I hope, will consider this Bill very sympathetically. I think it right to say, speaking for myself as a lawyer who has practised for some years under the English system of law, that I have a great dislike to legislation of this kind, and I would not support it as I do whole-heartedly now, unless I was absolutely satisfied myself that it is necessary. I dislike it, but I recognise the necessity for it. I, therefore, support it whole-heartedly as being necessary for the conditions that we have in India at the present time. At the same time I should like Hon'ble Members to know that, when the Bill goes to the Select Committee, any suggestions that they may have to make for mitigating the severity of it or doing away with possibilities of oppression and so on, will meet with sympathetic response from my Hon'ble Colleague, who is in charge of the Bill, and it is there that we may be able to do a great deal to meet the difficulties which many Hon'ble Members have dealt with."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" My Lord, I have had the advantage of listening to the very able and eloquent defence by the Hon'ble the Law Member of the attitude of Government with regard to these Bills. He has asked us not to decide the issues by appeals to emotion, not to be misled by the dictates of our heart, but to use our intellect a bit to see whether the Government's position is justifiable, and whether the course they have adopted is not the right one. Before I deal with these questions, my Lord, I may be permitted to state that I shall try to appeal only to the intellect and not to the heart. Let me begin by saying that I had received instructions, or a mandate if you may so call it, from my constituency, a 3-4 telegram from 13 members of the Madras Legislative Council, to oppose this legislation, and I need hardly say that I have received numerous telegrams from almost every district headquarters, from almost every town in the Madras Presidency, not to speak of other places, asking me to oppose this legislation. But I realise, and I have realised, that there is much truth in what the Hon'ble Sir Verney Lovett has said that we are here to lead and not to be led. I have, therefore, tried my level best to put myself in the position of Government, to realise the responsibilities of Government in maintaining the peace and tranquillity of the country. And to see whether it would be possible for me to reconcile myself or ask the country to reconcile itself to the course which has been pursued by the Government of India in this particular instance. Now, my Lord, what is the issue before the people? The broad, naked issue is whether the people should be satisfied under the present circumstances with a rule by the bureaucracy, by the Executive, pure and simple, uncontrolled by the judiciary. The experiment which the Government has successfully tried during the last century, or century and a half, of ruling the country with the aid of the judiciary, the Government ask us to believe, has miserably failed, and that therefore there is no option left but to rule by the sword, by martial law in essence because the rule by the Executive suggested is practically tantamount to rule by martial law disguised under civilian forms. Therefore, my Lord, the question is, are the people to submit? Is there any necessity for submitting to a rule by the Executive after enjoying the benefits of a judicial administration, pure as far as human ingenuity can devise, is there any justification for asking the people hereafter to forsake their liberty in the name of order and peace and tranquillity in this country? That is the naked issue. Has the Government, I would respectfully ask, realised the full significance of their admission in bringing forward this legislation at the present moment? To my mind they have confessed that, after a century of British rule, the rule of the bureaucracy has brought India to such a state—progressive if you please—that they find that the judicial administration, their own creation, hampers them to such an extent that they would have to discard it if they are to rule India at all peacefully. That is the confession, a confession of inefficiency, a confession of absolute failure, the logical result the admission of the need for this legislation if the Government should press for it. Well, people have been saying that to a very large extent and therefore pressing for reforms, have been asking the Government to take the people into active co-operation as government on the old lines is absolutely impossible. Now the answer of the Government to that may be we have realised that and that is the reason why we have brought forward a scheme of reforms which would give self-government in course of time to India, but meanwhile we find it absolutely necessary to arm ourselves with these powers during the transition stage. It is true that the present system of government is a failure, that we cannot rule on these lines, but we at the same time have to arm ourselves and go back upon our position to some extent and treat the whole of India or portions of India as if they were Agency tracts before the self-government scheme is in working order. My submission is that the policy of the Government for which something has to be said, that the bitter pill which has to be administered to the patient had better be administered prior to the sugar pill, and that the patient would appreciate the sugar pill a little more if the bitter pill were administered first, that repressive legislation should be introduced first and the liberal legislation later on is unsound. What we have to ascertain is whether the bitter pill is a real medicine, whether it may not exasperate and kill the patient, whether it is worth the while of the patient to live an inglorious life, deprived of all security of person and liberty in the hope that on a future day there might be reforms. The next question is as to whether this bitter pill is likey to attain the end which the Government has in view. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes and the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent, the Home Member, have practically accepted the dictum in the Report of the Rowlatt Committee that even in 1914, prior to the theft of Messrs. Rodda's arms, it was felt that the forces of law and order had in this respect been vanquished, and that the sedition party was too strong for the Government. Is that a correct statement of fact? My Lord, I submit that it is not and I beg leave to dispute it; I take the liberty to say that the police of Bengal as of other provinces have been as efficient, perhaps much more efficient, in tracking this particular kind of crime than they have been in grappling with other serious forms of crime, and if there is any inefficiency, if there is any inability to cope with the situation, it is not to be noticed in this particular case alone, but it is to be found all along in the case of grave crime. I beg permission to quote only a few facts to show that I am right that in the matter of the sedition trials the Courts have been a little more lenient towards the prosecution than they have been in the case of other crimes, and that the percentage of convictions has been much higher than in the case of murders and dacoities, and therefore it is not a correct fact to say that the forces of law and order have been found inadequate in this particular instance. If you say that they have been all along inadequate in dealing with grave crime, I have no answer but to say, 'yes,' but if the Government thinks that they have been adequate in dealing with grave crime but that in this particular instance alone they have failed, I beg to join issue with them. What do you find? The Committee say that in the ten attempts to strike at revolutionary conspiracies, 192 persons were involved in the prosecutions launched, and that 63 were convicted, that is a percentage of about 33. Now, my Lord, what has been the fate of the cases which have been brought to the Courts for murder and dacoity. You find that in Bengal during the year 1912, 420 reported cases of murders and only 39 convictions, which is 9 per cent. You find in 1915, 514 reported cases and 71 convictions, about 11 per cent., in 1917, 425 and 60 convictions. And if you take the number of persons, you will find the proportion would be nearly the same.

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [7TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

"Take dacoities again. You find there were in 1912, 249 dacoities and you have had only 19 convictions or 7 per cent. and you had in 1915, 769 dacoities and 102 convictions as against 24 or so in the case of sedition. You might multiply instances and you will find that, although the Bengal police take credit to themselves that in the detecting of cases including miscellaneous cases they have been more efficient than the rest of India. Taking the whole of India the police in other provinces have been much more efficient than the Bengal police in the matter of tackling grave crime. Therefore, my Lord, having such an inefficient machinery in your hands, can the Government complain that the people have not loyally co-operated in dealing with this sort of grave crime. It is not the fault of the people that they have not succeeded in enabling the Government to secure a larger number of convictions. It is the fault of the administrative machinery. It is the mutual adulation society in which we have been living, one department supporting another, each department praising its own men and the others accepting it, that is responsible for this state of things. Therefore, if you ask for a remedy, the remedy is to make the police in general, and the Bengal police in particular, more efficient. Because the police, having search powers, having so many vast powers entrusted to them, had not been able to discover anything until seven or eight years after the rebels openly proclaimed themselves, you say to us, 'we are inefficient we have such a hopeless machinery, therefore arm us with powers depriving the people of the security they enjoy under the protection of a judicial administration.' It seems to me that that is not a fair proposition to advance.

"Let me take up another argument which was advanced by the Rowlatt Committee that the convictions have not been able to repress crime. Have they repressed crime in the case of murder? Have they repressed crime in the case of dacoity? We find that the number of crimes has been increasing year after year throughout India. This state of things is not confined to the case of sedition alone; it is to be found in the case of all grave crime. 3,340 reported murders in 1903 and 4,770 in 1915 with 1,103 and 1,101 convictions and 2,339 and 3,738 dacoities with 443 and 733 convictions. I shall not weary the Council with further figures, but that is the state of things.

"Your Lordship, the question has been asked what is your practical suggestion? My practical suggestion is this. Just as you stamped out the Thugs by a special department, if need be, create a special department and stamp out this crime. If a province is so beggarly as not to be able to find money for it, take the money from the other provinces, if necessary, in order to be able to finance that province; but in the name of common sense do not deprive the people of other provinces of their rights and liberties, or at any rate do not subject them to the risk of losing their rights and liberties simply because you find one administration unable to cope with crime of a particular character.

"Well, therefore, my first position is that the statements upon which the Rowlatt Committee has based its recommendations that the forces of law and order have been found not to be equal to the occasion and that convictions have not been able to repress crime are only partially true, and that if we are to follow up the logic of the proposals, we shall have to discard judicial administration in the case of all grave crimes also in order to be able to attain the ends we have in view. I cannot but feel, my Lord, that, notwithstanding the safeguarding words that it is only in the case of a seditious movement being connected with certain grave crimes that this machinery is to be employed, notwithstanding the employment of these words, an inefficient police would only have to say 'so and so, who is a political preacher, has preached here and dacoities have gone up,' to invoke the provisions of this Act, and we find, as a matter of fact, ordinary Hindu-Muhammadan disturbances being tried by special tribunals under the Defence of India Act. That procedure may be followed hereafter, the name of sedition being conveniently employed. Therefore, I would ask that those essential facts on which the Report has been founded should not be treated as proved or employed as arguments in support of this legislation.

"Then, my Lord, the question was asked what else would you suggest? What are the constructive proposals you have? Well, one of the constructive proposals we have always suggested is to give us the power. If the Government finds that they cannot manage law and order, let them put them under the control of a representative assembly, and I am morally certain that they will be able to repress this sort of crime much sooner than may be imagined. People will know where to hunt for these men, they will devise the necessary machinery. But, my Lord, may I ask, have the people of that particular locality where this crime has been so prevalent been quartered with any punitive police in the past? Has the Government ever tried the experiment between 1906 and 1918 of asking the people where these disturbances occurred to pay for the police and to co-operate with the police in repressing the crime? What practical steps have been taken by the Government beyond the strengthening of the Criminal Investigation Department, working in secret to tackle this sort of crime that they should come forward and ask this assembly to enact that the people should submit to a sacrifice of their fundamental rights of citizenship? After all, what does the Rowlatt Committee itself say? The Rowlatt Committee says that this sort of crime is not indigenous to any province, that it has been accidentally imported into the Punjab, and that even in Bengal there are so very few people who are given to it compared with the total population, that there is no real danger of its spreading. And the proof of there being no real danger is that even before the Defence of India Act was in force rigidly in Bengal, the Government have during the most troublous times of war been able to enforce all their measures, that the people have been loyally co-operating with the Government, and that although there was sedition it was never a hindrance to peaceful administration during the most troublous times of war. I ask, therefore, if the people have been so loyal and if they have co-operated with the authorities so loyally during the most troublous times of war, is there a case made out for asking the Legislative Council to equip the Government with these powers in times of peace? Well, it has been said these powers are not going to be used immediately; they will be on the Statute-book so that people may be told, 'if you employ terroristic methods we will also employ terroristic methods.' It comes to that. If the Executive are going to shut up any man without any inquiry, without allowing him a chance of proving his innocence in a law Court, it means that the Government are prepared to ask this Council to equip them with terroristic weapons in order to cope with terrorism. I ask, in this peaceful time, would it be right for the legislature to put on the permanent Statute-book a law giving the executive Government powers to terrorise in the manner they ask that they should be permitted to do? I humbly submit, no. Is there any difficulty in the Government of India passing legislation at a moment's notice? That question has not been answered. It is said, why should we not arm ourselves with power before hand? I say it is dangerous, because a bureaucracy always loves power, loves to arm itself with power and abuses that power, if it is armed, whereas if it has to make out a case on a specific occasion, it will see to it that it does not come up unless it has a very good case. That is one reason why, although we realise that the Government can at a moment's notice or even without notice pass an Ordinance or pass a law—and the Government of India are not going to weaken themselves in any way—we object to arming them in advance because the natural tendency is to accumulate more and more power in the hands of the bureaucracy, and we wish to check it. My Lord, has not that tendency been exhibited in this particular case? What are the powers which the ingenuity and the wit of man, of lawyers and of thorough-bred bureaucrats could devise which have not been given already? What are the measures which are not already on the Statute-book even if this Bill is not passed into law, which can be devised, consistently with resort to judicial tribunals? You have passed a law prohibiting any public meetings being held when you wish it; you have taken power to search for any seditious article anywhere; you have taken power to suppress the Press, to confiscate the Press. You have taken power about the burden of proof being laid upon persons who are found in possession of explosives. You can prevent any press from publishing seditious matter; you can confiscate the press and prevent the Post Office from being employed for these purposes. You have got all these powers in your hands. The only drawback the Executive sees is that there might be some shadow of supervision by the judicial tribunals. Hitherto the bureaucracy have not been able to resist the invasion of the judicial tribunals into their preserves in every matter, although the Calcutta High Court has admitted that their powers are practically nugatory. Apart from that, you have accepted that in some instances there might be an appeal to the law Courts. You have got in your Statute-book practically all that you ask for in this measure subject to that one reservation. Therefore I ask, what is the necessity for this measure except that you are mortally afraid of a resort to the law Courts? You are so mortally afraid of your own tribunals and your own judicial officers, that you feel you cannot tackle any problem so long as the judicial tribunals can step in and it is because the bureaucracy has been exhibiting for the last 50 years its mortal dread of judicial tribunals, it is because we know that is the only safeguard of the people that we ask to be protected against legislation of this character. My Lord, what is the golden thread, the silken tie, what is the bond of allegiance between the people and the Government? Hitherto, statesmen, jurists, publicists, administrators of the highest character have admitted that although the Government is really bureaucratic, the people are willing to submit themselves to British rule because they feel that their lives, their properties and their persons are subject only to the jurisdiction of lawfully established law Courts. That is the real tie of allegiance. I know what is passing in the minds of some executive officials. They would ask us to remember what was the state of things in the ancient kingdoms ruled by Hindus and Mohammadans, and whether the old monarchs did not enjoy arbitrary powers, and if they had them why the British Government in India, with its British spirit, should not be permitted the same powers which they would not employ in the same arbitrary manner as the former rulers of India, may be presumed to have employed them. My answer to that is, if you want us to revert to that kind of rule, let us revert to it entirely: the only reason why we submit ourselves willingly to you is because we feel that your administration of justice is pure, and it is because we feel that it is not likely to be so pure under any other form of Government that we cheerfully accept our apprenticeship under you before self-government dawns in this country. Remove that single link between us and I for one do not see any reason why the people should not say 'Let us have Swaraj within the Empire immediately.' My Lord, you are driving the people to desperation. You are snapping the tie—unconsciously and without knowing it—you are snapping the only tie that makes the people submit willingly, nay cheerfully, to your bureaucratic rule, by saying 'We shall suspend the administration of justice when it pleases us to do so.'

"It is unnecessary to elaborate the argument.—I will not say it is unnecessary—but perhaps it is useless to enter into the question of law whether this Council has jurisdiction to pass a law of this description. My own idea is that this Council has not the power. Section 65 of the Government of India Act has been already quoted. I will not waste the time of the Council by reading it; but inasmuch as the question has been raised, I think I shall have to dwell for a few minutes on that point. The unwritten law and constitution of the United Kingdom guaranteeing the liberty of the subject is the bond of allegiance between the people and the Crown. Queen Victoria's proclamation and various other proclamations have laid down that we are to be treated on the same footing as Her Majesty's British subjects. In the Collection of Statutes relating to British India published under the authority of the Government of India, the first Statute which relates to India is the Magna Charta. Statute 28 of Edward the third, 1354, says:

'No man of what estate or condition he be shall be put out of land or tenement, nor taken, nor imprisoned, nor disinherited, nor put to death without being brought in answer by due process of the law.'

Hon'ble Members may say that this section and these Statutes have been practically repealed by section 65, which says that the Government of India may repeal all British laws passed before the year 1860; but they are not included among the Statutes repealed and there is a reservation: These Statutes relate only to the constitution of the United Kingdom—the constitution to which we look for the protection of our lives and liberties, and on which our allegiance is based and there would be no meaning otherwise in putting in that last clause dealing with the allegiance of the subject if these also were to be treated as not applicable to India. Technicalities apart, however, that is the only bond, and pray remember that you should not snap that bond.

"Then, the Government have said—'Here is the Rowlatt Committee consisting of such eminent judges, fortifying us in our conclusions, and would it be right on the part of this Legislative Council, consisting of inexperts who cannot know the facts correctly, to ask us to swerve from our decision because they choose to think in a different way. The responsibility is ours—not theirs.' I realise that the responsibility is chiefly yours and not ours, but may I submit, my Lord, that the Rowlatt Committee were not asked as to what measures were necessary in order to cope with this evil. That political question was entirely out of their jurisdiction, although they have indulged in the first paragraph in the gratuitous remark that representative institutions are foreign to this country. Heaven alone knows what relevancy there is in that. The Government of India had their legislative scheme cut and ready practically, and the Rowlatt Committee had an opportunity of examining it and simply followed it. But how can the people accept a Report the evidence on which it has been based having been withheld from the public? Secondly, I am not here impugning the honesty of purpose, the bona fides or the ability of any of the members who sat on the Committee; but may I ask if it was impossible for the Government, knowing that a resolution was moved in this Council asking for a mixed committee to be appointed, to ask the Imperial Legislative Council to nominate one or two of their members to sit on this committee and to assist in their deliberations? Will not the people say, have not they already said, that this committee was specially chosen by the Government, that they had no lot or part in its selection, that men of a particular temperament, whose honesty cannot be impugned, might have been selected because they were men of that temperament?

" I know that in Madras one speaker has alluded to the distinguished President as being of an autocratic temperament, because he walked out of the judges' room when the petition of a conscientious objector was to be heard, saying he had better things to do than listen to such frivolous objections. Such things are being said. It is also said that Government has unwittingly committed a mistake in appointing acting men. I have the highest respect for my distinguished friend the judge from Madras, and I say from my knowledge of him that he could not have allowed any corrupt or personal motives to creep into his decision; but still the Rowlatt Committee has said that the future is to be safeguarded by permanent judges of the High Court being placed on these tribunals, thereby showing distinctly their opinion that Government were not altogether happy in choosing an acting man. I say the Government has lent itself to these attacks unwittingly, because I for one moment will not attribute the slightest motive to the Government in making their choice; but I cannot help feeling a regret that Government could not associate with this committee men in whom this Council or the Legislative Councils of India have confidence, and then this report might have had greater weight with the people than it has at present. Several official Members of this Council have alluded to the acceptance by this Council of the findings of fact of the Rowlatt Committee. What are those facts which this Council has accepted? The facts which the Council has accepted are that there was revolutionary crime of a dastardly character which had to be put down, that there is anti-British feeling in certain parts of India which will have to be stamped out if there is to be peace in the land; to that extent every one of us is agreed; there is absolutely no distinction on that point; we all endorse that. We are in common agreement that it will have to be stamped out and that it does exist. But on the other conclusions, namely, that the existing forces of law have failed or that political remedies that may be applied may not stamp out the evil, and on several other conclusions of facts we respectfully demur to their accuracy. The Rowlatt Committee sat in camera; it had nobody to put the other view; it had nobody to press any other view, and I well remember several experiences of mine as a lawyer to show how even the ablest judges when they hear only one side of the case put before them come to a rapid conclusion, and how difficult it is for the other advocate to dislodge the judge from a wrong position once taken up. I recollect very well in my early days when I went to argue an appeal before a Collector, he said 'Well, Mr. Sarma, you appear for the appellant. I dismiss your appeal.' I begged for a couple of minutes to permit me to argue my position; I was permitted luckily for my client and I managed to get a reversal of the lower Court's judgment. I will not weary the Council with many other instances, but I think that will illustrate the danger of the best men coming to a wrong conclusion even with regard to facts on an ex parte statement. The Government had these facts; the Rowlatt Committee had the very same facts and came to certain conclusions based upon these facts. If the Rowlatt Committee or the Government wanted the people's approval they ought to have allowed the other side to say what they could; but that is a point which I need not further labour at the present juncture.

" Then, with regard to the repressive measures being taken up before the Reforms are taken up, I say one word. I submit with all humility that there has been a great mistake of policy. There is a revulsion in the land which I have been noticing in favour of strengthening the Government's hands and strengthening the cause of moderate reform. The forces of extremism have been or are being slowly but steadily subdued. Government has succeeded in quelling prussianism. Do not allow the people for goodness' sake to say that in quelling prussianism abroad you have to come to establish prussianism in the country. That is what the people are saying. There is a feeling that Germany has been conquered for the benefit of mankind, that freedom and liberty are in the air, that even nationalities much worse placed than we are are hoping and rightly to get governments of their own and that we also may have our fair share. At such a time of hope, when every attempt is being made even by anarchists, to abandon their methods because they see all hope of succour from Germany or from any other country is shut out from them, even they see how futile it will be to endeavour to subvert the British Government; at such a time as this, I pray that you should strengthen the moderate element. What will be the result if the representations of all the non-officials being rejected, as possibly will be the case? These anarchists would say 'Now, look here, you have been talking all along about moderates and extremists; what have you moderates succeeded in getting from Government? You have been utilised for certain purposes of Government, but when Government has set its mind on any object there is no use in your trying.' Do not drive moderates into that humiliating position. Nothing is lost when you have got the power to enforce your will at any moment by agreeing to a little delay as has been asked for. Let us not imagine that the Executive would not always abuse its power. I remember very well in my early days when I entered the Madras Legislative Council that a petty quarrel not of a very edifying kind, in which a European was involved, led to an assault and the military were called in because there was political fervour previously in and about the place. There is likely to be a mistake of cause and effect, and unrest will be created by our anticipating it. I therefore pray that that should not be done. If you have to do anything by way of taking legislative powers, create permanent judicial tribunals, even when you want to act under the preventive sections of the Code. Let legislation be temporary, but to think, to dream of putting this on the permanent Statute-book seems to be madness. We ask for co-operation; you ask for co-operation; we reluctantly oppose this Bill because we love the British connection; we realise that it is only by the prolongation, if possible for ever, of the British connection between the two countries India's destiny will be achieved. It is because we feel that our hopes are centred in this permanent union that we ask that you should listen to our advice; it is because we are desirous of safeguarding the elementary rights of citizenship, we do not wish to condemn the bureaucracy of so much inefficiency of which they are unconsciously accusing themselves; it is because of this that you are playing into the hands of the anarchists, we are not satisfied that this measure is necessary, and we do not wish to render the administration more inefficient than it is; it is because it is not competent to the Indian legislature to pass this law, and we do not wish to create unrest by anticipating it; it is because there is the possibility of specific legislation being undertaken to deal with any particular individuals who may be undesirables and who may have to be released when the Defence of India Act is repealed, if the Regulation of 1818 is felt to be inapplicable, that we ask the Government to pause and to listen to our advice."

3-45 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haque:—"My Lord, I do not want to make a long speech and to try the patience of the Council which has already been tried long enough for the last two days. But in this fateful hour in the life of my country, I cannot give a silent vote on this occasion. My Lord, yesterday the Hon'ble the Home Member told us that we the Indian Members of this Council were on our trial, that by the manner we voted on this we would be judged, that is to say, if we voted for the amendment of my friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Patel, we would all prove ourselves unfit for self-government. If we in this Council prove ourselves false to our country, betray our motherland, then surely we are unfit for self-government, otherwise we are not. I for one do not see any logic in that statement of the Hon'ble the Home Member. I refuse to take that statement seriously. To-day we have heard a very eloquent speech from the Hon'ble the Law Member for whose ability and erudition I have the greatest respect. For the exposition of the legal points which he gave us I entirely bow to him, but on the political aspects of this question I beg to differ. My Lord, I oppose this Bill on several grounds. Firstly, I think, that no case has been made out for the introduction of this measure; Secondly, I think it is the negation of all law; Thirdly, I think it is dangerously inexpedient; Fourthly, it is entirely inopportune, and lastly, no urgency has been shown for this measure. My Lord, without entering into details I say this, that coercion has never succeeded in this world. Look at the entire history of mankind and your Lordship will find that it has failed, and miserably failed. Look within the bound of the British Empire itself and your Lordship will find that the history of Ireland is a history of coercive measures, have they succeeded? What I say is this, that in this year of Grace 1919 we find there is a party of Sinn Feiners which is the result of the coercive measures enacted for the benefit of Ireland. My Lord, I know the temper of my people. We Indian Members all have opportunities of mixing with the highest and lowest of Indians; I wish I could say as much for my European colleagues here; and I tell the Council with all the responsibility that attaches to the utterances of a Member of this Council that the temper of this country is not sweet, and that it will not put up with this legislation. My Lord, your Excellency's Government is standing on the brink of a precipice. I entreat your Lordship with all the earnestness I can command to pause before taking the final leap."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"My Lord, when some months ago this Council debated the Resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde on the Rowlatt Committee's Report, I refused to support that part of his Resolution upon the ground that I did not regard the Report as fiction but as a startling revelation of fact. Of course, I said that while it might lead to some legislative action there was time enough to consider the action when it actually came before the Council. That time has now come; the Government have actually made proposals, and we are invited to consider them. I am unable to find that either the nature of, or the time for, legislation is suitable. As to the nature of the legislation laymen like me will not be on sure ground in stating the reasons in a technical way, but as to the time for the legislation I am perfectly clear that the Government have chosen a very unfortunate time. In the first place, your Excellency, I think it is not in accordance with the practice of other Governments to bring in repressive legislation of this nature long before its necessity has become clear. I was listening with the greatest respect to what the Hon'ble the Home Member said on this aspect of the subject, and I beg leave to say that he rather overstated his case when he told the Council that the Government must not be left naked and defenceless when the burglar had made his appearance. The Government cannot be naked and defenceless, it is avowedly in full possession of the powers that it needs to put down wrong of every kind; that will continue for many months yet and if it pleases the Viceroy for another long year yet it will remain in possession of all the needed powers. To say that the necessity has now come and that the Members of this Legislative Council should not leave the Government in a position of defencelessness is certainly in my opinion to over-state the case. Then the Hon'ble the Home Member also relied on the recommendations of the Rowlatt Committee, but I am unable to find in the recommendations of the Rowlatt Committee any mandate or any strong counsel to the effect that any of the measures proposed must be permanent, that they must be worked into the Penal Code, or into the Criminal Procedure Code of the land. Their character as emergency legislation must be recognised. I think the course taken by the Government in recommending to this Council permanent legislation involving alterations in the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code goes beyond the recommendations of the Rowlatt Committee, and has necessarily, therefore, evoked a great deal of alarm. I conceive, your Excellency, that it was hardly necessary to frighten the country by saying that the Government must be armed with powers of a permanent character. I very much wish indeed that the Government had found it possible in the first instance before raising a storm to say that they would be content with these powers being placed in their hands for a temporary period. When in the course of time the Defence of India Act expired or the Defence of India Act extended by the Viceroy expired, it was still necesssary to have these powers, it was open to the Government to call a special Session of the Legislative Council, and I do not think that when the Government take such a startling step as to call a sudden session of the Council to equip it with the necessary powers to meet with a dangerous seditious conspiracy, any one in the country will raise his voice against it. Now everything seems to be alright, wrong-doing is under full control, and Government can say that in the exercise of the powers they have, they have secured peace and tranquillity. To say now, long before the necessity may arise that we want to equip ourselves permanently with weapons of repression—that word has been used by Government Members themselves and I have no scruple therefore to use it—is in my opinion simply to set the country in an unnecessary state of excitement.

"Then we are told that after all these powers are not placed in the hands of small officials. The small officials come in only after the Viceroy has satisfied himself that in certain areas in the country crime of a very deep-rooted and widespread nature is prevalent or is likely to become prevalent. Now I take leave respectfully to dissent from the implications of this proposition. The implications of this proposition go very deep indeed. We are asked to supplant the experience of civilized Governments. If every word that the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes told us were to have its due weight, if what he said were to be carried to its logical conclusion, if in every case where the Executive were armed with arbitrary powers they used them only justly, properly and no more than was adequate to the occasion, if in every case of mis-exercise they could be brought to book, if there was provision for publicity, then indeed there is apparently no reason why in the permanent law of England, in the permanent law of France and in the permanent law of America there should not be legislation similar to that which is proposed for this country. After all, it is good to have those powers. No Government will ever abuse its power. The Executive, wherever they have the power, always use it only when it is necessary. If that is so, if there is no fallibility in the Executive, if all high officials charged with responsible power never erred, then there is no limit to the placing of arbitrary power in the hands of any Executive which a Legislative Council may be called upon to sanction. That, however, is not the way in which responsible people look at things. They ask, are these powers necessary ? I was wondering how the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes himself having made these rather sweeping statements came later on to say 'I myself as a Britisher hate this kind of thing ; repression is distasteful to me.' I heard the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent also say 'after all, these things are bad.' Why should they be bad ? We are bidden always to trust the Executive, to believe that they will never do wrong, the law will always be used considerately and only in the interests of the poor and the helpless ; why should it be wrong then ; why then, should we scruple at all to leave all power in the hands of the Executive, to roll up our Courts of law, to suspend or lay low your Legislative Councils altogether ? That is not the way that we should look at things. We think that the Executive are apt to make mistakes, and I think they do make mistakes. We know, my Lord, Viceroys who have held, who are holding and who will hold power are under no delusion that the Local Governments can make no mistakes whatever; that the heads of Local Governments may not yield to the public opinion of their community, may not be hounded on by an infuriated press to take in hand a policy of severity, always no doubt with the best of intentions, always no doubt with a feeling of horror and repugnance, always no doubt with a desire to stop everything the moment it should become unnecessary. But we know, my Lord, from bitter experience that these measures are put into force sooner than they become necessary; that while they are put into force they are exercised more harshly than is necessary, and that they are dropped only with the utmost reluctance long after the exigencies that called them into existence have disappeared, long after enormous miseries and frightful hardships have been inflicted. We know that these things have happened, and it is because I take it every Englishman feels that these things may happen that he is obliged to say when he stands up in defence of a legislation of this kind, however strongly he may word it in one part of his speech. 'I certainly dislike these things ; they are objectionable on principle.' If they are objectionable on principle in one place, they are objectionable on principle in every place, and their application must be tested by the severest tests and they must at every step be open to challenge. In England, my Lord, as I have read these things, whenever a repressive law is in force, every single exercise of it is at once openly challenged. A public inquiry is probably held. Anyhow a committee is appointed to take evidence. What happens in India? A press law is passed. ten years afterwards in the Supreme Legislative Council an inquiry to be conducted by a mixed commission appointed by the Council is asked for, and your Excellency's Government come forward and say 'we will not appoint a committee. We will not face an inquiry into this affair.' Now that kind of thing is not a circumstance which encourages us to go forward and place summary powers in the hands of the Executive, because we fear with some experience behind us, that you will not submit your actions to the scrutiny of the public as every exercise of arbitrary power should be submitted.

"Then we are told with almost pathetic simplicity quite worthy of a paternal Government. 'Why need the innocent man fear? The honest man need not walk in fear of these repressive measures; they are meant only to punish the wicked and they will be used only to punish the wicked; let the virtuous men go about as usual in the exercise of their work.' I wish that this idyllic picture were true in India or anywhere. Now, my Lord, a bad law once passed is not always used against the bad. In times of panic to which all alien Governments are unfortunately far too liable, in times of panic, caused it may be by very slight incidents, I have known Governments lose their heads. I have known a reign of terror being brought about; I have known the best, the noblest Indians, the highest characters amongst us, brought under suspicion, standing in hourly dread of the visitations of the Criminal Investigation Department. I remember in my own time; it is not a very long experience I have of these matters, but I can remember a very valued friend of mine, now alas no more, a saint amongst men, telling me with almost tears in his eyes, 'I have borne a good character all along, but I have recently become a suspect of the Criminal Investigation Department and my life is passed in bitterness and in sorrow.' Why? because Government started a policy of suspicion generally in the locality and when they sent their minions of the Criminal Investigation Department none, not the most trusted friends of Government, were safe. I can remember, my Lord, in the year 1908 when I went round organising district Congress Committees, such a blight had fallen on the political world, the Criminal Investigation Department had been so active, the repressive policy of Government had been so manifest, it was impossible in many places to get people to come together to a public meeting. 'Oh no, not now, not now!' A gentleman high in office at that time and about to retire from service met me in the middle of the night on one occasion. I was quite surprised, and he told me—'My dear fellow, I have been longing to see you these three or four days that you have been here, but this place swarms with spies and informers. I am nearing my pension and have many children, I do not wish to be mixed up with a member of the Servants of India Society to their knowledge.' It is all very well to say that the innocent are safe. I tell you, my Lord, when Government undertakes a repressive policy, the innocent are not safe. Men like me would not be considered innocent. The innocent man then is he who forswears politics, who takes no part in the public movements of the times; who retires into his house, mumbles his prayers, pays his taxes and salaams all the Government officials all round. The man who interferes in politics, the man who goes about collecting money for any public purpose, the man who addresses a public meeting, then becomes a suspect. I am always on the border-land and I therefore, for personal reasons if for nothing else, undertake to say that the possession in the hands of the Executive of powers of this drastic nature will not hurt only the wicked It will hurt the good as well as the bad, and there will be such a lowering of public spirit, there will be such a lowering of the political tone in the country, that all you talk of responsible government will be mere mockery. You may enlarge your Councils, you may devise wide electorates, but the men that will then fill your Councils will be toadies, timid men and the bureaucracy, armed with these repressive powers, will reign unchecked under the outward forms of a democratic government. Well, we are all anxious to punish the wicked. None of us desires that wickedness should go unpunished. but at the same time I think it is one of the fundamental principles of criminal jurisprudence, in fact one of the very foundations of a stable society, that even the wicked must be punished in certain ways. When Skeffington was shot, I remember the whole world was shocked. Roger Casement had an open trial. But if Roger Casement, wicked man as he was, criminal as he was and thought so by all reasonable people, had been shot as Skeffington was shot, I beg leave to say the world would have been shocked. Even Roger Casement had his rights; he must be tried in open Court and must be allowed an opportunity of clearing his character. Now even in war when all humanity throbs with excitement and peril and when nobody thinks of any thing except how to conquer the enemy, even then, my Lord, there are the laws of war, you have got to play the game. The Germans have been condemned for nothing so much as for the callous way in which they treated all the laws of war. I am sorry to think that in some cases England has had to follow Germany, very reluctantly indeed; but any way there are laws not unknown to ancient chivalry, illustrated by the life of Bhishma, laws which, even in war, may not be violated without incurring the serious reprobation of history. When there are criminals abroad in a country there are certain ways in which they ought to be brought to book. You ought not to lay them by the heels and punish them in ways that will shock the sense of justice, in ways that will make the innocent feel that there is no law in the land, in ways that will make honest, virtuous and public-spirited work impossible. The price even for the extinction of wickedness that is demanded then is far too high. Much better, it seems an ungracious thing to say, much better that a few rascals should walk abroad, than that the honest man should be obliged, for fear of the law of the land, to remain shut up in his house, to refrain from the activities which it is in his nature to indulge in, to abstain from all political and public work merely because there is a dreadful law in the land. I was astonished to hear Sir Verney Lovett tell us that it is not enough to indulge in conventional regrets in this Council. I wonder very much whether he will agree to retain and repeat the word 'conventional.' When Hon'ble Members here get up and reprobate wicked deeds, I take leave to say that they do not do it in a merely conventional manner. I take it that we all abhor wickedness as much as Sir Verney Lovett or any member of the Rowlatt Committee does. May I turn back and say that the proposals made by the Government betray a somewhat callous disregard of liberty. I will take back the word 'callous', the moment anybody says that it is too harsh, and I take it that the Hon'ble Sir Verney Lovett will take back his 'conventional' . . . . . .

The Hon'ble Sir Verney Lovett:—"May I explain, my Lord? What I meant by 'conventional' was simply this. I meant that expressions of regret for calamities and for tragic occurrences which are not followed by serious attempts to secure that such calamities and such tragic occurrences shall not happen again, seem to me to be worth nothing more than conventional expressions of regret."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"Then, my Lord, the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent told us that those laws are intended only to purify politics, not to suppress but to purify politics. I have taken down his very words 'not the suppression but the purification of politics is our aim,' he said. Ah! if in this world good intentions always bore fruit it would be very well and this would be a splendid world to live in. The history of legislation, both social and political, is strewn with instances of miscarriage of excellent intentions. Laws intended to cure poverty have aggravated it, multiplied it; laws intended to cure crime may run very well in the same unhappy direction; and I take leave to say to the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent that the laws now placed before us which are aimed at purifying politics may come dangerously near suppressing them. You cannot place on the Statute-book such drastic legislation without putting into the hands of over-enthusiastic executive officers what I consider short cuts to administrative peace. As I said before, even peace in administration, valuable as it is, can be sought in wrong ways. You provide them with short cuts to administrative peace and there is no administration that is able to resist the temptation to run across these short cuts when the only royal road to peace is the right road, and the righteous road. Now anarchists, it is said, do not want reform. They spurn these political concessions. Oh! yes, there are two ways in which perhaps this expression is intended to be understood. It means in the first place that the crime with which we have now to deal in Bengal, the Punjab and elsewhere, is partly only political, and partly it has become ordinary. I much regret that, so far as I am able to judge of the matter that has been placed before us, there is very considerable truth in the observation. I do think, my Lord, that however this unfortunate episode has begun, though it may have begun in pure political methods, a part of it perhaps has now passed into what must be described as chronic crime. That is so, but I still think that a good part of it is political, and for political crime, while such repressive laws as may be necessary ought to be put in force, the principal remedy is still political amelioration. But perhaps there is another sense in which this has got to be understood. The anarchist does not want political reform. That is too true. But why? That is the thing we have got to understand. The anarchist is afraid that the friction that he wants in the land, that the excitement in which he continually wishes people to live, will die down if the ways of Government become conformable more and more to democratic ways. If responsible government is granted, if ameliorative measures of one kind or another are passed, it is possible that the people will lie quiet for a time and the anarchist will not find plenty of room for his work. He wants that in this country dissatisfaction and discontent must assume more and more aggravated forms. Quite so, but what is the reason for this abnormal state of things. The anarchist is a morbid creature; the revolutionary, the bomb-thrower, even where their motives are honest, that is to say, even where their motives are unselfish, are blind. In my opinion they dwell too much on the unfavourable aspect of things. They read contemporary affairs wrong, they read history wrong; they see no hand of righteousness anywhere. My Lord, political remedies do not satisfy them, and, because they want the final remedy of destruction, all these things seem wrong to them. But, because the anarchist is in this unfortunate condition of mental derangement, are we to say, since these people are not going to be satisfied by political concessions, we will not think of them; we will only apply the rule of law to them? That is not the way, I think, that sound statesmanship should go about the business. We should offer them satisfying measures of political emancipation. But, after all, it is not these anarchists that have to be satisfied. It is the general atmosphere which feeds anarchy that we have got to cure; and, when the anarchist finds that he gets no sympathy anywhere, that he cannot propagate his wicked doctrines in a soil where there is contentment and political prosperity, he will naturally die, even if the long arm of the law does not get at him.

" There is one thing that I should like to say before I sit down. The Hon'ble Sir Verney Lovett quoted to us on more than one occasion words of Mr. Gokhale. Now it is very easy for me to quote Mr. Gokhale back again for the edification of the Hon'ble Sir Verney Lovett and the Members of the Council. We can all quote passages at each other ; we can unearth classical quotations ; we can ransack Greek, Latin and Sanskrit for passages of great pith and moment and applicability to the present conditions. But what we have got to see is how far we are prepared to act upon the one side and upon the other up to the spirit of the teachings for which we are all striving.

" The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent said that we are now undergoing a test. Oh! yes,—............

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" May I correct the Hon'ble Member? What I said was that their attitude on this Bill would be regarded by many both in this country and outside it as a test of their capacity."

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri ; Sir William Vincent.] [7TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—" Yes, it would be regarded by a few people."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" By many."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—" Not necessarily by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent . . . .

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" No."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—" As a test of our capacity to stand any measure of responsible government, are the Members of this Council going to face the unpopularity, the odium, of passing a repressive measure which has become necessary ? That was the question asked. Now, my Lord, I am no member of the Indian Civil Service ; I have not been schooled in the stern discipline of that service ; I am perhaps too tender by nature. It may be that I and several others like me may be unable to face the storm of unpopularity, but I should like to say—and I am not ashamed of it—that we certainly do not think that the sign of strength, that the sure proof that you are a born administrator, consists in courting unpopularity and defying public opinion. I am not made that way. I do not think I lose by that. But at the same time when the stern call of duty comes, when the requirement of truth is laid on me, when the best interests of my country, as I understand them, require it, I am perfectly prepared to submit to unpopularity. If necessary, I am prepared to go through the fire of public odium. But it has got to be proved to me that it is necessary. I will not, for the mere wantonness of it—merely to demonstrate that I am fit to be in charge of a district or even of a division—court unpopularity for these reasons.

" Now, we have been subjected to many tests. We have given our consent to many repressive laws by now—the Press Act, the Defence of India Act. During the war we were hourly on our trial. We have given 100 millions, we have given this, we have given that. The other day we were told that the gift of 45 millions would also be a matter of test. We submitted to it. What test has been really applied to us to which we have not cheerfully submitted? I can hardly think of one. Bidden to bring the milk of a beast of prey, we have brought a jugful of milk of the tigress. Are you going to throw it aside and say, 'Bring the milk of the male tiger ?' That is not fair. Yet, many people in England, testing us probably by this severe standard, may pronounce us not sound, not fit for responsible government. But I do hope, my Lord, that there will be two or three clear-sighted, two or three shrewd people even in England at this time, to say that the Indian Civil Service, the administrators of India,—the Executive, are really on their test. They profess to be prepared in India for a very early beginning of responsible government, when they would be willing not to impose, as they do, their will on the legislature but to take the will of the legislature and carry it out,—when they will be the instruments of the legislature and not its masters. Are they preparing for that time by carrying, in the teeth of the opposition, unanimous and unsparing of their Indian colleagues,—this measure through? Whom have you behind you now amongst Indians? The tragic story of India may be summed up in these words, that you have governed all these centuries in India in isolation, without having any responsible section of public opinion behind you. Now at this supreme hour, whom have you behind you ? No section of public opinion supports you. The nominated members have not given their blessing to this Bill. The zamindar members have not given their blessing. The lawyer members will have none of it. The members of commerce will have none of it. And yet the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes told us, 'We must carry this legislation through because we are satisfied that it is very right: we should have been glad of your help, but with our sense of responsibility we must go on even without your help, however much we would have liked it.' I admire the courage of the Hon'ble the Law Member. I admire the candour with which he said, 'We have the responsibility to-day: you have none of the responsibility.' We realise that position. We have none, my Lord, of the responsibility for this legislation, and I therefore refuse to believe when the case is put correctly before the public opinion that they will say, as the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent seemed to think some sections of the English public might, that we had responsibility and shirked it. We have none.

"Now there is only one more remark, my Lord, I must make and that in justice to the feeling in the country of which for the moment I am the spokesman. I do not think the Hon'ble the Law Member could have meant all that he said when he said that some of us were indulging in threats of agitation. I venture to think that no one here who has spoken against the Bill indulged in anything which might truthfully be described as a threat of agitation. None of us, certainly none of the Moderates, I take leave to say, has power to go and stir up a violent agitation in the country. It is impossible. The agitation must be there already. The heart must be throbbing if any words that we use here can have a possible effect on the general political atmosphere. The agitation is there. I wish to assure my official colleagues that none of us has had a share yet in this business, but if our appeals fall flat, if the Bill goes through, I do not believe there is anyone here who would be doing his duty if he did not join the agitation. That is not a threat. I take leave to think that is by no means a threat. Anyhow I am the best judge of my own mind, and I do not indulge in any threat. I have yet borne no part in this agitation, but if everything goes wrong, if we are face to face with this legislation, how it is possible for me with the views that I hold to abstain from agitation, I for one cannot say."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, may I suggest that the Council now adjourn under rule 3 of the Rules of Business?"

His Excellency the President:—"No, the Council will sit until this is finished."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel:—"Your Excellency, I do not think it is necessary for me to detain the Council for more than a minute or two. So far as we non-official Members are concerned, we have made our position perfectly clear. We have with one voice made it clear to you that we are opposed to this measure. We have made it clear that the passage of this measure will put an end to all constitutional agitation in the country. We have also made it quite clear that the passage of this measure will affect the reception of the proposed reforms. 4-35

"We have also made it clear that the passage of the measure will, or is likely to, affect the satisfactory passage of the Reform Bill. We have left no stone unturned to convince your Excellency and your Excellency's Government that such a tremendous and unprecedented agitation will follow the passage of this Bill that perhaps it will be difficult for Government to meet the situation. In spite of that, if your Excellency's Government with the assistance of the official majority choose to pass the measure, the responsibility is yours. At the last Simla Session my Hon'ble friend, the Finance Member, told us that the responsibility for consenting to or refusing the contribution of 45 million pounds would rest with the non-official Members. May I say the responsibility for the passage of this Bill and the resulting consequences will lie with the official Members. My Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sastri, just now told us that we non-official Members in this Council have no responsibility. I wish he had realised that situation when he voted for the 45 millions."

The amendment was, therefore, negatived.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"My Lord, I have already made my submission in this matter and I do not wish to move my amendment. I, therefore, withdraw it with your permission."

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I understand that your 5 Excellency wishes to allow me an opportunity of replying on the general motion. I do not know if any other Hon'ble Member wishes to speak first."

His Excellency the President :—"We now come to the general resolution that this Bill be referred to a Select Committee. Does any Hon'ble Member wish to speak. After Sir William Vincent speaks the discussion will close."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"My Lord, it is now my duty to reply to the Council on the main motion with which I opened this debate. Before I do so, I should like to acknowledge the very great ability and force with which the criticisms directed against this Bill have been put. I submit, however, that the dangers to be apprehended from this legislation have been overcoloured by many of the Members including the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri. I do not myself think that it can be suggested that any action is now being taken under any of the emergency war enactments to suppress legitimate political movements, or that any movements other than purely seditious ones will fall within the scope of the Bill. I do not think for instance that there is any case now in Bengal, and it is there that most of these revolutionary crimes have taken place in which it can be suggested that persons are interned or placed under restrictions by reason of their taking part in politics. The men upon whom restrictions have been placed are well-known criminal revolutionaries. Their cases have been investigated by no less an authority than Sir Narayan Chandavarkar, who was himself formerly a Judge of the Bombay High Court, in conjunction with a Judge of the Calcutta High Court. It has never been suggested that action has been taken against any of these men because they are mixed up with politics, and it is far from our intention that anything of that kind should occur under this Bill. If we are able to put in any provisions which will prevent any possibility of this, my Lord, we are perfectly ready to do so, though we believe the possibility is already sufficiently provided against. Turning to the detailed criticisms of the Bill, I am first told that the remedy which we propose is ineffective, that reforms are what are needed and not repression. My Lord, my answer is the answer previously given, that this revolutionary movement is inconsistent with any political programme or organised form of government. We were then asked to be content to hope and pray that these men will reform themselves......

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—" Not entirely."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—" Well, my Lord, as we were lately told very pertinently by a Local Government administration is a practical matter and we cannot afford to rely on hope and prayer alone in a matter of this kind.

" We have also been told that the Bill will not effect what is required. Well, the answer to it is to be found in the figures and facts which I cited to you at the beginning of this meeting. It has been admitted indeed by more than one Member of this Council that the measures which we have at present in operation have been singularly successful in coping with this political crime. We did try to carry on with the assistance of the ordinary law for some years, and the result was a steady failure to deal with these offences. Every method of conciliation has also been tried from time to time, and even now is being tried, and I am glad to say that in individual cases they are fairly successful. We have a number of men who have been reformed and turned away from their evil courses, but this alone is not sufficient, and I submit to the Council that it cannot be urged with any force that the remedy we now propose is likely to be ineffective.

" We were then told that the framers of the Report itself did not suggest legislation immediately. My Lord, let me read paragraphs 178 and 179 of the Report, which run :—

' To postpone legislation till the danger is instant is in our view to risk a recurrence of the history of the years 1906-17..........'

' In these circumstances we think that appropriate provisions should be framed and enacted, but should not come into force save upon a notification by the Governor General in Council. '

Who can say in the face of this quotation that the Report did not recommend immediate legislation. Again, in paragraph 187 the authors of the Report say, ' We have been forced to the conclusion that it is necessary in order to keep the conspiracies already described under control in the future to provide for the continuance after the expiry of the Defence of India Act of some of the powers which that measure introduced in a temporary form.

" I submit that, in these circumstances, it is idle to say that the framers of the Report did not recommend legislation. Whether they acted wisely or not is of course another matter.

" Again, it is said that revolutionary crime has now ceased and so there is no need for any further legislation of this kind. Well, my Lord, what did Sir

[7TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Sir William Vincent.]

Henry Wheeler say in a recent speech:—'We have unfortunately the best reason for going on with what checks have been imposed. Men are still abroad known to be leaders in the revolutionary movement. They are still actively engaged in enlisting boys for their own ends and endeavouring to foment trouble.' Here, again, is a letter which I intended to read in my opening speech in which after advocating various violent crimes such as looting, arson, assaults on Government officers, and specifically encouraging such offences as murder and dacoity, the writer concludes thus:—

'Some are of opinion to put a stop to all sorts of violent work till the detenus and State workers come back. Let the old workers come back and we will plan our future, but not till then.'

I think that indicates pretty accurately what the state of mind of some of these men is, that they are waiting for the expiration of the present law in order to renew in a more sinister form their present activities.

"The next argument that I heard was that the legislation was inopportune in that it would prejudice reform and should not synchronise with the Peace Conference now being held. I have explained, my Lord, as best I could, that this legislation has no connection with reforms or politics at all. We are as much interested in reforms as any one else. We have done the best we can to forward the cause of reform and why should we now introduce this legislation in order to prejudice it if we thought this result possible. My own view is, that any outbreak of revolutionary outrages, any serious recrudescence of this form of crime would do more to endanger the cause of reform than any other thing I can think of.

"Then it is said, if this crime is still prevalent Government should use the Defence of India Act as long as possible, and then should ask your Excellency to pass an Ordinance extending that Act for six months. In my opinion the continuance of a war measure after peace was declared under the emergency powers of your Excellency would be an abuse of power, and if we had attempted to take that course, we should have been attacked, and with justice, in this Council for this abuse of an emergency power. Further, I believe the use of it would have accentuated opposition when later a Bill was brought, as would have been necessary, before this Council. We do not want to use war measures after the war is over. The Bill I now introduce is not a war measure nor is it co-extensive with the Defence of India Act, it is a Bill to prevent sedition.

"I am told that the words used by Sir Reginald Craddock, when he introduced the Defence of India Act, preclude the Government from this measure. My Lord, I deny that. I say the measure he then proposed was a special war measure for the period of the war, but it cannot be said that it precluded the Government of India from introducing some years later a measure of a separate character with different provisions, to deal with anarchical crime, which the Defence of India Act was not specifically passed to deal with.

"I have been asked to postpone consideration of this measure, for varying periods. Well, in my judgment I can only say that delay would be fatal. There must be time to examine this Bill, and we are willing to give that time, but if by sudden events the Defence of India Act was to expire and we had no legislation to take its place, then I submit that the consequences would be disastrous. All the ground that we have gained now in the suppression of this anarchical movement would be lost. Our police efficiency, which has been so seriously, and in my opinion so unfairly, attacked, would be destroyed; the services now employed in suppressing this seditious movement would be so discouraged that I think it would be impossible to expect good work from them and law and order would be sacrificed. We should also not be justified in delaying the passing of this measure, in that the delay would force us to use the Defence of India Act, which is a war measure, in times of peace. I am anxious myself that it should not be so used and that we should not be accused of using a measure designed for war for entirely different purposes. To suggest that this measure is due to police inefficiency, my Lord, is, I think, ungenerous and a grudging tribute to men who have done excellent work. On the other hand, it might well be said, if failure to bring these men to trial is what we are accused of, that it is due a great deal to a lack of moral courage, to a lack of that sense of civic responsibility which is really essential in prosecutions of this kind. I will read to the Council what Sir Narayan Chandravarkar and Mr. Justice Beachcroft said:—'Before the Defence of India Act was brought into force the fair trial of a person accused of revolutionary crime had been rendered practically impossible by the murder of approvers, witnesses, police-officers and law-abiding citizens, suspected by revolutionaries of having given information to or otherwise assisted the police: a situation of terrorism was thus created.' My Lord, it was the failure to face this danger which has really led to the necessity for these special measures.

"Lastly, it was said that the measure was an unfair infringement, of the liberties of the subject. My Lord, I admit that it is an infringement, though I know that if I make that admission, I am liable to attack and criticism of the nature delivered now by Mr. Sastri. At the same time, it is useless to minimise what is clearly a fact. But the Government of your Excellency, many of the Members of which are professional lawyers, are the last people in the world who would be willing to impose such restrictions on the liberty of the subject, unless they were satisfied that it was necessary. Who were the members of the Rowlatt Committee? The great majority were men of the same class. Would they have suggested such a course if they had thought any other measure was possible? Have any other practical measures for meeting this difficulty been suggested to this Council? I submit none. For abnormal crime you must have abnormal measures. In fact, there is no remedy other than the measures now proposed so far as we know which has any prospect of success, and I think that this was realised by some Members of this Council, for at least one Member said, 'if the circumstances do not improve in future, or if they get worse, I myself will support you in this measure or a Bill of the same nature.'

"Then I am told that the measure is capable of abuse, that innocent men may be arrested, that constitutional agitation will be stopped, that the decision of investigating authorities will be reached on the evidence of police reports alone and that these committees are really a safeguard of no value. Well, my Lord, every law may be abused. It will be our duty to do the best we can to see that it is not abused. But to undervalue the work of these investigating authorities and to suggest that men will be interned on police reports alone is to overlook plain facts. I have before me now a very careful report from Mr. Justice Beachcroft and Sir Narayan Chandravarkar on a large number of cases, and I defy anybody to say that they proceeded on police evidence alone or otherwise than after the fairest and most scrupulous examination of the actual facts and materials against each person.

"I am then told that we must expect the most terrible agitation if this Bill passes into law. My Lord, this card of agitation has been played a little too much recently, but I see no reason to minimise the prospect of considerable agitation over this Bill. It will therefore be the Government's duty to endeavour to meet any reasonable apprehensions by such changes in the Bill as are necessary without destroying its effectiveness. If there is any way, as my Hon'ble Colleague said just now, in which we can modify this Bill, without destroying the effectiveness of the machinery, we shall be quite prepared to do it. And I hope that if we are able to meet the Hon'ble Members of this Council in a reasonable manner they will assist us in allaying any agitation that may arise over this matter.

"My Lord, I now wish to turn to a very serious allegation or rather to a number of serious statements which were made by the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya. He began by saying that the trouble in the Punjab was caused by the Komagata Maru riot at Budge Budge. He proceeded to attack the conduct of Government and of Government officers in connection with that occurrence. My Lord, I myself was one of a Committee who inquired into this affair in conjunction with two Indian non-officials and two Europeans, one a Judge and one an executive officer, now a Member of this Council. All I can say is that our findings in regard to that riot do not corroborate the allegation of the Hon'ble Member, and that they were never, as far as I am aware, challenged by him or anyone else . . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"No, because it was during war time; we did not want to raise a discussion"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"It is not always that the Hon'ble Member has been so sparing of Government, my Lord; even at the beginning of the war. I repeat that our findings were not challenged by anybody. Similarly the allegation that the trouble in the Punjab began with the Komagata Maru incident is incorrect: it is contradicted by the facts stated in the Rowlatt Committee's Report which Members of Council now have before them, as well as by Sir Michael O'Dwyer's speech in Council last September. I need only refer to two incidents which occurred before the Budge Budge riot to disprove this allegation. One was the attempt to assassinate Lord Hardinge. That was some years before the Komagata Maru incident. And there was, I believe, another outrage in Lahore in 1913. The revolutionary movement had in fact gained some strength before the Komagata Maru incident occurred at all. But a more serious allegation was made later, an allegation that the Government was responsible for the outbreak of revolutionary crime in Bengal . . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"No, no."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—The Hon'ble Member wishes to correct his statement. I can well understand that. I say he insinuated throughout that the action of Government was responsible for revolutionary crime in Bengal . . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"If my Hon'ble friend will not refer to the whole of what I said on this point, it will be wrong and misleading. I described how there was no revolutionary crime in Bengal until 1905, I described how the thing grew and I described the causes, temporary and permanent, which led up to it."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"My Lord, I leave to the Council to judge. Members heard the words used as well as I did. And I maintain that his insinuation throughout was that the Government was responsible for revolutionary crime in Bengal; there can be no doubt on that point. Well, my Lord, was it Government who sowed the seed of sedition in the minds of these young men? Was it Government who, by malignant misrepresentation of the action and motives of Government, by persistent vilification of the authorities watered that seed? Was it Government who instigated neurotic youths to crime? Was it Government who, when steps were taken to check this crime, stood aside in holy horror at any attempt to exorcise this demon which they had raised? What answer is there to that, my Lord? There can be only one answer. It was not the Government, and I repeat what I said last Session, the responsibility for much of this crime rests with those political leaders who have aroused visions in the minds of non-politically-minded persons, have incited them to evil deeds and have entirely failed to quell the evil passions which they have aroused. They have aroused these passions and have then stood aside, and the Government has had to bear the brunt.

"Then, my Lord, the Hon'ble Member went on to disclaim all veiled or unveiled sympathy with these anarchists, and at the same time to speak of them as misguided youths guilty of unconstitutional action. My Lord, these are the euphemisms used to describe murders, dacoities, thefts and similar dastardly crimes . . . . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Does the Hon'ble Member seriously include dacoity and murder in unconstitutional methods? I was speaking of one kind of method which grew up in Bengal after constitutional agitation had failed."

[Sir William Vincent; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea.] [7TH FEBRUARY 1919.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"We have been discussing revolutionary crime all day, and the worst words the Hon'ble Member could find to define it were 'unconstitutional action,' and the words that he used to describe criminal anarchists are 'misguided youths.' And yet he professed—and rightly I have no doubt in his intentions—to have no sympathy with these men. I do not suggest that he has any sympathy with these men, but I do suggest, however, that by his attitude, by language of this kind, crime of this kind is encouraged. My Lord, if we have things misdescribed in this way you will shortly have the attempt on Lord Hardinge's life described in much the same style as an unfortunate incident.

"I am told by the same Hon'ble Member that India's war effort has been forgotten, and that this Bill is the reward for India's loyalty. I think that was the language one Hon'ble Member used. My Lord, our view is that India's war effort would have been impossible unless order had been preserved, and we shall be only too glad to reward and assist those who have helped us in this crisis, but I do not think that because we seek to take action against revolutionaries it can be said that we are forgetful of India's loyalty. The revolutionaries did nothing in the war; they have not helped. Many, indeed, conspired with the King's enemies. Those who have helped in the war gladly shall we reward, gladly shall we assist, as your Excellency has already said. We were then told that the Hon'ble Member assisted in the passing of the Defence of India Act, and he seemed rather to take credit for having taken an active part in India's war effort. Well, my Lord, I was here when the Defence of India Act was passed, and I think some other Members of this Council were here also, and they know what the attitude of the Hon'ble Member was towards that measure. My recollection is that he introduced or gave notice of no less than 20 amendments to that Bill. . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Yes, quite so, but still I gave support to the measure."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Yes, my Lord, support of a kind much like the sympathy professed by a certain Member of this Council towards the Education Bill which I heard Mr. Gokhale describe in this Council as of no value to the Government or anybody else.

"I will now leave Mr. Malaviya and come back to the Bill. I put it to the Council very earnestly that there has been no serious attack on the findings of fact that these revolutionary conspiracies exist, and that the men are now ready and actually preparing to renew their activities at the earliest opportunity. No other remedy of a practical nature has been suggested to meet this form of crime. Is it not then reasonable that I should press the Members of this Council to co-operate with the Government in this measure to cope with this evil? . . . .

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea.—"What about Regulation III of 1818?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I am quite sure that the Hon'ble Member would be the last person to advocate an indiscriminate use of Regulation III of 1818 in cases in which it is proposed to apply the less stringent provisions of the Bill. At the same time, as I said before, I see the difficulty in which my Hon'ble friend and other Members of this Council are placed. I am anxious to meet them; and I am impressed by the criticisms of the moderate non-official Members in this Council. I was told that the Government neglects the opinion of the Council and pays no attention to it. Far from it. We are anxious to secure the support of the Council and to secure it I am prepared to make such amendments as I can in this Bill without impairing the efficiency of the machinery which is necessary to enable the Government to deal effectively with this anarchical movement . . . .

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—"Will you kindly make the Bill temporary?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"That is a question which will have to be considered; but in the meantime I ask the Council to accept the principle of the measure as necessary and to support the Government in a matter of the greatest moment and importance."

The ayes have it.

A division was taken. The motion that the Bill be referred to Select Committee was then put and agreed to, and on the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Patel, the Council divided as follows:—

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for week ending Saturday, 8th February 1919.

Burma.—Except for slight showers in three districts the week was rainless. Reaping of peas and beans in uplands has commenced. Standing crops are good. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has fallen slightly to Rs. 118 per hundred baskets and is above normal. The market for white rice is steady at Rs. 307-8-0 per hundred baskets for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. Harvesting of pulses and mustard, plucking of cotton and transplantation of spring rice are nearly finished. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea and ploughing of autumn rice and jute continue. Outturns of cotton, sugarcane and pulses are fair. Outturn of mustard is poor. Prospects of other crops are not satisfactory. Cattle disease is reported in two districts. Price of common rice has fallen slightly.

Bengal.—Light showers fell over most parts of the province. They improved prospects of standing spring crops and facilitated preparatory tillage for next autumn paddy and jute. Pressing of sugarcane and harvesting of potatoes, mustard and other oilseeds continue. Price of common rice has risen by about 0·4 per cent. Owing to partial failure of winter paddy some distress is apprehended in Bankura. Preliminary relief measures have been arranged for.

Bihar and Orissa.—Moderate rain was general over Orissa. In the rest of the province there was no rain except light showers in Singhbhum. Pressing of sugarcane continues. Preparation of lands for the next season's crops has begun and continues in some districts. The standing crops have benefited by the recent rainfall and are improving. Test works are going on in 27 places in Angul, the daily average number of persons attending such works being 1,091. Gratuitous relief was given to 1,897 persons in this district. The price of common rice has risen in seven districts, fallen in two and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from nine districts. The condition of the spring crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is improving owing to the recent rainfall.

United Provinces.—There was no rain during the week. Slight damage by frost is reported from parts of Ballia and by flood in Sone river from parts of Budaun. Preparation of land for and sowing of sugarcane and extra crops are going on. Pressing of sugarcane continues. Standing crops are doing well. Prospects are favourable. Very little cattle disease is reported and agricultural stock is generally fair. Shortage of fodder is still felt in some 13 districts. Water and market supplies are sufficient. Prices are stationary with a tendency to rise.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows:—There was no rain. No damage to crops is reported. Irrigation of spring crops continues in Etawah. Sugarcane is being pressed in Etawah and Benares. Condition of standing crops is good. Prospects are favourable. Condition of agricultural stock is fair. Cattle disease is reported from parts of Etawah and Jhansi. Fodder scarcity is gradually decreasing but is still being felt. Importation of Bhusa and Karbi is in hand. Forest hay is being steadily imported and sold. Water and market supplies are sufficient. Price basis in Garhwal is 5, in Benares 6½, and in other districts 6½ to 7 seers per rupee. Advances are being freely granted. Distress is acute and increasing in Etawah. There has been no marked increase in crime. Public health is good. Influenza has subsided but plague is reported from two villages of Pargana Pandrah in Benares District. No wandering or emaciation is noticeable except slightly in Hamirpur. Shortage of clothing is still felt in Banda. The figures on works in Banda reported last week should have been 4,907. Numbers gratuitously relieved on the last day of the week:—Garhwal 690, Etawah 1,980, Benares 280, Jalaun 829, Jhansi 14, Hamirpur 2,090 and Banda 6,603. Numbers on works:—Etawah 8,705, Allahabad 873, Jalaun 911, Jhansi 521, Hamirpur 2,723, and Banda 6,561. Inmates in poor-houses:—Jalaun 15, Jhansi 8, Hamirpur 166, and Banda 74. Relief measures are adequate. Suspensions of revenue have been allowed.

Punjab.—The weather was dry. Rain is urgently wanted in parts of the south-east and west. Condition of standing irrigated wheat and other crops is average to good and that of unirrigated crops is below average to average. Pressing of sugarcane and harvesting of toria continue in some districts The yield is generally below normal. Cattle are generally healthy but are weak in some districts owing to overwork and general scarcity of fodder. Water is generally sufficient. Prices are generally stationary, but have risen slightly in some districts. They are above scarcity rates. Prices of wheat : Lahore and Lyallpore 5½, Ambala 5¾ and Ferozepore 6¼ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—The week was rainless. Rain is still wanted. Condition of standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated areas is generally average in Peshawar and Bannu but below average in Dera Ismail Khan. Pressing of sugarcane continues. The outturn is average. Prices of wheat :—Peshawar $7\frac{6}{16}$ and Dera Ismail Khan $7\frac{3}{16}$ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—There was no rain during the week. Prices are stationary. Fodder is insufficient.

Kashmir.—The week was generally cloudy and cold. Cattle are generally healthy. Spring crops are in fair condition. Prices are fluctuating.

Rajputana.—The weather was seasonable. Slight showers fell in a few places. Irrigation of spring crops continues. Cattle disease is still prevailing. Water is sufficient. Fodder is insufficient. Prices are steady.

Central India.—No rain fell during the week, except showers in Gwalior and Ajaigarh, Bundelkhand. Spring crops are being harvested in Malwa and the Southern States. Cotton picking is in progress in Bhopal. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair except in parts of Gwalior, Jaora, Rutlam and Sailana. Crops have been damaged by hail in 11 Pargannas of Gwalior. Agricultural stock is bad in the northern districts of Gwalior and fair elsewhere except for cattle disease in parts of Bhopal and the Southern States. Scarcity of fodder prevails in Gwalior, Indore, Bundelkhand and in parts of Malwa and the Southern States. Prices are high but stationary. Opium weeding continues in Gwalior. Numbers on relief on Bundelkhand works 2,309, and on gratuitous relief 1,371, total 3,680.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been cloudy and cold. Vindhyan districts, Nimar, Betul and Wardha were rainless. Elsewhere light to moderate rain fell, nowhere exceeding two inches. The rain was accompanied by hail in places. This, combined with the previous week's rainfall and hail, caused slight damage to crops in parts of several districts. Otherwise the condition of spring crops is generally good, but a break is now urgently needed. Reaping of pulses is proceeding. Supply of fodder and water is adequate except in parts of five districts. Cattle are faring well. Relief works in the distressed tracts of Damoh, Jubbulpore and Chanda continue. Gram and juar in Amraoti, rice in Seoni and juar in Damoh and Nagpur rose from 1 to 1½ seers per rupee. Elsewhere prices remained steady or fluctuated slightly indicating invariably an upward tendency.

The report on scarcity in Central Provinces for last week is as follows :—

General health is good in all affected districts except for after effects of influenza in the Ahiri Zamindari, Chanda district. Distress continues to increase slightly in Jubbulpore owing to immigrants from adjoining states coming in search of work. Private funds continue here to provide cloth and grain to the poor. Spring harvest is already decreasing distress in Sironcha and will do so in Jubbulpore. Prices of food-grains are high but stationary. Numbers on works:—Jubbulpore 1,481, Chanda and Betul nil, Saugor 52, Damoh 1,569, Seoni 1,474, total 4,576. Figures of workers include only those on specially opened works. Return of excess on ordinary works is being called for. Numbers on gratuitous relief :—Jubbulpore 8,224, Chanda 605, Betul 819, Saugor 86, Damoh 1,892, Seoni 168, total 11,794.

Feudatory States.—Moderate to heavy rain fell in the States. Condition of crops is fair to good.

Bombay.—Standing crops are fair to good. Harvesting of spring crops has commenced in parts of the Deccan and Karnatak. Cotton picking is nearing completion in parts of Sind, Gujarat, Sholapur, Karnatak and Baroda. Fodder supply is generally deficient but supplies continue to be moved to worst affected areas under Government arrangements. Agricultural stock is generally sufficient but cattle are deteriorating except in Konkan. Irrigation is generally deficient. Prices of food-grains are high but generally steady.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows :—

Famine has been declared in Dohad taluka and Jhalod petha of Panch Mahals district. Relief works continue in Ahmednagar, Sirur taluka of Poona and Jhalod petha of Panch Mahals. Distress is deepening in Ahmednagar and Kathiawar. Numbers on relief works are increasing but not rapidly. Emigration continues in parts of West Khandesh, Ahmednagar and Satara. Public health is generally good. There is no wandering or emaciation. People find full employment on Government relief and ordinary public works. Liberal suspensions of land revenue have been granted and takavi is being freely advanced. Cheap grain shops continue working in West Khandesh, Nasik and Kathiawar. Poor-houses have been organised in Thana and for Bombay immigrants in Poona. Two more will be opened shortly in Dhulia and Sindkheda. Cattle camps have been organised in Nasik, Ahmednagar and Poona. Fodder is being supplied to affected areas under Government arrangement. Numbers on relief works :—Panch Mahals 2,531, Ahmednagar 7,470, Poona 1,112. Numbers on gratuitous relief :—Panch Mahals 1,1[illegible]6, Kaira 5,230, Kathiawar 934, West Khandesh 167, Ahmednagar 5,031, Poona 1,725, Satara 1,445, Bijapur 1,341. Numbers on test works :—Panch Mahals 1,765, Kaira 94, Poona 322, Satara 200. Numbers in poor-house :—Thana 268.

Hyderabad.—There were slight showers in parts of five districts, the average being 3 cents. Harvesting of spring crops continues. Crop is fair to good except in Aurangabad, Bir and Warangal districts. Late rice crop is fair and is being weeded. Fodder is scarce in some districts. Prices of grains continue to be abnormally high. Juar is selling at three seers per rupee in Gulburga district.

Mysore.—The week was rainless. Standing crops are in fair condition. Harvested ragi and rice outturn is poor to fair. Sugarcane outturn is fair. Cattle are generally healthy. Prices are generally rising.

Coorg.—The weather was dry. Picking of coffee and threshing of rice continue. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient. Cattle disease prevails in parts. Prices of food grains are high. Public health is fair.

Madras.—Rainfall was good in Ganjam, fair in Vizagapatam, light in Godavari and nil elsewhere. Standing crops are fair generally but have been damaged or are withering in parts of South Arcot, Chittoor and Tanjore. Cholam has been affected by disease in parts of Kurnool and Anantapur. Harvests of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops are limited with outturn sometimes fair but poor in parts of fourteen districts. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding but are restricted in parts. Condition of cattle is good generally. Water is insufficient except in Kistna, Chingleput, Malabar and the Hills. Pasture is sufficient except in parts of seven districts. Fodder is insufficient in parts of seven districts. Prices of rice are generally stationary but those of dry grains are rising. Prospects are bad in parts of Ganjam, Bellary, Chittoor, North Arcot and Salem. The Ganjam people are resorting freely to test works. There are seven test works in Guntur and four in Udayagiri Agency. Total attendance on works :—5,909. Numbers on gratuitous relief :—nil.

Notifications by High Court, Comptroller-General, etc.

GAZETTE OF INDIA.

NOTICE.

The 11th November 1918.

On and after 23rd November and until further notice, Parts I, IV, V and VI of the Gazette of India and the Weather and Crop Report will be published in Delhi. Parts II and III will continue to be published in Calcutta. All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777—79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 P.M. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette.

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India."

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1916, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3. Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

The following is a list of the more important "General" and other maps which are available for the quarter ending 31st December 1918.

EXPLANATION.

All Maps from Surveys after 1905 called "Modern" are printed in 4 or 5 colours, i.e., water forms in blue, towns and roads in red, forests and jungle in green, cultivation in yellow, hill contours in brown with shading to emphasize the hills, and other details in black.

All Maps from Surveys prior to 1905 are printed in black only or in black with hills in brown.

All Maps on scales 1"=4 miles, $\frac{1}{1,000,000}$ or nearly 1"=16 miles and $\frac{1}{2,000,000}$ or nearly 1"=32 miles are printed in either one or two of the following editions, except those marked "Provisional Issue" which are from old surveys:—

(1) Layered edition, printed in colours with contours and graduated layer tints to show altitudes and shading to emphasize the hills. (Colour ribands along boundaries cannot be added to this edition.)

(2) Political edition, printed in colours with colour ribands along boundaries, contours to show altitudes and shading to emphasize the hills.

(3) Provisional issue, generally printed in black or in black with hills in brown. Colour ribands along boundaries are added by hand when required at an extra cost of 2 annas per sheet.

ORDERS BY THE HON'BLE THE AGENT TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL, RAJPUTANA.

NOTIFICATIONS.

Dated Mount Abu, the 1st February 1919.

No. 370-2.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 544 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, as applied to the District of Abu, the Agent to the Governor-General in Rajputana is pleased, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, to make the following Rules, relating to the payment of the expenses of complainants and witnesses attending the Criminal Courts of the District of Abu for the purposes of inquiries, trials, or other proceedings under the said Code :—

PAYMENT OF EXPENSES TO WITNESSES.

1. The Courts are authorised to pay at the rates specified below the expenses of complainants and witnesses—first, in all cases, whether non-bailable or bailable in which the prosecution is instituted or carried on by, or under the orders of, or with the sanction of Government or of any Judge, Magistrate or other public officer; secondly, in all cases entered in column 5 of Schedule II appended to the Code of Criminal Procedure as not bailable, when it shall appear to the presiding Officer to be directly in furtherance of the interests of public justice; thirdly, in bailable cases in which the presiding Officer of the Court, if a Magistrate of the 1st class, or the District Magistrate, on the recommendation of any Magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd Class, considers that in the interest of public justice such payment is required; fourthly, in all cases in which the witnesses are compelled to attend by the Court under the provisions of Section 540 of the Code. Provided always that no such payment shall be made to any witness on the part of Government when the expenses of the attendance of such witnesses have been deposited in Court under Sections 216, 244 or 257 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

2. The rates referred to in the foregoing rules are as follows :—

(a) For the ordinary labouring class of Indians four to six annas per diem for men and three to four annas per diem for women.

(b) For Indians of higher rank in life, eight annas per diem.

(c) For persons earning fixed daily or monthly wages who would lose wages for the period of attendance at Court, the amount of the wages actually so lost.

(d) For Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indians of superior rank, a diet allowance according to circumstances. Such allowance shall not generally exceed Rs. 3 per diem but the Court shall have discretion in special cases to fix it at a higher rate.

3. Travelling expenses will be given only when the journey could not, with reasonable ease and expedition, have been performed on foot, or in the case of persons whose age, position and habits of life render it impossible for them to walk. In such cases, in addition to diet allowance, travelling allowance shall be given at the following rates:—

(a) When the journey is by road, the actual expenses incurred up to a maximum limit of four annas a mile.

(b) Where the journey is wholly or partly by rail—

(1) For Indians generally, railway fare by the lowest class.

(2) For Europeans, Anglo-Indians, and Indians of superior rank, intermediate or second class railway fare ; but the Court may at its discretion award first class fare when the persons concerned, would from their social position ordinarily travel by the first class.

4. Notwithstanding the above rules—

(a) Government servants when summoned to give evidence in their public capacity shall receive nothing from the Court. In this case they are entitled to travelling allowance under the Civil Service Regulations and the Court while discharging them shall furnish them with a certificate in Form A annexed. Government servants when summoned to give evidence in their private capacity may be paid by the Court and may retain any travelling allowance due to persons of corresponding rank under these rules, but they may not draw diet allowance, and they shall not be entitled to any travelling allowance under the Civil Service Regulations.

(b) Witnesses other than Government servants, following any profession, such as medicine or law, shall receive an allowance not exceeding Rs. 5 per diem according to circumstances, and when they have to travel a distance exceeding five miles their actual expenses for conveyance (not exceeding eight annas a mile) or railway fare according to status.

5. A Medical Officer other than a Civil Surgeon, or Officer in Medical charge of the Civil Station, summoned to give evidence in a Criminal Court touching the result of a post-mortem or other examination conducted by him, in cases not falling within the ordinary discharge of his duties, shall not receive any remuneration other than the expenses to which he is entitled as a witness under these rules.

Medical Officer.

Government of India (Department of Finance and Commerce) Resolution No. 3050, dated the 11th August 1882.

6. Medical Subordinates in Local Fund or Municipal employ (including Government servants lent to and paid by local bodies) when attending Court to give evidence in their public capacity, shall be paid the same rates of travelling allowance as would be admissible to Government servants of similar grades under the Civil Service Regulations.

7. The Court ordering the payment under these rules of the expenses of a complainant or witness shall decide—

(a) The class to which he belongs and the rate at which he is to be paid;

(b) the number of days necessary for his journey to and from the Court.

8. The Court shall exercise its discretion in ordering or refusing to order payment of expenses with the limits laid down in the foregoing rules whether an application for payment be made or not.

9. The following procedure will be observed in the payment of diet allowance and travelling expenses:—

At the conclusion of an enquiry or trial or of the examination of a witness or at the close of the day, as the Court having regard to the circumstances of the case may direct, the departmental clerk will take the orders of the Court as to the payment of diet allowance and travelling expenses, the rates at which payments are to be made, and the number of days to be allowed for journeys to and from the Court, and will then prepare a statement in Form E. annexed. The Court, after checking the statement shall there and then in open Court cause the departmental clerk to pay to each complainant or witness the amount shown in the statement as due to him. The presiding Officer of the Court will then sign the certificate on the reverse of the statement and make the document over to the departmental clerk as a voucher in support of the disbursement. The signature or thumb impression of the payee will be taken in column 10 of the statement; but no separate receipt will be taken. The statement referred to above shall be forwarded as soon as practicable to the District Magistrate, under whose orders the amount shown therein as due shall be included in the Contingent Bill of his Office.

10. A register in Form C annexed will be maintained by the departmental clerk concerned.

PREFATORY NOTE.

Prices of Country Produce and Salt in India at the middle of January 1919.

The wholesale prices of food grains and pulses in India at the middle of January 1919, as compared with the corresponding period of the previous year, increased by 59 per cent (unweighted average). The weighted average shows a rise of 65 per cent. The price of rice advanced by 60 per cent, Bengal showing an increase of 59 per cent, Bihar and Orissa 87 per cent, the Madras Presidency 66 per cent, and Burma 38 per cent. Among other minor provinces, the rise of 80 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province and of 75 per cent in the Punjab is noteworthy. Wheat prices rose 40 per cent in India; in the largest producing areas, the increase was 33 per cent in the Punjab, 42 per cent in the United Provinces, and 35 per cent in the Central Provinces and Berar. Among other provinces the rise in Burma was 61 per cent, in the Bombay Presidency 55 per cent and in Bihar and Orissa 48 per cent. Barley prices increased 42 per cent above the level of the preceding year (unweighted average). The weighted average shows a rise of 63 per cent. The increase of 77 per cent in the price of barley in the United Provinces and of 60 per cent in Bihar and Orissa is noticeable. The price of jawar advanced by 68 per cent (unweighted average). The weighted average shows a rise of 76 per cent. The increases in jawar prices were 123 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province, 100 per cent in the Bombay Presidency and Delhi each, 89 per cent in the Central Provinces and Berar, 69 per cent in the United Provinces and 63 per cent in Bihar and Orissa. The average price of bajra increased 99 per cent in India; the noteworthy increases were in Delhi by 125 per cent, in the Bombay Presidency and in the North-West Frontier Province by 115 per cent each, and in the Punjab by 100 per cent. Maize prices rose by 52 per cent in India (unweighted average). The weighted average shows a rise of 79 per cent. In Bihar and Orissa, maize advanced by 109 per cent, in the United Provinces by 96 per cent, and in Delhi by 80 per cent. The price of gram was 48 per cent above the level of last year. In the Madras Presidency it advanced by 87 per cent, in Bihar and Orissa by 85 per cent, in the United Provinces by 70 per cent and in Bengal by 66 per cent. The average price of arhar dál in India showed a rise of 64 per cent; the increase of 145 per cent in Delhi, 100 per cent in Bihar and Orissa, 99 per cent in the United Provinces, 89 per cent in the Central Provinces and Berar, and 70 per cent in Bengal, is striking. There was a rise of 25 per cent in ghi, and of 23 per cent in raw sugar (gur) in India, but the average price of salt showed a fall of 14 per cent. The most noticeable decreases in salt prices were in Delhi (41 per cent), the United Provinces (40 per cent), Bihar and Orissa (31 per cent), Central Provinces and Berar (21 per cent), the Bombay Presidency (20 per cent), and Bengal (19 per cent). There was a rise of 24 per cent in the North-West Frontier Province and 18 per cent in the Punjab.

2. Compared with the preceding fortnight, the prices of cereals and pulses in India at the middle of January 1919 showed a rise of 4 per cent. The prices of rice, barley and arhar dál advanced by 3 per cent each, wheat and maize by 2 per cent each, gram and bajra by 5 per cent each, and jawar by 6 per cent. Ghi showed a rise of 1 per cent but gur and salt decreased by 2 per cent each.

FIELD OPERATIONS.

No. 365.—The following despatch from Lieutenant-General Sir W. R. Marshall, K.C.B., K.C.S.I, on the operations of the Mesopotamian Expeditionary Force from the 1st April to the 30th September 1918, is published for general information :—

No. O.-1907-1, dated 1st October 1918.

From—Lieutenant-General Sir W. R. MARSHALL, K.C.B., K.C.S.I., Commanding-in-Chief, Mesopotamian Expeditionary Force,

To—The Chief of the General Staff, Army Headquarters, India.

I have the honour to submit herewith a report on the operations carried out by the Mesopotamian Expeditionary Force during the period extending from April 1st to September 30th, 1918.

My previous despatch ended with the narrative of the operations which culminated in the capture of the Turkish forces opposed to me on the Euphrates about Khan Baghdadi, and the subsequent pursuit to Haditha, Ana, and beyond.

2. In my previous despatch I alluded briefly to the murder of the political officer at Nedjef but not to the motives which had prompted such an unprovoked crime. The reasons for it have been traced to enemy agency, and amongst the evilly disposed inhabitants of Nedjef a conspiracy, fostered by German gold, had been organised, the heads of it calling themselves, "The Committee of Rebellion." The roots of this conspiracy were in Nedjef and its branches extended both up and down the Euphrates Valley. To put down this conspiracy, therefore, and to mete out stern justice to those actually concerned in the murder was from every point of view of urgent necessity. It was not desired to treat the city, which contains one of the most holy shrines of the Shiahs, and is surrounded by a very high wall, in an ordinary way, i.e., by shelling or by direct assault.

A strict blockade was, therefore, ordered and the outside water supply cut off. Picquets were established round the town with barbed wire connecting them and these effectually stopped ingress or egress. There were two attempts of the insurgents to break out through the blockade line but these were effectually stopped, dominating mounds were assaulted and held by our troops and gradually the blockade line closed in and occupied the bastions of the walls as well as holding the entrance gates. Every consideration was shown to the holy Ulema and to the theological students (most of whom were Persian subjects) and had it been necessary to proceed to extremities all these would have been given an asylum. The loyal inhabitants under the guidance of the Ulema determined, however, to rid themselves and their sacred city of these evil-doers and eventually by 13th April the proscribed persons had been handed over and the blockade was raised. The instigators of the murder and the actual murderers were brought before a military court to answer for their deeds and as a result of the trial eleven were condemned to death and duly executed, seven others were sentenced to transportation and three were deported; in addition a number of undesirables were sent out of the country. The firmness with which the situation was handled, the fairness with which the law-abiding inhabitants were treated and the scrupulous care which was taken to avoid damage to holy persons and places created a most favourable impression on all the surrounding tribes and contributed in no small degree to the subsequent establishment of friendly relations with the somewhat recalcitrant tribes of the Shamiya, Rumeitha, and Shatra districts.

For this eminently satisfactory ending to a delicate and somewhat difficult situation my thanks are due to the acting Civil Commissioner, to Brigadier-General G. A. F. Sanders and the troops under his command and also to the political officer on the spot, Captain F. C. C. Balfour, M.C.

I subsequently visited Nedjef myself and was received with every token of honour. I attended a meeting at which were assembled the Ulema, the Shaikhs of the district and the notables of the town who one and all expressed the most lively gratitude for the measures which had been adopted and their loyalty to Government.

3. On the Persian border certain tribes, notably some sections of the Sinjabis, were inclined to be troublesome (another result of German intrigue and gold) and as this tribe has its habitant just to the north of the Qasr-i-Shirin-Kermanshah road it became necessary to give them a lesson. The Guran confederation (which includes the Kalkhanis) was reported on the 19th April to be about to take action against the pro-enemy sections of the Sinjabis. I decided, therefore, to support these friendly tribesmen in their action and despatched a small column of all arms to co-operate. On the 25th April a brief action took place with eminently satisfactory results. The Sinjabis were defeated and suffered heavy casualties (as well as losing large numbers of animals) and our aeroplanes turned their retreat into a rout.

The effect of this small operation carried out in severe conditions of weather, has been far-reaching. The pro-enemy chief of the Sinjabis, who was known to be in German pay, was himself wounded and the German agents were thoroughly discredited; whilst among the surrounding tribes a profound impression was created in favour of the British and our lines of communication into Persia were safeguarded from serious raiding.

4. Again with the object of making the Persian Lines of Communication more secure I considered it advisable to drive the Turks out of the Kara Tepe-Kifri-Tuz Kermatli area and to hold both Kifri and Tuz for the future.

5. The general plan of operations decided upon was to stimulate a converging attack upon Kara Tepe and Kifri, but in reality to strike first at the more distant objectives of Abu Gharaib and Tuz Kermatli, with the intention of cutting off and dealing subsequently with any hostile forces south-east and east of those places. This plan was to be carried into effect by means of various columns. Preliminary movements were delayed by rain in the middle of April, but all columns were concentrated at their respective positions of assembly by the 25th of that month. Secrecy was well maintained and the Turks appeared to be in ignorance of the impending attack. The operations were entrusted to Lieutenant-General Sir R. G. Egerton, K.C.B., K.C.I.E., and by the morning of April 26th he had completed the deployment of the troops selected for the operation.

6. A small column was sent up the Adhaim river to induce the Turks to strengthen and hold their Abu Gharaib defences. On the right a small mixed column, with which were some irregulars, demonstrated on the upper Diala. At Mirjana another small column of all Arms was concentrated, and the 6th Cavalry Brigade moved to Umar Maidan and bridged the Lesser Naft river above that place. The main column consisting of the majority of the 13th Division with attached troops under Major-General Sir W. deS. Cayley, K.C.M.G., C.B., was at Nahrin, Kupri, where the bridge, which had been destroyed by the Turks in their hurried retreat last December, was rapidly put in repair. This column detached forces towards Abu Gharaib and the Lesser Naft, the last named with orders to move to Abu Alik before dawn on April 27th in order to head off any enemy movement from Kara Tepe in a north-westerly direction. Although the Turks must have been aware of these movements they evidently failed to appreciate their significance as they did not commence their withdrawal from Kara Tepe until evening of 26th April.

The night of 26th-27th April was very stormy and torrential rain fell making the night march of the detached forces an exceedingly difficult and arduous one. However in spite of inky darkness, boggy ground and flooded streams they reached their objectives by daybreak on 27th. The Abu Gharaib position had, however, been abandoned by the Turks and its retreating garrison was discovered and bombed by our aeroplanes. The detached force on the Lesser Naft came in contact with the Turks retreating from Kara Tepe and fulfilled its mission by heading them off from their direct line of retreat.

The 6th Cavalry Brigade under Brigadier-General P. Holland-Pryor, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.V.O., after an arduous night march, overtook the Turks who had retreated from Abu Gharaib and had taken up a defensive position at Kulawand, covering Tuz Kermatli from the south-east. Feigning a frontal attack, whilst gradually working round the enemy's right flank, our cavalry cut the enemy's line of retreat and then charged right through his infantry killing some 200 including two battalion commanders and capturing 565 prisoners, a mountain gun and considerable booty. After reconnoitring the Ak Su with cavalry and light armoured motor cars, and finding the trenches south of Tuz Kermatli strongly held, the cavalry fell back on the main column which was bivouacked four miles south of Kulawand. This retrograde movement was made with the object of inducing the Turks to believe that our forces, as in previous operations, would retire to their original positions. The move evidently had the desired effect, completely deceiving the enemy and inducing him to remain in his position at Tuz Kermatli and even to reinforce it by bringing up troops from Kirkuk.

The small columns operating on the right had conformed to the general forward movement on the 27th and before darkness on that date had reached Chaman Kupri and the right bank of the upper Diala respectively. Kifri was occupied unopposed on the 28th where some 70 sick Turks were found. The coal mines had been flooded but were otherwise undamaged.

The attack on the enemy position was arranged for the 29th and was fought in two main parts, viz., on both banks of the Ak Su. On the left bank a detached force attacked the enemy and drove him with loss across the river to Tuz Kermatli whilst some prisoners and a machine gun remained in our hands.

The main attack, however, was made on the right bank against the Yanijah Bayuk position and was carried out with great dash by the 38th Infantry Brigade supported by artillery, machine guns, and low-flying aeroplanes. The Turks made a stout resistance but the infantry advanced under heavy artillery and machine gun fire with the greatest rapidity and in the most perfect order. By 7 A.M., the position was carried and the Lancashire men pressing on in pursuit entered Tuz Kermatli capturing the major portion of the Turkish forces. The cavalry and cyclists took up the pursuit of the remnants who were endeavouring to get away through the hills and captured many prisoners and much transport. The enemy suffered severely, over two hundred dead being buried by us alone whilst 1,300 prisoners, 12 field guns, 20 machine guns and large quantities of ammunition fell into our hands. Reconnaissances carried out on the 30th showed that the Turks further north were retiring on Kirkuk and had withdrawn from Tauq. The task which I had set the troops was, therefore, satisfactorily completed and the whole area completely cleared of the enemy. However, on receipt of instructions to continue the pressure and to capture Kirkuk (130 miles distant from railhead) some readjustment of the troops became necessary in order to make the supply situation at all possible. Further action was also delayed by the state of the weather which was very stormy and wet during the first week of May, indeed on the 7th torrential rain caused heavy floods in the rivers which washed away the temporary bridges. Notwithstanding this difficulty reconnaissances were pushed forward and on the 5th May found the Turks holding a position at Taza Khurmatli but this force, evidently a small rear-guard, withdrew at dusk and the place was occupied by our troops on the 6th. The cavalry pushed on ahead and got astride of the southerly road leading from Kirkuk to Altun Kupri. Some opposition was encountered but the Turks continued to withdraw and our main body that night bivouacked seven miles north of Taza Khurmatli after having done a 28-mile march. During this period the 1st Corps, to which was attached the 7th Cavalry Brigade, continued to threaten the Turkish positions on the Tigris and to hold the enemy there to his ground.

On the 7th our leading troops entered Kirkuk unopposed, the Turks having retired from it during the night of 6th-7th leaving behind them 600 sick and wounded soldiers who were in a deplorable sanitary condition and were suffering greatly from malnutrition. A large amount of ammunition and equipment was also captured. Cavalry patrols pushing forward got into touch with the Turkish rear-guard but the state of the ground precluded any large movements. On the 8th our main body reached Kirkuk and the Turks withdrew across the Lesser Zab having prepared the bridge at Altun Kupri for demolition.

7. Difficulties of supply, due to distance and state of the ground, now made it imperative to stop further pursuit. Kirkuk was in an indescribably filthy condition and starvation was rife amongst the inhabitants, our troops therefore were kept very busy in sanitary measures, town control, salving and destruction of military material as well as in the evacuation of prisoners and refugees. For a time a small mobile column was left as a garrison after the main force had been withdrawn, but though it was politically desirable to continue in occupation of this centre of Kurdistan military considerations made this impracticable—all possible transport was required to fufil the rôle allotted to us in Persia and on the 24th May the last of our troops withdrew from Kirkuk. Before the final withdrawal all those of the inhabitants who feared the return of the Turks were evacuated as refugees by their own express desire. Those who took advantage of our offer numbered nearly 1,600 and included Chaldeans, Armenians and Mohammedans.

Owing to the distance covered by these operations, and to the bad weather which prevailed throughout, the work of the troops was very arduous and I have nothing but admiration for the good work put in by all arms and the excellent co-operation which was maintained between them. In prisoners alone over 3,000 Turks were taken whilst our total casualties only amounted to 26 killed and 210 wounded. My thanks are greatly due to the able manner in which the whole sweeping operation was conducted by Lieutenant-General Egerton, his staff, and the troops under his command.

8. The rain had continued much later in the year than is usual and the road into Persia had, therefore, been impracticable so that in spite of urgent calls I had been unable to send in that direction more than small detachments. The demoralised Russian troops were retreating to the Caspian and with the exception of Lieutenant-Colonel Bicharakov's Partisan Detachment there was nothing to prevent anarchy breaking loose in Persia.

A state of famine prevailed over the whole length of road from Kerind to Kasvin and the Mission under Major-General L. C. Dunsterville, C.B., was largely engaged in relief work. The Persians, who had suffered greatly from both Turks and Russians, were rather naturally averse to yet another belligerent entering into their country and his point of view was sedulously fostered by enemy agents and propagandists. A great deal of good and useful relief work was undertaken by the Dunsterville Mission and much of the prevailing distress was thereby alleviated. In this connection I would like to bring to notice the excellent work done by Mr. and Mrs. Stead (American Missionaries) in the neighbourhood of Kermanshah; there is no doubt that they saved many hundreds of lives by their devotion.

However by the end of May the road to Hamadan became possible, and the matter being urgent, I sent forward troops in Ford vans as far as Kasvin to take over that place (which covers Tehran from the north and west) from Colonel Bicharakov, whose detachment comprised the rear-guard of the Russian troops evacuating Persia.

9. We were now embarked on an operation of great difficulty. From railhead to the Caspian and Enzeli is, by the road, nearly 700 miles and this road, west of Hamadan, is unmetalled and traverses rocky passes, swift running streams and broad alluvial valleys, bridges had been broken and blown up so that temporary expedients for crossing had to be devised. One at least of the passes is over 7,000 feet and the rocky nature of the ground encountered on many stretches of the road wore out tyres with alarming rapidity. The country in the immediate neighbourhood of the road was famine stricken and not only was the food situation an anxious one but much transport was required for the supply of petrol, oil, spare parts, ordnance stores and the many and varied articles of equipment necessary for maintaining a force in the field.

10. On June 1st, General Dunsterville's Mission arrived at Kasvin, then occupied by Colonel Bicharakov's partisans, some 1,200 strong, together with weak British detachments. On the 8th June the Russians marched from Kasvin with the intention of proceeding to Enzeli and thence by ship to Baku. A small British detachment accompanied them. On reaching Mandjil three days later this force found the bridge at that place held by a Gilan tribe, named the Jangalis with whom were several German officers. After a vain endeavour to parley on the part of the Germans the Russians attacked and after capturing the Mandjil bridge pushed on to Resht and Enzeli assisted by our light armoured cars.

The moral effect of this small action was out of all proportion to its military importance, and for a time kept in order the Jangali leaders who had previously been bolstered up by a fictitious prestige. The closely wooded nature of the country round Resht which they inhabit gives them a sense of security which they endeavoured to turn to account by sniping at our convoys which were being sent to Enzeli, but no serious trouble arose until July 20th when they attacked a small British detachment at Resht together with the British Consulate and bank at that place. After some hand to hand street fighting the attack was beaten off and over 100 Jangalis were killed. Our Hampshire and Gurkha troops fought extremely well, and the Jangalis have not only given no more trouble, but have made an agreement not to assist the Turks any further.

11. During June, small detachments were despatched to Bijar and Miane to keep an eye on the possible activities of the Turks against my lengthy line of communications in Persia, and to establish friendly relations with the local tribes. A further reference will be made to minor operations in these districts (see paragraphs 15 and 16).

12. On July 3rd, Colonel Bicharakov sailed from Enzeli for Alyat, 35 miles south-west of Baku. He had previously accepted the post of Commander-in-Chief of the Red Army of the Caucasus. At this time the Government of Baku was purely Bolshevik and strongly opposed to British intervention. Various small actions were fought near Baku during July between the Tartars and Turks on the one side and the Russians and Armenians on the other, but owing to existing disorganisation the resistance offered with the exception of Bicharakov's troops was ineffective and proved powerless to prevent Baku being seriously threatened. On July 26th, a coup d'etat took place, the Bolshevik Government being overthrown and its place taken by a Centro-Caspian Dictatorship. The latter at once appealed for British aid, but before it could arrive Bicharakov was convinced that the fall of the town was inevitable, and in consequence of repeated acts of treachery on the part of the Red Guards, drew off his detachment to the north and moved along the coast of the Caspian towards Derbend.

13. What news filtered through from Baku was now very meagre, but the Turks were slow to make the most of their opportunities in occupying the town, and, though a landing of British troops now seemed impracticable, a small mission of British officers with one platoon as escort was despatched to report on the situation These landed in Baku on August 4th. For the time being the appearance of even this small party of British troops, which received an ovation on marching through the town, seemed to have an electrical effect on the citizens and government of Baku, and a Turkish attack on the following day was repulsed with heavy loss.

Further British reinforcements were sent during the remainder of August, but their numbers were restricted by the limitation imposed by the great length and difficulties of the Persian Line of Communication. On arrival they took over portions of the defended perimeter of the town, and every effort was made by General Dunsterville and his staff to instil order into existing chaos. The inhabitants of Baku seemed, however, to think that it was no longer necessary for them to fight now that the British had arrived and they gave our troops little or no assistance. On August 26th, the Turks attacked with considerable determination a pronounced salient in the line; they were well supported by their artillery and charged home with the bayonet. This point was most gallantly held by a British company against odds of five to one, unsupported by local Baku troops who should have been there in reserve. The company suffered heavy casualties before being obliged to withdraw. On August 31st, the Turks made two further attacks, which were beaten off with heavy loss by British and Russian troops, who were however subsequently compelled to give ground owing to the exposure of their flank resultant on the withdrawal of some Armenian battalions. On September 1st further ground was lost, our troops being forced back fighting against heavy odds without any efficient support from our local Allies. During all these attacks the Turks lost heavily, and it was not till the 14th September that they again attacked after receiving large reinforcements. On this date they succeeded in scaling the heights driving out the Armenian troops opposed to them with little difficulty, and thereby causing a re-adjustment of the British line to save a menaced flank. On this flank three very weak British companies held out all day on the last ridge on the outskirts of the town under heavy shell fire and against repeated attacks by the main strength of the Turks. From this ridge the town and harbour are completely dominated, and its possession was of great importance.

An attack by the enemy on the centre was brought to a standstill by rifle fire. A counter-attack by British, Russians and Armenians in this vicinity failed through the British and Russians losing all their officers as well as sustaining heavy casualties in the ranks while Turkish artillery fire arrested the advance of the Armenian troops at an early stage. Throughout the day the North Staffordshire Regiment had fought with great gallantry and were ably supported by the men from Warwick and Worcester as well as by the Dunsterforce armoured cars, which were boldly handled and accounted for large numbers of the enemy.

At 4 P.M., it became evident that the Turks who had been attacking since dawn, were fought to a standstill and could do no more than occupy the positions they had gained. Had an effective counter-attack now been possible it is more than doubtful if the Turks could have withstood it but every British rifle was in the line, and the Russian and Armenian troops were by this time incapable of any further effective action. The town was at the mercy of the enemy, who occupied all the high ground, and could shell the shipping in the port at ranges of 3,000—5,000 yards.

It was decided, therefore, to evacute the British detachment. This decision was communicated to the Baku Government. By 8 P.M., all sick and wounded had been carried on board. Troops and guns were then embarked, and by 10 P.M., all were on board, the three ships which had, since our arrival at Baku, been embarked for our use. These three ships sailed without lights, closely followed by another in which it had been possible to collect explosives and ammunition. This latter ship was hit by gunfire from the guardship at the mouth of the harbour, but the others slipped away unscathed and all four arrived safely at Enzeli.

This British detachment had denied to the enemy for a period of six weeks the town of Baku with its very valuable oil fields, and had caused heavy casualties to the Turks who were compelled to bring up a force of considerable numerical superiority before the capture of the place could be effected.

14. I referred earlier in the despatch to a detachment at Bijar. A road runs through this place to the Urmia district where it was known that the Assyrians, Nestorians, and Jelus, had been successfully resisting the Turks during the earlier summer months. In July, it was decided to get into communication with these tribes by aeroplane and to send them by convoy assistance in the shape of ammunition, machine guns, and money. This convoy reached Sain Kala on 23rd July, but the Assyrians were ten days' late in meeting it and their eventual arrival coincided with the occupation of Urmia by the Turks who drove all the Assyrians out, massacring many, and pursuing them along the road to Sain Kala until checked by our advanced troops. The whole of the Assyrians who survived, men, women and children then poured along the Sain Kala-Bijar road from August 3rd onwards and eventually over 50,000 arrived at Bijar whence they were evacuated unmolested to Hamadan. Large numbers unfortunately died from cholera and privation on the way. After a few days' rest and food all were evacuated in batches of 3,000 at a time down the Persian Lines of Communication to Bakuba, where a large refugee camp had been formed. Men capable of bearing arms were organised into a fighting force and others were employed at work on the roads and elsewhere. Their feeding on the way threw a great strain on my supply staff and practically denuded the reserves of supplies which had been collected for our winter use. The able manner in which this undisciplined mob of men, women and children were dealt with reflects great credit on the staff of the Persian Lines of Communication.

15. I had also kept a detachment at Miane on the Kasvin-Tabriz road and by the end of August I received information that the Turks in Tabriz were collecting transport, and presumed that their intention was to endeavour to raid my vulnerable Lines of Communication in the direction of Kasvin. I have already recounted the difficulties of sending troops and maintaining them in North Persia, and every man I could spare from there had been hurried to Baku. Consequently I had only extremely weak parties between Kasvin and Tabriz. On September 5th, the Turks attacked an advanced post of irregulars on the road some 45 miles north-west of Miane. This was driven in, and during the next few days my advanced troops gradually fell back fighting before superior numbers of Turks, who occupied Miane on 9th September and took up a strong position to the south of it. By this time, however, I had been able to push reinforcements forward, and brought the Turkish advance to a standstill.

16. My relations with the Bakhtiari Khans to whom are entrusted the safeguarding of the oil-fields near Ahwaz have remained most cordial, and in order to coerce the Kuhgalus, a tribe who had been causing the friendly Ilkhani of the Bakhtiari some annoyance, and at the same time restore security along the Ahwaz-Ispahan road, I placed during June and July a section of mountain artillery at the disposal of the Ilkhani. The results were pre-eminently satisfactory and it is worthy of record that this section of an Indian Mountain Battery in the hottest season of the year covered a distance of 395 miles in 28 marching days and returned with men and animals in excellent condition.

17. The defence of the Lines of Communication on both Tigris and Euphrates have been ably performed. Trouble from riverain tribes is now almost unknown and I have been able to replace regular troops on the Tigris line to a large extent by Arab police and thereby release several battalions for more active work in forward areas.

18. In so far as the climate has permitted, progressive military training has been carried out by all formations since the cessation of active operations in May last. A special feature of this has been the development of schools of instruction, not only at General Headquarters, but also by the various formations throughout the force. These schools are based on the latest models of those on the Western Front, with such special modifications as are desirable for this theatre of war.

In close connection with the above, every encouragement has been given to organised recreational training, and there is no doubt that the health and physique of the men, many of whom are young soldiers, have benefited in no small degree.

19. Uninterrupted progress has been made in the opening up and development of the country. It must be remembered that in the tract of country watered by the middle Euphrates the tribesmen have never felt the weight of our arms, and unlike those on the Lower and Upper Euphrates have never seen our troops in any numbers.

The dredging of the Hammar Lake, which is nearing completion, is likely to open out the Lower Euphrates still further, and the results cannot fail to benefit the whole Euphrates area which is at present deprived of water communication with the Basrah for the 6 busiest months in the year.

From the Hilla district which is now connected with Baghdad by a broad gauge railway some 70 per cent. of the cereals available for the force are derived. The extensive agricultural and irrigation projects in this region bid fair to restore to this once fertile tract the prosperity it enjoyed when Babylon was at her zenith.

The manufacture of prepared bitumen and lime continues at Hit on a large scale. Some 4,000 tons of bitumen and 5,350 tons of lime have been exported during the past four months and it has been found possible after meeting all government demands to allow of private enterprise in this industry by the inhabitants. Steps are also being taken to develop and work the large oil-bearing strata at Naft Khana and other places and to utilise the coal mines at Kifri.

20. The opportunities afforded to the Royal Navy during the period under review have been few, but Commodore D. Norris, and the officers and ratings under his command have invariably displayed a spirit of ready co-operation in accordance with their high traditions, and I confidently look forward to their finding a wider scope for their activities in the near future.

21. The hot weather in Mesopotamia of necessity limits the sphere of activity of the Royal Air Force. Notwithstanding this, many fine long-distance flights have been undertaken and valuable reconnaissances and much photographic work performed. Some idea may perhaps be gained of their wide range of action when I say that since the conclusion of the Kirkuk operations aeroplanes have been employed on various missions at places as widely separated as Samawa on the Middle Euphrates and Baku in Trans-Caucasia. In fact, whenever troops have operated the pilots and observers of the Royal Air Force have invariably contributed in no small measure to their success, and their boldness and intrepidity are fully recognised by the Army.

22. Great progress has been recorded in the development of the port of Basrah and in the reclamation of low-lying areas in its vicinity. There is now a continuous wharf 3,300 feet in length, adequately equipped with electric cranes, and the entire port railway system has been re-modelled.

23. The Directorate of Signals and Telegraphs has had many difficulties to contend with more especially in connection with the extension of the area now controlled by the Force. These have been promptly overcome, and communication well maintained at all times. During the period no fewer than 850 miles of telegraph line carrying 1,700 miles of wire have actually been erected, while 375 additional miles are now under construction.

There has been too a considerable extension in the use of wireless telegraphy, and a complete chain of wireless stations has been established throughout the area now in occupation.

24. Surveys and the Map Compilation Section have always risen to the occasion, and have continued to produce a large output of admirable work.

25. The period April 1st to July 13th shows a distinct improvement in the health of the troops as compared with the corresponding weeks of last year :—

	Last year.	This year.
Average weekly admissions on account of sickness. Ratio per cent. of ration strength	1·73	1·45
Average weekly wastage (death and invaliding) on account of sickness. Ratio per cent. of ration strength . . .	0·31	0·16

These figures indicate a very considerable saving to the Force which has been achieved by unremitting care paid by the medical authorities to sanitary and medical requirements and to the constant devotion to duty shown by the Nursing Services.

The Red Cross Society has continued to attend to the needs and comfort of the sick and wounded in a most praiseworthy manner.

Ministration to the spiritual welfare of the troops by Chaplains of all denominations continues satisfactorily and the work of Indian Assistant Chaplains is much appreciated amongst Indian Christians.

Considerable progress in the recording of Christian graves has been made and cemeteries are being well maintained.

The Bishop of Lahore paid a welcome visit to the country in June which was much appreciated, and many candidates received Confirmation.

26. The physical and moral recreation of the Force is being attended to, and I am satisfied that the steps taken in forming a Central Recreational Committee will have a beneficial result.

Concert parties and cinema performances are universally provided and much appreciated by the troops.

In this connection and on behalf of the Force my grateful thanks are due to—

Queen Alexandra's Field Service Fund	(Patron. H. M. Queen Alexandra).
Indian Comforts for the Troops Fund	(H. E. Lady Chelmsford).
Women's Branch Bombay Presidency War and Relief Fund	(H. E. Lady Willingdon).
Sind Women's Branch of Bombay Presidency War Relief Fund	(H. E. Lady Willingdon).
Mesopotamia Comforts' Fund	(Marquess of Sligo).
Indian Soldiers' Fund	(Sir Trevedyn Wynne).
Lady O'Dwyer's Punjab Comforts' Fund	(Lady O'Dwyer).
Central Provinces Comforts' Fund	(Lady Robertson).
Shanghai Comforts' Fund	(Mrs. Sausmarez).
Madras War Fund	(H. E. Lady Pentland).
United Provinces Comforts' Fund
Bengal Women's War Fund	(Lady Sanderson).

who have so generously provided gifts of money and in kind for the benefit of the troops.

In April we had the honour of a visit from Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Willingdon who have, throughout the campaign in Mesopotamia, done so much for the benefit of all members of the Force. Their visit was a source of genuine pleasure to all and they were enabled to see for themselves some of the results of their unremitting labours on our behalf.

27. The difficulties of the administrative departments and services have naturally increased with the extended area now occupied by the Force.

Local Resources have been developed in a very satisfactory manner, and good results achieved. The activities of this department are many and varied, and demand much ingenuity and tact in dealing with the local inhabitants. The most important part of its functions during the past summer has been the preparation for the collection of the harvest; the success attained redounds to the credit of the staff of this Directorate in carrying out this arduous duty at a most trying part of the year.

The harvest though later than was anticipated has been bountiful, and it is confidently expected that in the future the Force will be self-supporting as regards barley and fodder.

Supplies have been satisfactorily maintained, and delivered to the troops with a regularity which is worthy of all praise, when it is remembered that not a single metalled road exists throughout the length and breadth of Mesopotamia.

The work of the Transport, particularly of the Mechanical Transport, has been extremely arduous. Immense wear and tear to vehicles has been caused on the Persian road, and it reflects great credit on all concerned to have kept so many vehicles in working order. It is safe to say that a Line of Communication of such a length has never previously been kept up. The strain thrown on the personnel of the Mechanical Transport branch has been very considerable but the demands on them have been met with unfailing regularity and willingness.

The development and opening-up of new lines by the Railway Department during the period has been most marked. Allusion has already been made to the broad gauge line to Hilla. A narrow gauge extension thence to Kifl on the other branch of the Euphrates has since been opened to traffic. In the forward areas also much time and labour has been expended in extending both standard and metre gauge lines and the service of trains has been well maintained.

The Ordnance Services have kept up their high standard of efficiency. Supplies of clothing, stores and ammunition have been satisfactory and the needs of the troops promptly met.

The responsibilities of the Department of Works have increased during the period under review, and though this department has had to contend with a shortage of supervising and subordinate personnel as well as of actual material, the work has been of a consistently high order.

The Board of Agriculture was constituted some three months ago, and has already proved of value in co-ordinating with the Political Department the work of the two recently established Directorates of Irrigation and Agriculture. Considerable irrigation projects are in hand with the object of increasing the food development of the country, but the scope of these is limited by the labour available for the works and the number of cultivators available for the ultimate production of crops. Circle officers have been appointed in order to stimulate agriculture and to improve the methods hitherto employed by the natives. In addition, both government and demonstration farms are being started.

The Directorate of Labour has to contend with ever-increasing demands for roads, railways, works, and irrigation, for all of which the requirements in personnel are always inadequate. The necessary steps are being taken to cope with the situation, and it is hoped that the advent of additional Labour Corps from India will ease matters.

The Remount and Veterinary Departments continue to be administered in a satisfactory manner. It has been recently found possible to supplement drafts of horses from overseas by local purchases. The condition and health of the animals of the Force has been most satisfactory during the past summer as compared with the summer of 1917.

The work performed by the Inland Water Transport has as always been of a high order in spite of the hot weather and the difficulties of navigation during the low river season.

The Postal Service is successfully competing with the demands made upon it, and these have been especially heavy during the summer months when individuals have more leisure for writing.

28. The period under review has been, owing to the extreme heat during the greater part of it, one of inactivity for the large majority of the troops, and I was enabled to send a large number of officers and men on leave to India. Leave camps at various centres had been kindly arranged for by Army Headquarters in India to which the British troops were sent; the Indian troops were of course able to visit their own homes. The General Officer Commanding, Ceylon, also made arrangements for the reception of a large number of British Officers, and his efforts in this respect have been much appreciated.

Urgent cases (treated for precedence on their merits) were granted leave to the United Kingdom but transport difficulties naturally confined this privilege to a selected few.

The country has gone ahead and is being further developed and the inhabitants are showing by their behaviour that they appreciate the blessings of a just and sympathetic government.

29. I have been throughout most ably and loyally served by my subordinate commanders, staff, and technical advisers and take this opportunity of recording my most sincere thanks for all their good work.

In addition to the names already mentioned I wish to bring to your notice those of :—

Major-General Sir G. F. MacMunn, K.C.B., C.S.I., D.S.O., Inspector General of Communications.

Major-General W. Gillman, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., Chief of the General Staff.

Major-General The Honourable Sir A. R. Montagu Stuart-Wortley, K.C.M.G., C.B., D.S.O., Deputy Quartermaster General.

Major-General E. F. Ready, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., Deputy Adjutant General.

A further list of names of officers, ladies, non-commissioned officers and men who have been deemed to have earned special distinction is being forwarded to you on a separate list.

30. This despatch would not be complete without a reference to the valuable services rendered by Lieutenant-Colonel A. T. Wilson, C.M.G., C.I.E., D.S.O., Acting Civil Commissioner, and the political officers working under his direction. His advice has always been of the greatest value to me, and I tender him my warmest thanks for the whole-hearted and vigorous support which I have received from him throughout.

31. In addition to the foregoing and in pursuance of the authority delegated to me as Commander-in-Chief, I have made the following immediate awards for gallantry and distinguished service in the field during the period covered by this despatch :—Distinguished Service Order, 8; Military Cross, 29; Bar to Military Cross, 4; Distinguished Conduct Medal, 10; Bar to Distinguished Conduct Medal, 1; Military Medal, 60; Indian Order of Merit, 3; Indian Distinguished Service Medal, 16.

(xv) "Prescribed" means prescribed by rule under this Law.

(xvi) "Specified area" means the area specified in any of the clauses or sub-clauses of sub-section (2) of section 1, or, if the Controlling Authority by notification in respect of import, transport, or export so directs, any portion of such an area, or combination of two or more such areas or portions of areas.

(xvii) "Transport" means to remove from one place to another within a specified area.

Cultivation of plants producing intoxicating drugs.

3. No plant from which any intoxicating drug may be produced shall be cultivated.

Prohibition regarding morphia, cocaine and cocaine substitutes.

4. Save as permitted by rules made by the Controlling Authority in this behalf no morphia, cocaine, or cocaine substitute shall be imported, transported, exported, possessed or sold.

Import, transport, export, possession and sale of other intoxicating drugs in the Cantonments of Agar, Guna, Sehore, and the Sutna Agency.

5. In the Cantonments of Agar, Guna and Sehore, and in the Sutna Agency no opium or preparation of opium (not being morphia) or hemp drugs shall be imported, transported, exported, possessed or sold otherwise than as permitted by rules made by the Controlling Authority in this behalf.

Import, transport, export, possession and sale of other intoxicating drugs in other areas specified by the Controlling Authority.

6. In any specified area, other than those mentioned in section 5, to which the Controlling Authority by notification declares the provisions of this section to apply no opium or preparation of opium (not being morphia) or hemp drugs shall be imported, transported, exported, possessed or sold.

Provided that this prohibition shall not extend to—

(1) the import, transport, export or possession of opium or its preparations (not being morphia) or of hemp drugs provided that the same are:

(a) declared as such to the Railway Authorities and carried in their custody and not in that of a passenger;

(b) in transit to a place in Central India or Rajputana, or, in the case of opium, to the Hyderabad State;

(c) accompanied by a pass granted by—

(i) a Political Officer in Central India or Rajputana;

(ii) any other officer specially empowered by the Controlling Authority in this behalf;

(iii) an officer of the State or other area of destination empowered under the law of such State or area to issue such passes; authorizing conveyance from a place specified therein to a place similarly specified and within the State or area for the import into which of opium and its preparations or of hemp drugs, as the case may be, the officer granting it is empowered to grant passes, by the most direct route and within a period specified therein;

and

(d) carried in securely sealed packages from and to the place, by the route, and within the period specified in the pass;

(2) the import, transport, export or possession of opium or its preparations (not being morphia) or of hemp drugs in quantities not exceeding those from time to time specified by the Controlling Authority in this behalf;

(3) the import, transport, export or possession of opium or its preparations (not being morphia) or of hemp drugs in compliance with such special conditions (if any) as may be specified by the Controlling Authority in this behalf.

Prohibition as to import, transport and export by post.

7. No intoxicating drug shall be imported, transported or exported by means of the post.

Major offences.

8. Whoever, in contravention of this Law or of any rule made thereunder, cultivates any plant from which any intoxicating drug may be produced, or imports, transports, exports, possesses or sells any intoxicating drug shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to two thousand rupees, or with both.

Minor offences.

9. Whoever breaks any condition of a license or pass granted under this Law, for the breach of which no other penalty is imposed, shall be punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees, and on conviction of any person under this section his license or pass may be cancelled by the authority which granted it.

Attempt, abetment and possession of illicit drug.

10. Whoever attempts to commit any offence punishable under this Law, or abets the commission of any such offence, or otherwise than in the performance of his duty under this Law receives or retains any intoxicating drug in respect of which he knows or has reason to believe that any such offence has been committed, shall be punishable with the punishment provided for such offence.

Enhanced punishment after previous conviction.

11. Whoever, having been previously convicted of an offence punishable under section 8 or under section 10 read with section 8, subsequently commits any such offence, shall be liable to twice the punishment which might be imposed on a first conviction.

Confiscation.

12. Any intoxicating drug in respect of which any offence punishable under section 8 has been committed, may be confiscated by any Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction it is found, whether the accused is or is not convicted.

Warrants of arrest and search.

13. (1) Whenever a Magistrate has reason to believe—

(a) that any person has committed an offence under section 8, or under section 10 read with section 8, or

(b) that any intoxicating drug in respect of which such an offence has been, is being or is likely to be, committed, is kept or sold in any place, such Magistrate may issue a warrant for the arrest of such person, or for the search of such place by day or by night.

(2) A Magistrate issuing a warrant for the arrest of any person under this section may, by endorsement on the warrant, direct that, if such person executes a bond with sufficient sureties for his attendance before the Magistrate, the person to whom the warrant is directed shall take such security, and shall release the person arrested from custody, and the person executing such warrant shall in such a case give effect to such direction.

(3) The person executing a warrant under this section may exercise any or all of the powers specified in section 13, and shall forward anything seized, and, subject to the provisions of sub-section (2), any person arrested, to the Magistrate by whom such warrant was issued.

Arrest and seizure without warrant.

14. Any officer of the Police, Excise or Octroi Departments, subject to the prescribed restrictions, may—

(a) seize and detain any intoxicating drug which he has reason to believe to be liable to confiscation under this Law; and

(b) detain and search, and, if he thinks proper, arrest without warrant any person whom he has reason to believe to have committed an offence under section 8 or section 10 read with section 8.

Search without warrant.

15. Whenever a Police Officer not below the rank of Head Constable, or an officer of the Excise or Octroi Department, not below such rank as may be prescribed, has reason to believe that any intoxicating drug in respect of which an offence under section 8 or section 10 read with section 8 has been, is being or is likely to be, committed, is kept or concealed in any place, and that a search warrant cannot be obtained without affording the offender an opportunity of escape or of concealing evidence of the offence, he may, after recording the grounds of his belief, enter and search such place by day or by night, and may exercise therein all or any of the powers specified in section 13.

Application of Criminal Procedure Code.

1898. 16. Save as in this Law otherwise expressly provided, the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, relating to searches, arrests and warrants shall apply, so far as may be, to all searches and arrests made, and warrants issued, under this Law.

Procedure after arrest or seizure.

17. (1) Whenever any officer makes an arrest or seizure under section 13 or section 15 he shall, without delay, take or send any person arrested or thing seized to the officer in charge of the nearest Police-station, together with a report of the particulars of such seizure or arrest, and shall also send a like report to his immediate superior, who shall forward the same to a Magistrate having jurisdiction.

(2) An officer in charge of a Police-station, to whom any person arrested or thing seized is made over, shall forthwith forward such person or thing to a Magistrate having jurisdiction, unless he considers further inquiry necessary, in which case he shall proceed in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XIV of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898:

Provided that such officer may, instead of forwarding a person arrested to the Magistrate, take a bond with such sureties as he may think sufficient for the attendance of such person before the Magistrate on a date to be specified; and in such case, he shall forward the bond taken to the Magistrate.

Exemptions.

18. (1). Nothing in this Law shall apply to—

(a) the import, transport, export, possession or sale of intoxicating drugs on behalf of Government, or

(b) intoxicating drugs in transit to or from British India in accordance with the law of British India.

(2) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (1), the Controlling Authority may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, by notification, either wholly or partially, and subject to such conditions, if any, as it may think fit, exempt any medicinal preparations containing intoxicating drugs, or any class of such preparations, from all or any of the provisions of this Law.

Rules.

19. The Controlling Authority may, by notification, make rules for all or any of the following purposes, namely,—

(1) to permit, absolutely or subject to the payment of duty or other conditions, and to regulate within all or any of the areas mentioned in section 5 the import, transport, export, possession and sale of intoxicating drugs;

(2) to permit, absolutely or subject to conditions, and to regulate within any railway lands to which this Law applies, the import, transport, export, possession and sale of morphia, cocaine and cocaine substitutes;

(3) to regulate the disposal of things confiscated or seized as liable to confiscation under this Law;

(4) to regulate the powers and duties of officers under this Law; and

(5) generally to carry out the provisions of this Law.

BY THE KING.

A PROCLAMATION

FOR PROHIBITING THE IMPORTATION INTO THE UNITED KINGDOM OF ALL FOREIGN COINS OTHER THAN GOLD AND SILVER COINS.

GEORGE R.I.

Whereas by Section two of the Customs Amendment Act, 1886, We are empowered from time to time to make, and when made to revoke, a Proclamation prohibiting the importation into Our United Kingdom of such coins coined in a Foreign country as are in that behalf specified in such Proclamation.

And Whereas by Our Proclamation made the thirtieth day of March, One thousand nine hundred and seventeen, We did prohibit, subject as therein provided, the importation into Our United Kingdom of all coins coined in any foreign country other than gold or silver coins:

And Whereas it is expedient that Our said Proclamation should be revoked, and that the importation into the United Kingdom of such coins coined in a foreign country as are hereinafter specified should be prohibited.

Now, therefore, We, by and with the advice of Our Privy Council, in pursuance of the said Act and of all other powers enabling Us in that behalf, do hereby proclaim, direct and ordain as follows :—

1. All coins coined in any foreign country other than gold or silver coins are prohibited to be imported into Our United Kingdom.
2. Our said Proclamation of the thirtieth day of March, One thousand nine hundred and seventeen, is hereby revoked.
3. This Proclamation shall not affect the provisions of the Prohibition of Import (Consolidation and Amendment) Proclamation, 1917.
4. This Proclamation may be cited as "The Foreign Coins (Importation Prohibition) Proclamation, 1919," and shall come into operation on the Fourteenth day of January, 1919.

Given at Our Court at Buckingham Palace, this Fourteenth day of January, in the year of our Lord One thousand nine hundred and nineteen, and in the Ninth year of Our Reign.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

REWARDS.

INDIAN ARMY.

No. 361.—The honorary rank of Jemadar is conferred on Khur Hussain (Sind Police Force), while employed with troops in the field, in recognition of his meritorious service.

No. 362.—The following rewards have been granted to the undermentioned for acts of gallantry or devotion to duty in the field :—

Awarded the Military Cross.

Thakur Dalpat Singh, Captain in the Jodhpur Imperial Service Lancers.

On the 14th July 1918 he charged an entrenched machine gun, accompanied only by his trumpeter, killing and scattering the garrison and capturing the machine gun. At the same time he captured the Commandant of a regiment and another officer.

Awarded the Indian Order of Merit (2nd class).

No. 2207 Dafadar Jot Ram, I.D.S.M., Cavalry.

On the 21st August 1918 he accompanied a patrol of six Indian other ranks under a British officer, which was sent out to investigate a fire. On approaching the vicinity of the fire the British officer, seeing a large armed party of the enemy's infantry, charged, having previously detailed Dafadar Jot Ram to work round by his right flank and get in the rear of the enemy. Dafadar Jot Ram, accompanied by one other Indian rank, carried out his mission at the gallop, and on getting in rear of the enemy charged without a moment's hesitation, displaying great gallantry and boldness in helping in the capture of the whole enemy party (eighteen strong).

Jemadar Pem Singh, Cavalry.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in organising and carrying out a successful attack on the 28th July 1918, with his troop on a hostile party. Owing to his dash and perseverance, fifteen of the enemy were killed, one officer and four men made prisoners. He personally killed two of the enemy who were inflicting losses on his troop, and the example of fearlessness which he set was magnificent. Jemadar Pem Singh was killed in action. His widow, if any, is admitted to the pension of the order with effect from the date of his death.

Jemadar Dur Khan, Cavalry.

On the night of the 4-5th July 1918, this Indian officer was ordered to lie up with a fighting patrol of thirty Indian other ranks with the object of surprising and destroying enemy parties which had been continuously firing into our left picquet by night. On his way up to his lying-up position, three of the enemy were observed. These he rushed and captured. He was then suddenly fired on at close range by a party of thirty to forty of the enemy. He promptly gave the order to charge, and the enemy thereupon fled in all directions. The promptness and determination with which this Indian officer closed on the enemy was not only a fine example of courage and good leadership, but also an incentive to his men to get home with the bayonet whenever possible.

Risaldar Malik Khan Muhammad Khan, Cavalry.

On the 20th May 1918, when on outpost duty this Indian officer was in command of the right picquet. While on his way with an orderly to visit a picquet on his right, he observed through his glasses three men in the bushes about eight hundred yards away, and thinking they belonged to a neighbouring regiment, he rode straight towards them. These men then disappeared, but he came in sight of them again about seventy to eighty yards distant and saw that they were the enemy. He immediately drew his revolver and galloped straight at them. They raised their rifles to fire, then dropped them and surrendered. All three men were well armed and equipped. The action of this Indian officer was a fine example of courage and determination.

Jemadar Atta-Ullah Khan, Cavalry.

This Indian officer with seven other ranks, on the 26th August 1918, on patrol duty, encountered about twenty of the enemy in thick scrub, divided up into parties of three or four. He, with two other ranks, immediately galloped at them, killed or wounded two and captured one. Meanwhile, the enemy had wounded one of the patrol's horses, which had pinned its rider under it. Three of the enemy were standing over this rider with levelled rifles. Jemadar Atta-Ullah Khan galloped up, dispersed the enemy and released his man.

No. 2782 Havildar Maida Khan, Infantry.

On the night of the 12-13th August 1918, this havildar, though wounded at the enemy's wire, showed great courage and determination. He took charge of the remainder of his platoon when half were killed or wounded and his platoon commander had been killed. He himself was first through the wire, and he continued to command his platoon until arrival at the concentration point.

Jemadar Phuman Singh, Infantry.

For bravery and conspicuous initiative in critical circumstances. During the raid on enemy sangars on the 6th August 1918, when both British officers and the two Indian officers of the assaulting and clearing parties had become casualties, Jemadar Phuman Singh, under heavy shell fire, re organised the few remaining unwounded men and attempted with great gallantry to penetrate the enemy sangar. The order to retire at this time had already been given, but did not reach Jemadar Phuman Singh who was on the right of the clearing party. This gallant officer managed to get to within twenty yards of the enemy sangars, but his party having become too small to be of any avail (owing to casualties) ordered a retirement, which was successfully carried out under heavy enemy machine gun and high explosive shell fire.

No. 2821 Lance-Naik Jagat Singh, Infantry.

For bravery and devotion to duty. In the raid on enemy sangars on the 6th August 1918, he, though wounded, remained with his British officer who, when the assaulting party had to withdraw owing to heavy casualties, was left about one hundred yards from the enemy sangars, wounded with a broken leg. Under fire he attended on his British officer and dressed his wounds. He then, under orders from this officer, returned to the regimental aid post and gave the information which led to his officer being brought in.

No. 3227 Sepoy Kishen Singh, Infantry.

For bravery and devotion to duty. In the raid on enemy sangars on the 6th August 1918, when an Indian officer was wounded in the leg within a few yards of the enemy sangar, he, after the party had been compelled by casualties to withdraw, remained with the Indian officer, and although under fire managed to draw him back under cover of rocks some two hundred yards away.

Subadar Ahmed Din, I.D.S.M., Infantry.

On the night of the 12-13th August 1918, this officer commanded a platoon in an attack on an enemy position. He led his men up to the wire which had to be cut under machine gun fire. After the wire was cut he charged and captured the right hand work and got behind the centre work. Here he collected a few of his men and charged the work from the rear, capturing an officer and thirteen men. Throughout the operations he set a splendid example to his men by his gallant leadership and utter disregard of danger.

No. 1730 Naik Amir Husain, Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry during the raid on the enemy trenches on the morning of the 19th August 1918. This non-commissioned officer formed part of a screen of scouts who proceeded in front of the attacking party. When within a hundred yards of the enemy trenches, he pushed forward right up to within a few yards of the enemy to reconnoitre a small wadi which ran into the enemy line. In spite of heavy machine gun and rifle fire, this young non-commissioned officer made a thorough reconnaissance of the wadi and enemy works behind, bringing back most valuable information which greatly assisted the launching of the attack.

Subadar-Major Jahan Shah, Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry during the raid on the enemy trenches on the morning of the 19th August 1918. This Indian officer set a splendid example in the face of severe artillery fire, led his men to the assault, and although very soon mortally wounded, continued to cheer his men on, and by his great bravery and disregard for his personal safety was undoubtedly responsible for bringing to a successful conclusion that portion of the attack which was assigned to his party.

Anop Singh Bahadur, Captain in the Jodhpur Imperial Service Lancers.

For conspicuous gallantry in delivering an immediate mounted attack on the 14th July 1918, on the enemy, who were rallying on the flank in formidable numbers. He broke up the formation and rendered it innocuous.

Risaldar Shaitan Singh, Jodhpur Imperial Service Lancers.

For conspicuous gallantry and initiative on the 14th July 1918, in delivering an immediate mounted attack on the enemy. Accompanied by three men he charged a formed body of about thirty dismounted enemy, killed and wounded fourteen and captured the officer in command.

Jemadar Asu Singh, Jodhpur Imperial Service Lancers.

On the 14th July 1918, without the slightest hesitation he charged the first enemy he saw, and by his spirit and dash set an inspiring example to all ranks. He was killed fighting. His widow, if any, is admitted to the pension of the order with effect from the date of his death.

Jemadar Khang Singh, Jodhpur Imperial Service Lancers.

He displayed great gallantry and ability throughout the whole day on the 14th July 1918 and especially in the mounted attack in which he was killed. He set a fine example to all ranks. His widow, if any, is admitted to the pension of the order with effect from the date of his death.

No. 1189 Trumpet-Major Sher Singh, Jodhpur Imperial Service Lancers.

On the 14th July 1918, he accompanied his commanding officer in attacking a post containing a machine gun and the regimental commanding officer. He did great execution with his revolver.

No. 1444 Dafadar Amar Singh, Jodhpur Imperial Service Lancers.

On the 14th July 1918, he with two other men accompanied his Indian officer and charged a formed body of thirty enemy, killing or wounding fourteen and capturing their officer. Though wounded in several places, he continued fighting.

No. 312 1st Class Sub-Assistant Surgeon George Julian Ferris, I.D.S.M., Indian Medical Department.

On the morning of the 25th September 1918, heavy casualties were caused by heavy and accurate shell fire. Sub-Assistant Surgeon Ferris at once proceeded to attend to all cases. His utter disregard of danger and his skill and care were most marked. He went about from case to case in the open under heavy shell fire. He again displayed remarkable courage the next day when attending casualties under heavy shell fire. His devotion to duty was undoubtedly the cause of saving several lives.

NOTIFICATIONS.

ESTABLISHMENTS.

Delhi, the 17th February 1919.

No. 1217-C.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to grant, under section 86 of the Government of India Act, 1915 (5 and 6 Geo. 5, Ch. 61), to the Hon'ble Sir George Stapylton Barnes, K.C.B., an Ordinary Member of the Council of the Governor General of India, leave of absence on medical certificate for a period of three months, with effect from the 20th February 1919 or the subsequent date on which he may avail himself of it.

The 20th February 1919.

No. 1340-C.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 55, sub-section (3), of the Government of India Act, 1915 (5 and 6 Geo. 5, Ch. 61), the Governor General, with the approval of His Majesty the King, Emperor of India, is pleased to appoint the Hon'ble Sir Saiyid Ali Imam, K.C.S.I., Bar.-at-Law, to be a Member of the Council constituted in the Province of Bihar and Orissa for the purpose of assisting the Lieutenant Governor in the executive Government of that province with effect from the 12th February 1919.

No. 1349-C.—Mr. H. D. Craik, of the Indian Civil Service, is appointed to be Deputy Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department with effect from the 19th February 1919.

The 21st February 1919.

No. 1368-C.—The following provisional rules, dated the 7th January 1919, have been passed by His Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council to come into operation forthwith for the appointment to the Indian Civil Service otherwise than by the annual Open Competition (which will still continue to be held) of British subjects who have during the war served in His Majesty's Navy, Army, or Air Forces. It will rest with the Civil Service Commissioners to determine whether candidates are qualified in respect of nationality, age, character, education, and war service as defined in the following Regulations :—

1. (a) Every candidate must be either a British subject or a ruler or subject of any State in India in respect of whom the Governor-General in Council has made a declaration under section 96(a) of the Government of India Act. 1915, as amended by section 3 of the Government of India (Amendment) Act, 1916.

(b) If the candidate (being a British subject) or his father or his mother was not born within His Majesty's Dominion and allegiance, the father must at the time of the candidate's birth have been a British subject or the subject of a State in India and still be (or have continued to be until his death) a British subject or a subject of such State.

2. Every candidate for appointment to be made under these Rules must have served in His Majesty's Naval, Military, or Air Forces during the war for at least one year, or, if his service be less than one year, have been retired or discharged on account of wounds or sickness resulting from such service.

3. Every candidate must have been born on or after the 2nd August 1891, and on or before the 1st August 1899.

4. Every candidate must be of good character in civil and military life.

5. Every candidate must have received continuous and systematic education of a high type until at least the age of 18, and must produce satisfactory evidence that if he has not received University education, he would have been justified in proceeding from school to a University with a view to taking high honours.

6. Candidates must submit to the Civil Service Commissioners an application in the form prescribed by them, and pay on application such fee as is appointed by them.

7. Candidates who appear from their forms of application to be prima facie eligible for appointment to the Indian Civil Service will be subject to such test as the Civil Service Commission may prescribe in the way of (a) a qualifying examination, written or oral; (b) the production of written evidence including school record, university record (if any), military record, and personal references; (c) interview by Selection Board; (d) medical examination.

8. Candidates recommended by the Civil Service Commissioners will be accepted by the Secretary of State for India in Council as Selected Candidates for the Indian Civil Service, subject to any further enquiries that he may find it necessary to institute, and will be required to undergo such period of probation as may be hereafter prescribed. At the end of this period of probation they will be tested by the Civil Service Commissioners, or by an authority in India specially empowered in this behalf, in Indian Law and Languages, and in any other subjects which may be prescribed, and in riding. They will not be appointed to the Civil Service of India until they have been certified to have fulfilled these tests.

9. In pursuance of section 2 of the Rules Publication Act, 1893 (56 and 57 Vict. c. 66) the Secretary of State for India in Council certifies that on account of urgency the foregoing rules are made as provisional rules to come into operation forthwith.

Note—Candidates are cautioned that applications should not be sent to the Civil Service Commission until forms are available.

The following notice issued by the Civil Service Commission is also published for general information:—

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

RECONSTRUCTION SCHEME OF SELECTION FOR CLASS I OF THE HOME CIVIL SERVICE, INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE, EASTERN CADETSHIPS, JUNIOR APPOINTMENTS, OFFICERSHIPS OF CUSTOMS AND EXCISE.

The Civil Service Commissioners announce that the holding of competitive examinations for appointments to the higher division (class I), and to certain other classes of the Civil Service will not be resumed for at least two years after the cessation of hostilities, and that vacancies in these classes will be filled in the meantime by a process of selection by a Board, the principle of open competition being maintained so far as practicable.

This decision has been reached by the Government in accordance with the recommendations of Viscount Gladstone's Committee on recruitment for the Civil Service after the war. While it is considered to be essential that the intellectual standard of candidates for class I of the Home Civil Service, to which so much importance was attached by the Royal Commission on the Civil Service, should not be lowered, it is manifest that owing to the general interruption of academic studies during the war there will be comparatively few persons of suitable age during the two or three years following the termination of hostilities who will have received a complete university education. On the other hand it is clearly the duty of the State temporarily to adapt its system of selecting candidates for the Public Service so as to give the fullest opportunity of securing appointments to those who have served during the war in the naval, military, or air forces of the Crown. Such candidates would be at a serious disadvantage in any competitive examination approaching the standard required for class I appointments, and indeed no examination could be imposed upon them which aimed at more than a qualifying test of their proficiency in such subjects as they ought all to have learned before the war, and ought not to have forgotten.

Class I.

It is estimated that there will be at least 100 vacancies in class I to be filled during the two years following the cessation of hostilities, to cover wastage during the period since the last appointments were made by open competition, viz., in 1914. The filling of these vacancies (otherwise than by promotion from other grades of the service) will be spread as evenly as possible over the two years, in view of the claims of those whose demobilization is deferred. All persons will be eligible to compete for them who satisfy the following conditions :—

The applicant must :—

(i) Have been born on or after the 2nd August, 1891;

(ii) Have attained the age of 22 on the date fixed for his qualifying examination;

(iii) Have served in His Majesty's naval, military, or air forces during the war, provided that under certain conditions men may be treated as eligible who, having been pronounced unfit on grounds of health for general service, have been temporarily employed in Government Departments during the war;

(iv) Submit an application in the form prescribed by the Civil Service Commissioners accompanied by a fee stamp of ten shillings;

(v) Be of good character in civil and military life;

(vi) Have received continuous and systematic education of a high type until at least the age of 18;

(vii) Be in a position to produce satisfactory evidence, in the absence of a university record, that but for the war he would have been justified in expecting to attain a first or second class in a University Honours School.

Candidates who appear from their forms of application and the resulting inquiries, including the scrutiny of their school record, university record (if any), military record, and personal references, to be prima facie eligible for appointment will be subjected to a qualifying examination in arithmetic, English (including essay and precis-writing and other tests), and in general knowledge, historical, political, social, economic, scientific and geographical.

Candidates who satisfy the Civil Service Commissioners with regard to the qualifying examination and their age, health, and character, will be admitted to an interview by the Selection Board charged with the duty of selecting men for appointment.

Any candidate will also be permitted to produce evidence of special proficiency in any particular subject or subjects of study, and this will be weighed by the Selection Board with the other factors.

Preference will be given by the Selection Board, ceteris paribus, to candidates who are debarred from active employment by some physical impairment arising out of the war, and not likely to interfere with the discharge of ordinary administrative duties.

Any attempt on the part of a candidate to enlist support for his application through Members of Parliament, or other influential persons, will disqualify him for appointment. The Selection Board will disregard spontaneous recommendations from persons who are not personally acquainted with the candidate's work whether at school or university, in the forces, or otherwise.

Separate competitions will be held at intervals during the period while this scheme is in force. Candidates will be divided into three groups :—

(a) Those who have taken a full university course;

(b) Those who have spent at least two years at a university, but not taken a full course;

(c) Those who entered the forces direct from school or spent less than two years at a university; and so far as practicable a certain proportion of vacancies will be allotted to each group. Canditates who are judged by the Selection Board to be suitable for appointment but are not posted to vacancies as the result of that competition may be allowed to compete on a second occasion without taking the qualifving examination again. Subject to this, no candidate may compete more than once under this scheme. No candidate will be obliged to take the qualifying examination within three months from the date of leaving the forces, as attested by his "dispersal certificate."

Candidates who under this scheme enter the Service at an age above the normal maximum of 24 years will be allowed one increment of salary for each year of their age above 24 at the date of their qualifying examination.

Indian Civil Service and Eastern Cadetships.

From a hundred to two hundred vacancies in the Indian Civil Service will be filled concurrently with vacancies in Class I of the Home Civil Service, and by a similar process,* subject to such conditions as to age, physical fitness, and other qualifications of candidature as may be laid down for that Service.

Eastern cadetships under the Colonial Office will be awarded by a like procedure; the number of vacancies cannot at present be announced.

One fee of ten shillings will cover applications for Class I of the Home Civil Service, Indian Civil Service and Eastern Cadetships. Successful candidates will have their choice of the situations offered for competition according to the order in which they may be placed in the list prepared for each Service by the Selection Board.

"Junior Appointments" and "Officers of Customs and Excise."

Such vacancies as it may be necessary to fill, otherwise than by promotion from other grades of the Service, during a period following the termination of hostilities, which will be defined later, to the various classes of "Junior Appointments," commonly known as Intermediate Posts, will be filled by a similar process of selection from candidates between the ages of 18 and 22 who comply with the conditions (iii), (v) and (vi) laid down with respect to Class I posts, and make application in the form prescribed by the Civil Service Commissioners, accompanied by a fee stamp of seven shillings and sixpence. Successful candidates will be allowed one increment of salary for each year of their age above 19 at the date of their qualifying examination. Men who have served in His Majesty's forces during the war and are appointed to one of these posts may subsequently compete for Class I, if they so desire, on attaining the requisite age.

Vacancies in the class of "Officers of Customs and Excise" will be filled in a similar way by selection from candidates who were born on or after the 2nd September, 1893, and have attained the age of 19. The entrance fee for this competition will be five shillings. One increment will be allowed for each year of age above 21.

The qualifying examination, both for "Junior appointments" and for the class of "Officers of Customs and Excise" will be similar in character and scope to that for Class I, but of lower standard.

The Regulations for the several Services are under consideration by the Civil Service Commissioners and the Departments concerned. It is hoped that they will be ready early in the new year, and intending candidates should write after the 15th of January to the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, 6, Burlington Gardens, London, W. 1, for the Regulations and Application Form for the class or classes of appointments for which they desire to compete.

All intending candidates should apply as soon as possible after the date stated in the preceding paragraph. The qualifying examination of those who are at present under age will be fixed for a date when they are of age. Those who wish to postpone their examination for the purpose of university study or other reason will be given an opportunity to apply for sanction for the postponement.

16th December, 1918.

NOTES ON THE SALARIES, ETC., OF SOME OF THE SITUATIONS TO BE FILLED BY THE RECONSTRUCTION SCHEME OF SELECTION.

NOTIFICATIONS.

COMMERCE—WAR.

Delhi, the 22nd February 1919.

No. 1677-D.—The following extract from the "Board of Trade Journal," dated the 16th January 1919, is published for general information :—

GOVERNMENT NOTICES AFFECTING TRADE.

EXPORT AND IMPORT SECTION.

Relaxation of export prohibitions.

The Board of Trade announce that the following relaxation of the existing prohibitions of export will be brought into force as from to-day. Further relaxations will be announced in subsequent issues of the "Journal."

A. EXPORT PROHIBITIONS.

The following is a list of the articles affected and of the changes made in the nature of the prohibitions applicable to each. In explanation of the changes it should be noted that goods on List A are prohibited to all destinations, and goods on List B to all destinations outside the British Empire, while goods on List C are prohibited only to countries neighbouring enemy countries.*

It will of course be understood that the existing position regarding trading with enemy countries is in no way affected by these modifications.

[NOTE.—Attention is called to the fact that by the Proclamation of the 1st October, 1918, all goods, whether mentioned by name or not (except printed matter and accompanied personal effects) are prohibited on List C.]

THE TERRITORIAL OFFICERS' DECORATION AMENDING WARRANT (1918).

GEORGE R. I.

Whereas His late Majesty, Our Beloved Father King Edward VII., by a Warrant dated the 17th day of August, 1908, did institute and create a new Decoration to be designated "The Territorial Decoration;"

And whereas it was ordained by the said Royal Warrant what persons should be eligible for this Decoration;

And whereas by a Warrant dated the 3rd day of May, 1912, We did ordain that the said Royal Warrant dated the 17th day of August, 1908, should be amended for the purpose of defining more strictly what persons should be eligible for this Decoration :

And whereas We desire to recognise specially the meritorious service of Officers of Our Territorial Force during the present war;

Now therefore We do by these Presents for Us, Our Heirs and Successors, ordain that Our said Royal Warrant dated the 3rd day of May, 1912, shall be revoked and that the following Ordinance shall be substituted for the corresponding Ordinance in the Royal Warrant dated the 17th day of August, 1908, and shall henceforth be construed and have the same effect as if it formed part of the said Royal Warrant :—

Fourthly :—It is ordained that no person shall be eligible for this Decoration who is in possession of the Volunteer Officers' Decoration nor shall he be nominated thereto unless he—

(1) Is or was a Commissioned Officer and has served for twenty years on the Active List of our Territorial Force, including commissioned service in the Senior and Junior Divisions of Our Officers Training Corps; previous commissioned service in our Yeomanry Cavalry, Imperial Yeomanry or Volunteer Force; previous service qualifying for the Colonial Auxiliary Forces' or Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve Officers' Decoration; and all service, while holding a Volunteer Officers' Commission, as an acting or honorary officer of a Cadet Corps, or Cadet Battalion, after attaining the age of seventeen years;

(2) Is recommended by the Commanding Officer of the Unit in which he has served; and,

(3) Is duly certified by the District Military Authorities in which the Unit is located as having been an efficient and thoroughly capable Officer in every way deserving of such a Decoration.

Provided nevertheless and We do hereby declare that any time during which an Officer of Our Territorial Force may have served as an Officer on the Active List of that Force (or of Our Royal Navy, Our Regular Army, Our Special Reserve, or Our Royal Air Force) or, if an Officer of the Territorial Force Reserve, has been recalled to active military service during embodiment in the present War shall reckon twofold as qualifying service towards the twenty years required as aforesaid, subject always to the proviso that such Officer was serving in Our Territorial Force on the 4th day of August, 1914, and either before or after that date had signed an agreement to serve outside the United Kingdom.

Provided also and We do further declare that any time during which an Officer of Our Territorial Force may have served on the Active List in the ranks of that Force (or of Our Royal Navy, Our Regular Army or Our Royal Air Force) during embodiment in the present War shall reckon as full qualifying service towards the twenty years required as aforesaid, subject always to the proviso that such officer was serving in Our Territorial Force on the 4th day of August, 1914, and either before or after that date had signed an agreement to serve outside the United Kingdom.

Provided also and We do further declare that half of any time other than the period of embodiment of Our said Force in the present War during which an Officer of Our said Force may have served on the Active List in the ranks of Our said Force, or in the ranks of Our Yeomanry Cavalry, Imperial Yeomanry, or Volunteer Force, after attaining the age of seventeen years; or in the ranks of a Cadet Corps, or Cadet Battalion, which belonged to the organization existing before the 21st May, 1910, or as a Cadet in the Senior Division of Our Officers Training Corps, after attaining the age of seventeen years; shall reckon as qualifying service towards the twenty years required as aforesaid.

Provided also and We do further declare that commissioned service shall not reckon as qualifying service towards the twenty years required as aforesaid, in the case of—

(i) A university candidate for a commission in Our Regular Army, except for the period or periods of service with a Contingent of our Officers Training Corps;

(ii) An Officer transferred to the Unattached List after the 31st March, 1911, except one who is transferred for duty with our Officers Training Corps;

(iii) An officer whose military services are available only on mobilization, except for the period or periods or mobilized service.

Given at Our Court at Saint James, this eleventh day of November, in the ninth year of Our Reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen.

By His Majesty's Command,

Milner.

RAILWAY DEPARTMENT.

(RAILWAY BOARD.)

NOTIFICATIONS.

Delhi, the 18th February 1919.

No. 339-E.—19.—Mr. J. E. Wood, officiating Assistant Carriage Superintendent, North Western Railway, is appointed provisionally to the Superior Revenue Establishment of State Railways, Carriage and Wagon Department, with rank in class III, grade 2, with effect from the 1st April 1918.

No. 341-E.—19.—Mr. E. M. Oram, Signal and Interlocking Inspector, North Western Railway, is appointed to officiate as an Assistant Signal Engineer on that railway, with effect from the 20th December 1918 and until further orders.

No. 421-E.—19.—Mr. J. C. Mossley, Station Master, Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, is appointed to officiate as an Assistant Traffic Superintendent of that railway until further orders.

The 19th February 1919.

No. 431-E.—19.—Mr. E. G. Townshend, Assistant Locomotive Superintendent, North Western Railway, in class III, grade I, of the Superior Revenue Establishment of State Railways, is appointed to officiate as a District Locomotive Superintendent in class II of that Establishment with effect from the 27th January 1919, during the absence of Mr. Hartree, District Locomotive Superintendent, on privilege leave.

No. 23-W.—19.—In continuation of Railway Board's Notification No. 257-W.—17, dated 31st May 1918, it is hereby notified for general information that the Senior Government Inspector of Railways, Circle No. 6, Bombay, has authorised the opening to public traffic of the new up line between Wardha and Kharangna, a length of 5·3 miles, on the Bhusawal Nagpur Section of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and the Railway Board have confirmed his action.

The 20th February 1919.

No. 940-P.—16.—It is hereby notified for general information that the Railway Board have sanctioned a detailed survey being carried out by the Agency of the North Western Railway for a line of railway on the 5′ 6″ gauge from Dina, a station on the North Western Railway, to Sultanpur, a distance of about 9 miles.

2. The survey will be known as the Dina Sultanpur Railway Survey.

No. 120-T.--1—18.—In exercise of the powers conferred by the notification of the Government of India in the Department of Commerce and Industry, No. 801, dated the 24th March 1905, and in pursuance of section 84 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), the Railway Board direct that the following rules shall be substituted for the rules contained in enclosure No. 1 to the Government of India Circular No. III-Railway of 1902, published with the Notification of the Government of India in the Public Works Department No. 81, dated the 7th March 1902, as subsequently amended, namely :—

Notices.

1. The notices mentioned in section 83 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), shall contain the following particulars, namely :—

mileage, or station or both, at which the accident occurred; time and date of the accident;
number and description of the train or trains;
nature of the accident;
number of people killed or injured, as far as known;
cause of the accident, as far as known;
probable detention to traffic.

2. When any accident such as is described in section 83 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), occurs in the course of working a railway, the Station-master nearest to the place at which the accident has occurred, or, where there is no Station-master, the railway servant in charge of the section of the railway on which the accident has occurred, shall give notice of the accident by telegraph to the Magistrate of the district in which the accident has occurred and to the officer-in-charge of the police-station within the local limits of which it has occurred.

NOTE.—(1) For purposes of this rule accidents of a description usually attended with loss of human life are meant to include all accidents to passenger trains such, for example, as slight collisions, derailments, cases of running over obstructions placed on the line, of passengers falling out of trains or of fires in trains, in which no loss of life, or grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or serious injury to property has actually occurred but which by the nature of the accident might reasonably have been expected to occur; also cases of landslides, or of breaches by rain or flood, which cause the interruption of any important through line of communication for at least 24 hours.

Duties of railway servants.

3. Every railway servant shall report, with as little delay as possible, every accident occurring in the course of working the railway on which he is employed which may come to his notice. Such reports shall be made to the nearest Station-master, or, where there is no Station-master, to the railway servant in charge of the section of the railway on which the accident has occurred.

4. (1) Whenever an accident, such as is described in section 83 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), has occurred in the course of working a railway, the Agent or Manager shall cause an enquiry to be promptly made by a committee of railway officers (to be called a "joint enquiry") for the thorough investigation of the causes which led to the accident:—

Provided that such enquiry may be dispensed with—

(a) if the accident has not been attended with loss of human life, or with grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or with serious injury to property; or

(b) if there is no reasonable doubt as to the cause of the accident; or

(c) if one department of the railway intimates that it accepts all responsibility in the matter.

(2) Where such enquiry is dispensed with, it shall be the duty of the head of the department of the railway responsible for the accident to make such enquiry (to be called a "departmental enquiry") as he may consider necessary, and if his staff or the system of working is at fault, to adopt or suggest such measures as he may consider expedient for preventing a recurrence of similar accidents.

5. (1) Whenever a joint enquiry is to be made, the Agent or Manager shall cause notice of the date and hour at which the enquiry will commence to be given to the following officers, namely :—

(a) the Magistrate of the district in which the accident occurred, or such other officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf;

(b) the Government Inspector appointed under section 4, sub-section (1) of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), for the section of the railway on which the accident occurred; and

(c) the officer-in-charge of the railway police, or if there are no railway police, the officer-in-charge of the police-station in the jurisdiction of which the accident occurred.

(2) The date and hour at which the enquiry will commence shall be fixed so as to give the officers mentioned in sub-rule (1) sufficient time to reach the place where the enquiry is to be held.

6. (1) As soon as any joint or departmental enquiry has been completed, the President of the Committee or the head of the department, as the case may be, shall send to the Agent or Manager a report which in the case of all accidents of the nature described in explanation 1 to rule 21, [sub-rule (2)], must be submitted in the form prescribed by rule 24 (1).

(2) The Agent or Manager shall forward, with his remarks as to the action it is intended to take in regard to the staff responsible for the accident, or for the revision of the rules or the system of working, a copy of such report—

(a) to the official mentioned in rule 5, sub-rule (1), clause (b); and

(b) if no enquiry or investigation has been made under rule 15, or if a joint or departmental enquiry has been held first, to the Magistrate or officer appointed under rule 5, sub-rule (1), clause (a); and

(c) if any judicial enquiry is being made, to the Magistrate making such enquiry.

(3) Such copy shall be accompanied in the case referred to in clause (b) of sub-rule (2), by a statement of the persons if any, whom the Agent or Manager desires to prosecute, and in the case referred to in clause (c) of the same sub-rule, by a copy of the evidence taken at the enquiry.

(4) Whenever the Agent or Manager receives a copy of the Government Inspector's report under rule 23, he shall at once acknowledge its receipt. If he differs from the views expressed in the report, he shall at the same time submit his remarks thereon, or, if he is not immediately able to do so, he shall in his acknowledgment of the report, inform the Government Inspector of his intention to submit his remarks later.

(5) Whenever the report of the Government Inspector points to the necessity for or suggests a change in any of the rules or in the system of working, the Agent or Manager shall, when acknowledging the report, intimate the action which has been taken, or which it is proposed to take, to prevent a recurrence of similar accidents, or shall inform the Government Inspector of his intention to report further on the Government Inspector's proposals.

7. (1) Whenever any accident has occurred in the course of working a railway, the Agent or Manager shall give all reasonable aid to the District Magistrate or the Magistrate appointed or deputed under rule 15, and to the Government Inspector, Medical Officers, the police, and others concerned, to enable them promptly to reach the scene of the accident, and shall assist those authorities in making enquiries and in obtaining evidence as to the cause of the accident.

(2) When any enquiry under rule 15, or any judicial enquiry is being made, the Agent or Manager shall arrange for the attendance, as long as may be necessary, at the office or place of enquiry, of all railway servants whose evidence is likely to be required.

8. Whenever any accident occurring in the course of working a railway has been attended with grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, it shall be the duty of the Agent or Manager to afford medical aid to the sufferers, and to see that they are properly and carefully attended to till removed to their home or handed over to the care of their relatives or friends. In any such case, or any case in which any loss of human life or grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code has occurred, the nearest local medical officer should be communicated with if he is nearer than any railway medical officer.

Duties of Police Officers.

9. (1) The railway police may make an investigation into the causes which led to any accident occurring in the course of working a railway and shall do so—

(a) whenever any such accident is attended with loss of human life, or with grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or with serious injury to property, or has primâ facie been due to any criminal act or omission; or

(b) whenever the District Magistrate or the Magistrate appointed under rule 15 has given a direction under clause (c) of that rule.

Provided that no such investigation shall be made when an enquiry has been commenced or ordered under rule 15, clause (a) or clause (b).

(2) The Railway Police shall report, with as little delay as possible, to the nearest Station-master or, where there is no Station-master, to the railway servant in charge of the section of the railway on which the accident has occurred, every accident which may come to their notice occurring in the course of working a railway attended with loss of human life, or with grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or with serious injury to property, or which has primâ facie been due to any criminal act or omission.

10. (1) Whenever an investigation is to be made by the railway police—

(a) in a case in which an accident is attended with loss of human life, or with grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or with serious injury to property; or the investigation shall be conducted by the officer-in-charge of the railway police, or, if that officer should be unable to conduct the investigation himself, then by an officer to be deputed by him.

(b) in pursuance of a direction given under rule 15, clause (c),

(2) An officer deputed under sub-rule (1) shall ordinarily be an Assistant Superintendent of Police, but if in any case it should be found impracticable to depute an officer of that grade, an Inspector of Police may be deputed in case of collisions between trains of which one is a train carrying passengers, or of derailment of any train carrying passengers, or of any part of such a train, and an officer-in-charge of a police-station in case of accidents attended with loss of human life, or with grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or with serious injury to property.

11. The officer who is to conduct an investigation in pursuance of rule 10 shall proceed without delay to the scene of the accident and conduct the investigation there, and shall at once advise the Agent or Manager of the railway and the Traffic Officer of the district by telegraph of the date and hour at which the investigation will commence so that, if possible, the presence of a railway official may be arranged for to watch the proceedings and to aid the officer making the investigation. The absence of a railway official must not, however, be allowed to delay the investigation, which should be made as soon as possible after the accident has taken place.

12. (1) In every case to which rule 10 applies, immediate information shall be given by the railway police to the district police, who, if so required, shall afford all necessary assistance, and shall, if occasion arise, carry the investigation beyond the limits of the railway premises. But the railway police are primarily entrusted with the duty of carrying on the investigation within such limits.

(2) Subject to any provisions elsewhere contained in these rules, the further prosecution of the case, on the conclusion of the police investigation, shall rest with the railway police.

13. The result of every police investigation shall be reported at once to the Magistrate of the district, or other officer appointed in this behalf by the Local Government, and to the Agent or Manager of the railway or other officer appointed by him.

14. Where there are no railway police, the duties imposed by rules 9, 10, and 11, rule 12, sub-rule (2), and rule 13 on the railway police, or on the officer-in-charge of the railway police shall be discharged by the district police or by the District Superintendent of Police, as the case may be.

Duties of Magistrates.

15. Whenever an accident, such as is described in section 83 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), has occurred in the course of working a railway, the District Magistrate, or any other Magistrate who may be appointed in this behalf by the Local Government, may, either—

(a) himself make an enquiry into the causes which led to the accident; or

(b) depute a subordinate Magistrate, who, if possible, should be a Magistrate of the first class, to make such an enquiry; or

(c) direct an investigation into the causes which led to the accident to be made by the police.

16. Whenever it is decided to make an enquiry under rule 15, clause (a) or clause (b), the District Magistrate or other Magistrate appointed as aforesaid or the Magistrate deputed under rule 15, clause (b), as the case may be, shall proceed to the scene of the accident and conduct the enquiry there, and shall at once advise the Agent or Manager of the railway and the Government Inspector by telegraph of the date and hour at which the enquiry will commence, so as to enable the railway administration to summon the requisite expert evidence.

17. A Magistrate making an enquiry under rule 15 may summon any railway servant, and any other person whose presence he may think necessary, and, after taking the evidence and completing the enquiry, shall, if he considers there are sufficient grounds for a judicial enquiry, take the requisite steps for bringing to trial any person whom he may consider to be criminally liable for the accident. Whenever technical points are involved, the Magistrate should call for, and take the opinion of the Government Inspector or other professional persons.

18. The result of every enquiry made under rule 15 shall be communicated by the Magistrate to the Agent or Manager of the railway and to the Government Inspector.

19. If in the course of any judicial enquiry into an accident occurring in the course of working a railway, the Magistrate desires the assistance of the Government Inspector or of the Agent or Manager of the railway, or the attendance of any officer of the railway, to explain any matter relating to railway supervision, management or working, he will issue a requisition to such officer to attend the court, stating at the same time the nature of the assistance required. In summoning railway servants, the Magistrate will take care not to summon so large a number of the employés, specially of one class, on the same day, as to cause inconvenience to the working of the railway. In the case of very serious accidents it will generally be advisable for the Magistrate to receive either the evidence of, or a report from, both the Government Inspector and the Agent or Manager of the railway in regard to the accident before finally concluding the judicial enquiry.

20. On the conclusion of any such judicial enquiry the Magistrate shall send a copy of his decision to the Agent or Manager of the railway, and shall, unless in any case he thinks it unnecessary to do so, report the result of the enquiry to the Local Government.

Duties of the Government Inspector appointed under section 4, sub-section (1), of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890).

21. (1) Whenever the Government Inspector receives notice under section 83 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), of the occurrence of an accident which he considers of a sufficiently serious nature to justify such a course, he shall report the occurrence direct to the Government of India by telegraph.

(2) Every such report shall contain the particulars prescribed by rule 1.

Explanation 1.—For the purposes of this rule every accident to a train (whether carrying passengers or not) which is attended with loss of human life or with grievous hurt as defined in the Indian Penal Code, or with serious injury to property, which is roughly estimated to cost say Rs. 5,000 or over, also every accident, such as a landslide, breach by rain or flood, derailment, etc., which causes the interruption of any important through line of communication for at least 24 hours, shall be deemed to be an accident of a "sufficiently serious nature".

Explanation 2.—When a serious accident occurs at a station where the charges of two or more Government Inspectors meet, the duty of complying with rule 21 (1) shall devolve on the Government Inspector within whose jurisdiction the railway working the station lies.

22. (1) The Government Inspector shall, whenever he receives notice as aforesaid of an accident which he considers serious enough to warrant an enquiry or investigation being made under any of these rules, proceed to the scene of the accident to note the facts and to enquire generally into the causes which led to the accident. If the Government Inspector, after reporting to the Government of India the occurrence of an accident in accordance with rule 21, decides that an enquiry or investigation by himself is not necessary, he shall in every such case advise the Government of India accordingly by letter.

(2) Whenever an enquiry under sub-rule (1) is made by the Government Inspector, he shall, if practicable, be present at the joint enquiry (if any) made under rule 4, sub-rule (1).

23. Whenever the Government Inspector has made an enquiry under rule 22, sub-rule (1), or when he disagrees with, or considers it necessary adversely to criticise the report of the joint or departmental enquiry or the working of the railway, he shall submit a report in writing, through the Senior Government Inspector, to the Local Government or Administration controlling the railway and to the Government of India, or in the case of a railway which is directly administered by the State, to the Government of India only; and shall forward a copy of such report to the Agent or Manager of the railway concerned, and, if a magisterial enquiry has been made, to the Magistrate who made such enquiry.

24. (1) In the case of all accidents of the nature described in explanation 1 to rule 21, [sub-rule (2)], the reports referred to in rule 6 and in rule 22, sub-rule (1), shall be submitted in the form adopted by the Inspecting Officers of the Board of Trade, and shall contain—

(1) a brief description of the accident;
(2) a description of the locality of the accident;
(3) a detailed statement of the evidence taken;
(4) the conclusions arrived at at the joint or departmental enquiry;
(5) an appendix stating the damage done;
(6) (when necessary) a sketch illustrative of the accident; and
(7) in the case of the report submitted by the Government Inspector, the conclusion arrived at by him.

(2) Reports in connection with accidents which, although coming under section 83 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, (IX of 1890), are not accidents of the nature described in explanation 1 to rule 21, [sub-rule (2)], will be submitted to the Government of India only if, in the opinion of the Senior Government Inspector, they contain features of special importance or requiring special notice. When the Senior Government Inspector recommends the publication of such a report, it should be in the form adopted by the Inspecting Officers of the Board of Trade; when not recommended for publication, it may be in the form of a letter explaining, as briefly as possible, the special features which the Senior Government Inspector desires to bring to notice.

25. If the Agent or Manager makes any remarks on the Government Inspector's report under rule 6, sub-rules (4) and (5) or expresses an intention to do so, the Government Inspector shall inform the Government of India, and the Local Government or Administration controlling the railway, of the steps which have been or are proposed to be taken by the railway administration to prevent a recurrence of similar accidents, and whether, in his opinion, further action in the matter is desirable.

26. The Government Inspector shall, as far as possible, assist any Magistrate making an enquiry under rule 15 or a magisterial enquiry, whenever he may be called upon to do so.

27. Nothing in these rules shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the exercise of any of the powers conferred on Government Inspectors by section 5 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890).

No. 120-T.—2—18.—In exercise of the powers conferred by the notification of the Government of India in the Department of Commerce and Industry, No. 801, dated the 24th March 1905, and in pursuance of section 85 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890), the Railway Board direct that the following rules shall be substituted for the rules contained in Enclosure No. II to Government of India Circular No. 111, Railway, of 1902, published with the notification of the Government of India in the Public Works Department, No. 81, dated the 7th March 1902, as subsequently amended, namely:—

1. The returns shall be prepared in the forms hereto appended, marked, respectively, Tables Nos. 1 to 4. The returns shall be submitted not later than three weeks after the close of the year to which they relate The returns, whether submitted in manuscript or in print, shall be set forth on one side of the paper only.

2. The returns shall comprise all accidents of the following classes, namely:—

(a) all cases of loss of, or injury to, life or limb from causes connected with the working of railways;

(b) all cases of injury to the permanent way, stock or works, whether attended or not by injury to life or limb;

(c) all accidents of any kind likely to have endangered life or limb, or to have caused serious loss of property; including cases of trains running over chairs placed on the line, of persons falling out of trains who are not injured in any way, and of fires in trains, not resulting in injury to the way, stock or works.

(d) all cases, without exception, of cattle being thrown off the line or run over: Provided that, in such cases, the following additional rules shall be observed, namely:—

(i) Whether cattle are actually run over or merely thrown off the line, all cases of cattle coming in contact with running trains shall be included in the accident returns.

(ii) If more than one head of cattle are run over at one time, i.e., in one accident, the occurrence shall be treated as one accident.

3. The following classes of railway servants shall be included in the returns, namely:—

(a) all persons employed in stations, including police;

(b) all persons employed in the maintenance of way and works, exclusive of men entertained for special works, that is, for railway works, involving no risk from the working of trains, e.g., the construction of spurs in a river on which railway work-people are employed; and

(c) all persons employed on trains or running engines, also all gate-keepers.

4. Accidents which are of a trivial nature, such as petty accidents in shunting, failure of springs or bursting open of points by trains, resulting in no further damage or accident, or small landslips not interrupting traffic, need not be included in the returns. All accidents shall, however, be recorded in the office of the Agent or Manager of the railway concerned, it being left to that officer to decide which of them may be omitted from the returns as trivial.

5. In cases where one accident might appropriately be classified under more than one head (such as breakage of an axle causing derailment), the classification shall be in accordance with the primary cause of the accident, and the same accident shall not be classified under more than one head.

6. Under the heading "10—Trains running over obstructions on the line" Table No. 2, only such accidents shall be entered as are caused by trains running over obstructions (e.g., sleepers, rails or stones, placed on the line) other than those caused by the accidental misplacement of railway appliances in the ordinary course of working. Accidents due to trains mounting scotch blocks, or other misplaced railway appliances, or travelling over split or trailing points, and resulting in derailments or collisions shall be shown under these respective heads.

7. Accidents connected with the bursting of boilers shall be shown separately from those connected with the bursting of tubes.

8. Interruptions to traffic owing to several breaches near together caused by floods occurring on the same day and from the same cause shall be treated as one accident.

9. Failure of engines due to want of water, or to fire-bars melting and dropping in the ash-pan owing to excessive heat shall be classified under head "25—Other accidents" of Table No. 2.

10. Accidents to mixed trains shall be treated as occurring to passenger trains.

11. Casualties from causes unconnected with railway working, such as death of passengers in carriages or at stations, from natural causes, or to other persons, such as cases of falling into wells or of drowning in wells or ponds, within the station limits of a railway, shall not be included in Table No. 3 of the returns, nor shall slight abrasions or bruises, which are incidental to a man's ordinary duties, be included in the said Table.

12. Accidents on open lines of railway not coming under any of the classified heads in the forms marked Tables Nos. 1 and 2 but which have caused loss of human life or personal injury, shall be entered in the form marked Table No. 3.

13. In Tables Nos. 1 to 4 those accidents only shall be entered which have occurred during the year to which the returns relate.

14. (1) Accidents to trains of one railway exercising running powers over another shall be treated, for the purposes of these returns, as accidents of the line owning the trains.

(2) Accidents at joint stations shall be similarly treated. Other accidents at joint stations or on lines on which running powers are exercised, shall be included in the returns of the working or owning line.

15. Accidents occurring :—

(a) in railway workshops ; or

(b) on new works not opened for traffic ; or

(c) on lines under construction ; or

(d) on lines not used for the public carriage of passengers, animals or goods; or (e) to steamers or flats working in connection with railways, shall be entered in Table No. 4 only.

Number of persons reported during the year ending with the 31st March 19 , as killed or injured on the ________ Railway (open line) by the travelling of train or the movement of vehicles used exclusively upon railways, distinguishing between passengers, Railway servants and other persons, and classifying, as far as practicable, the nature and causes of the accidents occasioning the death or injury.

Bills introduced in the Indian Legislative Council, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 19th February, 1919 :—

No. 4 of 1919.

A Bill to make provision to determine the date of the termination of the present war and for purposes connected therewith.

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision to determine the date of the termination of the present war and for purposes connected therewith; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title.

1. This Act may be called the Termination of the Present War (Definition) Act, 191 .

Date of termination of present war to be such as may be declared by His Majesty in Council.

2. For the purposes of any provision in any enactment or in any notification or rule issued or made thereunder, and, except when the context otherwise requires, of any provision in any contract, deed or other instrument referring, expressly or impliedly, and in whatever form of words, to the present war or the present hostilities,—

(1) the present war shall be treated as having continued to and as having ended on such date as His Majesty in Council may declare in that behalf in pursuance of the provisions of the Termination of the Present War (Definition) Act, 1918, and 8 & 9 V., c

(2) the date of the termination of war between His Majesty and any particular State shall be the date similarly declared under sub-section (3) of section 1 of the said Act.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

BY the Termination of the Present War (Definition) Act, 1918 (8 & 9 Geo. V, c.-59), power has been taken for His Majesty in Council to declare what date is for certain purposes to be treated as the date of the termination of the present war either generally or as against any particular State. The object of the present Bill is to provide that for the purpose of provisions in enactments, notifications, rules, contracts, deeds and other instruments the date of the termination of the war shall be such date as His Majesty in Council may declare in pursuance of the powers conferred by the English Statute.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Indian Legislative Council on the 19th February, 1919 :—

No. 5 OF 1919.

[The bracketted figures in the margin refer to the corresponding sections of the existing Act.

A Bill to consolidate and amend the law regulating the importation, possession and sale of poisons throughout British India.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law regulating the importation, possession and sale of poisons throughout British India; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Poisons Act, 191 .

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan and the Sonthal Parganas.

Power of the Local Government to regulate possession for sale and sale of any poison.

2. (1) Subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, the Local Government may by rule regulate within the whole or any part of the territories under its administration the possession for sale and the sale, whether wholesale or retail, of any specified poison.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may provide for—

(a) the grant of licenses to possess any specified poison for sale, wholesale or retail, and the fixing of the fee (if any) to be charged for such licenses;

(b) the classes of persons to whom alone such licenses may be granted;

(c) the classes of persons to whom alone any such poison may be sold;

(d) the maximum quantity of any such poison which may be sold to any one person;

(e) the maintenance by vendors of any such poison of registers of sales, the particulars to be entered in such registers, and the inspection of the same;

(f) the safe custody of such poisons and the labelling of the vessels, packages or coverings in which any such poison is sold or possessed for sale; and (g) the inspection and examination of any such poison when possessed for sale by any such vendor.

Power to prohibit importation into British India of any poison except under license.

3. The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, prohibit except under and in accordance with the conditions of a license the importation into British India of any specified poison, and may by rule regulate the grant of licenses.

Power to regulate possession of any poison in certain areas.

4. (1) The Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may by rule regulate the possession of any specified poison in any local area in which the use of such poison for the purpose of committing murder or mischief by poisoning cattle appears to it to be of such frequent occurrence as to render restrictions on the possession thereof desirable.

(2) In making any rule under sub-section (1), the Local Government may direct that any breach thereof shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both, together with confiscation of the poison in respect of which the breach has been committed, and of the vessels, packages or coverings in which the same is found.

Presumption as to specified poisons.

5. Any substance specified as a poison in a rule made or notification issued under this Act shall be deemed to be a poison for the purposes of this Act. [2 (3) 6 (2).

Penalty for unlawful importation, etc.

6. (1) Whoever—

(a) commits a breach of any rule made under section 2, or

(b) imports into British India without a license any poison the importation of which is for the time being restricted under section 3, or

(c) breaks any condition of a license for the importation of any poison granted to him under section 3, shall be punishable,—

(i) on a first conviction, with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both, and

(ii) on a second or subsequent conviction, with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

(2) Any poison in respect of which an offence has been committed under this section, together with the vessels, packages or coverings in which the same is found, shall be liable to confiscation.

Power to issue search warrants.

7. (1) The District Magistrate, the Sub-divisional Magistrate and, in a Presidency-town, the Commissioner of Police, may issue a warrant for the search of any place in which he has reason to believe or to suspect that any poison is possessed or sold in contravention of this Act or any rule thereunder, or that any poison liable to confiscation under this Act is kept or concealed.

(2) The person to whom the warrant is directed may enter and search the place in accordance therewith, and the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, relating to search-warrants shall, as far as may be, be deemed to apply to the execution of the warrant.

Rules.

8. (1) In addition to any other power to make rules hereinbefore conferred, the Governor General in Council, or, subject to the control of the Governor General in Council, the Local Government, may make rules generally to carry out the purposes and objects of this Act.

(2) Every power to make rules conferred by this Act shall be subject to the condition of the rule being made after previous publication.

(3) All rules made by the Governor General in Council or by the Local Government under this Act shall be published in the Gazette of India or the local official Gazette, as the case may be, and on such publication shall have effect as if enacted in this Act.

Savings.

9. (1) Nothing in this Act or in any license granted or rule made thereunder shall extend to or interfere with anything done in good faith in the exercise of his profession as such by a medical or veterinary practitioner. [10.]

(2) Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, the Local Government may in its discretion by general or special order declare that all or any of the provisions of this Act shall be deemed not to apply to any article or class of articles of commerce specified in such order or to any poison or class of poisons used for any purpose so specified.

(3) The authority on which any power to make rules under this Act is conferred may, by general or special order, either wholly or partially—

(a) exempt from the operation of any such rules, or any person or class of persons either generally or in respect of any poisons specified in the order.

(b) exclude from the scope of the exemption provided by sub-section (1)

Repeal of Act I of 1904.

10. The Poisons Act, 1904, is hereby repealed. I of 190[4]

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE Poisons Act of 1904 was intentionally limited in scope so as to restrict interference with legitimate industries as much as possible. As the result of these limitations, however, the control afforded by the Act over the traffic in poisons has been proved by experience to be inadequate. In 1910 and 1914, the Government of the United Provinces suggested certain radical amendments in the Act to remedy this defect. The suggestions were referred to Local Governments and Administrations for opinion. The replies received showed a general agreement in favour of the suggestions of the Government of the United Provinces.

2. A new Bill has accordingly been prepared which will repeal the Poisons Act of 1904. The more important features of the Bill are:—

(1) The substitution of a single clause (clause 2) for sections 2, 4 and 6 of the existing Act with the object of empowering Local Governments to regulate the possession for sale and the sale, whether wholesale or retail, of any specified poison anywhere within their respective territories, instead of in municipalities and cantonments only.

(2) An expansion of the provisions of sections 3 and 5 of the Act so as to make them cover, not only white arsenic, but any poison specified in notifications or rules issued in accordance with those sections. (Clauses 3 and 4.)

(3) The exclusion of the classes (b), (c) and (d) mentioned in section 10 (1) of the Act with the effect of reducing the number of exempted classes to one, viz., medical and veterinary practitioners.

(4) The addition of a clause [clause 9 (3) (b)] empowering Government to exclude individual members of the exempted class (i.e., medical and veterinary practitioners) from the benefit of the exemption conferred by section 10 (1) of the Act.

The opportunity has also been taken to make some verbal alterations in the Act; and section 11, which is spent, has been omitted.

Proceedings of the Indian Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915.
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61.)

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Imperial Secretariat, Delhi, on Monday, the 10th February, 1919.

PRESENT:

His Excellency BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., G.C.B.E., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 53 Members, of whom 46 were Additional Members.

INDIAN CRIMINAL LAW (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"My Lord, before I introduce the Bill which will come under discussion to-day,—the Indian Criminal Law (Amendment) Bill,—I should like to take the opportunity of answering a question which was put to me at the last meeting of this Council. In the course of the debate on the Criminal Law (Emergency Powers) Bill, which is based, as is the present Bill, on the recommendations of the Rowlatt Committee, some Members of this Council expressed the view that they might have been able to support the measure if it had been of a temporary character, and towards the close of the debate I was specifically asked by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Banerjea what the intentions of Government in this matter were. It was clear that no single member of the Government could take the responsibility of answering immediately a question of that moment. Since then, however, I have ascertained the views of the Government of India and am authorised to state that the Government of India are willing that this Bill should remain in force for a period of three years only after the conclusion of peace. We believe that there is a precedent for this course in 11 A.

[Sir William Vincent.] [10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

the procedure adopted in the United Kingdom at one time over the Irish Coercion Act. In that case the Act was put in force for three years at first, but I ought to say it had to be extended afterwards for another two years. We have that precedent for the course which we propose to pursue, and Hon'ble Members are so convinced that the Reforms will change the whole attitude of this revolutionary party, that I think that in deference to their views we ought to meet them to this extent.

"Turning to the Bill which is before the Council to-day, I do not think I need waste much time in explaining the reasons for introducing it, as they are the same as those which I mentioned on the connected Bill on Friday. All the provisions of the Bill are based on the recommendations of the Rowlatt Report, and it remains for me only to describe, as shortly as I can, the provisions of the different clauses. The Bill, I should say, differs from the Bill I introduced last week, in that it is intended to make permanent changes in the ordinary criminal law of the land. The first clause deals with the possession of a seditious document and is based on Rule 25-A. of the Defence of India Rules, which rule has been in force for some time. It provides that any person who has in his possession a seditious document intending, that is, with the deliberate intention, that the same shall be published or circulated shall, unless he proves that he had such document in his possession for a lawful purpose, be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to two years.

"Clause 3 of the Bill merely authorises a District Magistrate to direct a preliminary inquiry to be made by the police in the case of certain offences, a prosecution in which cannot at present be launched without the sanction of the Local Government. In practice, it is often necessary to have such inquiries made before the Local Government can decide as to whether a prosecution should be launched or not.

"Clause 4 of the Bill makes a modification in section 343 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. That section prohibits the offer of any promise or threat or inducement to any accused person to make a statement save to the extent provided specifically in sections 337 and 338 in the case of conditional pardons. It has been found that this provision of the law interferes with a promise of protection to an accused person who is willing to give King's evidence, but is really afraid of violence, indeed often of being murdered, by his confederates; the intention is to enable Government to offer such protection to a person who is prepared to give evidence if protected.

"Clause 5 of the Bill introduces another new section into the Code of Criminal Procedure, and provides that where a person is accused of an offence against the State, that is, an offence under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code, evidence of the fact that he has previously been convicted of a similar offence, or that he habitually and voluntarily associates with any person convicted of such an offence, shall be admissible against him.

"There is only one other clause of the Bill to which I need refer, clause 6. This provides that when a man has been convicted of an offence against the State, for instance of waging war against the King, or conspiring to wage war against the King, then the Court may order him to execute a bond for his good behaviour for a term not exceeding two years after the expiration of his sentence. The new section is analogous to the present section 565. Further, where the Court has made such an order, the Local Government is, if the security is not furnished, authorised to impose restrictions upon the person so convicted in order to restrain his criminal activities after release from jail. The restrictions are that he shall not enter, reside or remain in any area specified, shall reside or remain in any area, shall abstain from addressing public meetings for the furtherance or discussion of any subject likely to cause disturbance or public excitement, or of any political subject, or for the distribution of any writing or printed matter relating to any such subject.

"The details of this Bill, my Lord, are in my judgment more a matter for Select Committee than for examination in this Council. At the same time, it is my duty to explain, as briefly as I can to the Council, what the proposed changes in the law are. With these words I introduce the Bill and move that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes, the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, the Hon'ble Mr Shafi, the Hon'ble Mr. Muddiman, the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, the Hon'ble Nawab Saiyad Nawab Ali Chaudhuri, the Hon'ble Mr Kincaid, the Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde, the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea, the Hon'ble Mr. Fagan, the Hon'ble Mr. Patel, the Hon'ble Sir Verney Lovett, the Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay, the Hon'ble Mr. Emerson and myself, with instructions to report on or before the 6th March 1919."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel:—"My Lord, I beg to move— 11-11 A.M.

'That the consideration of this Bill be deferred till six months have elapsed after the expiry of the term of office of this Legislative Council'

My Lord, at the outset I must say we are thankful to your Excellency's Government for the announcement that this measure and the measure we were discussing the other day are to be brought on the Statute-book for a period of three years only . . ."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"May I explain, my Lord, I did not say this in regard to the present Bill, which it is intended to bring permanently on the Statute-book."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel:—"It is then clear that, so far as this measure is concerned, it is intended to be a permanent addition to the law of the land; we are at present not concerned with the other measure at all. The grounds on which I supported my amendment on the first Bill are the grounds on which I support this amendment. Let us see what the provisions of this measure are. Clause 2 of the Bill proposes to insert a new section in the Indian Penal Code, section 124-B, making the possession of a seditious document penal. The law of sedition in this country, to put it briefly, is this, the Indian Penal Code was drafted in the thirties of the last century; there was no section on sedition inserted then, nor was it inserted when it was revised in 1860; it was for the first time in 1871 that the section on sedition found a place in the Indian Penal Code, but then it was distinctly laid down that the publication of the words itself, unless it was followed by actual disturbance in the country, would not be an offence Then again in 1898, further alteration was made, and it was laid down that mere publication of the objectionable words would be an offence. It is now proposed, my Lord, not to be satisfied with merely publication of the words but the possession of any document containing objectionable words shall also be penalised. The next stage perhaps would be to penalise a person who thinks sedition. Then again hitherto sedition was restricted to words directed against His Majesty or the Government established by law in this country. But it is now intended to go further and to provide that a person would be punished if the words are directed not only against His Majesty, or the Government by the law established, in this country, but also against officials generally or any individual officer, meaning thereby that if, for instance, an accused person who has been acquitted by a Magistrate were to contribute an article in a newspaper detailing the circumstances under which he was being treated and the manner in which he was treated whilst in police custody by a particular policeman, and if these words are likely to directly or indirectly affect what is described in the section as the use of criminal force against that policeman . . . ."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"The Hon'ble Member is not correct; it says instigating the use of criminal force."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel:—"If these words directly or indirectly are likely to instigate the use of criminal force against that policeman who is alleged to have maltreated that accused person, and if that newspaper comes into possession in the ordinary course of some person who was a subscriber, that subscriber is likely to be hauled up before a Magistrate, and, unless he proves that he came by that document in a lawful manner, he will have to suffer the consequences. That, shortly put, is the section which we are considering.

[Mr. V. J. Patel; Sir George Lowndes.] [10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The trial will not necessarily be in the ordinary Court of law, because we have, in considering this Bill, to take into consideration the provisions of the other Bill under which the Governor General in Council under the provisions of that law will be empowered to declare that in any particular area crimes under Chapter VI have been prevailing including this crime also. On such a declaration being made, the trial of the individual concerned will take place not in the ordinary Courts of law, but the Local Government will be empowered to make certain orders and then an investigating authority will be appointed and so forth. It is not that the Bill is to be considered by itself, but this Bill has to be considered along with the provisions of Chapters II and III of the other Bill. Now, coming to clause 5, we find that the fact that the person accused has previously been convicted of an offence under Chapter VI of the India Penal Code will be a relevant fact, and the fact that he has been associating with another person who has been convicted of any offence under Chapter VI shall also be a relevant fact. Hitherto previous conviction is admissible in evidence in two cases. Firstly, if the accused gives evidence that he is of good character, the prosecution is entitled to adduce evidence of previous conviction to show that he is a man of bad character; and, secondly, where on a trial of certain offences a man is actually proved to be guilty, and it is necessary for the prosecution to convince the Magistrate that a heavier sentence should be given to him, then in that case previous conviction is under certain circumstances admitted in evidence. It is now proposed to go further and to provide that in cases under Chapter VI previous conviction shall be a relevent fact for all purposes. The section does not stop there, my Lord . . . ."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—" My Lord, I think I ought again to intervene. The Hon'ble Member is no doubt quite unintentionally misrepresenting the law in this connection. He has failed to refer to the most important class of cases in which a previous conviction is relevant. I refer to section 14 of the Evidence Act, which says that 'where, upon the trial of a person accused of an offence, the previous commission by the accused of an offence is relevant within the meaning of this section, the previous conviction of such person shall also be a relevant fact.' It is upon the lines of this section that the clause has been introduced into this Bill. My Hon'ble friend, I am sure, did not intend to omit section 14 of the Evidence Act from consideration in this discussion."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel :—" Will my Hon'ble friend say whether a previous conviction has ever been admitted in evidence except under the two circumstances I just now mentioned ?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—" Certainly; in numberless cases. The commonest case of all is with reference to the passing of false coin.

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel :—" I beg your pardon. But this section goes much further than that. By this clause in cases under Chapter VI evidence of previous conviction of any offence under that Chapter is made admissible under any circumstances. Not only that, but the clause goes further and says ' the fact of association of an accused person with a person convicted under Chapter VI will also be a relevant fact.' Well, my Lord, so far as that is concerned, it is a most dangerous innovation in the law of evidence. I believe several people are in this as well as in every other country associating themselves with people who have been convicted of sedition, and if on their trial under Chapter VI, the fact of their association with a person convicted of sedition is to be admitted as evidence, I do not know where it would lead us to.

" Then with regard to the last clause, clause 6. It is proposed to call upon an accused person convicted of any offence under Chapter VI ' to furnish security, and if he does not do so, he is to be called upon or rather he is to be directed not to enter, reside or remain in any area specified in the order; he is also to be called upon to reside or remain in any area in British India so specified'; and he is further to be directed 'to abstain from addressing public meetings for the furtherance or discussion of any subject likely to cause disturbance or public excitement, or of any political subject, or for the distribution of any writing or printed matter relating to any subject'.

"My Lord, hitherto, so far as I have been able to understand it, the policy of the law has been to deal leniently with the first offenders. In fact, section 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code makes provision that certain offenders shall be warned and discharged on the first occasion. It is only when a man is a habitual offender, when a man is convicted more than once, in that case, under certain circumstances, he is to be called upon to furnish security. That policy is proposed to be reversed. By this clause the first offender is to be dealt with not leniently but harshly. On a person being convicted of sedition, he is to be called upon to furnish security, and if he does not furnish security, he is called upon to do so many things. Now, that is reversing the present policy of the law in this respect. In fact, section 565A is proposed to be inserted under the existing heading 'Previously convicted offenders' and not under 'first offenders.' The heading in the Criminal Procedure Code is 'previously convicted offenders,' and under that heading this section is proposed to be introduced. But the most dangerous part of the section, is that which deals with public meetings. A man who is convicted of sedition, is not only called upon to furnish security, but when he fails to do it, he should abstain from addressing any public meeting connected with any political subject, however innocent it may be, whether it causes or is likely to cause any excitement in the public mind or not. That indeed is a very dangerous part of this clause. I do not think I need take up the time of the Council, but I do think that any attempt to pass this measure will create great agitation, and I trust that your Excellency's Government will carefully consider the situation."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—"My Lord, I beg to move the amendment* which stands against my name But before I do so, Your Excellency will permit me to recognise on my behalf as well as on behalf of my colleagues here . . . ." 11-29 A.M.

His Excellency the President:—"Mr. Banerjea, you cannot move your amendment until this amendment has been disposed of. I know there is an amendment down in your name, but you must wait till the present amendment is disposed of."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—"I was following the liberty that was given to me on the last occason . . . ."

His Excellency the President:—"Yes, to mention it and to say that you will not make another speech."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—"It will be a very short one. I will not take up more than five or six minutes if your Excellency will grant that permission."

His Excellency the President:—"Yes."

The Hon'ble Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjea:—"My Lord, before I address myself to the amendment which stands against my name, I desire to acknowledge on my behalf as well as on behalf of my colleagues here, the fact, and gratefully acknowledge the fact, that the Government has shown some deference to public opinion by making the Bill which has been referred to the Select Committee temporary. But, my Lord, our objections to the Bill,

* That in the motion for referring the Bill to Select Committee, for the words 'on or before the 6th of March, 1919' the words 'within six weeks after the passing in Parliament of the Reform Bill to be introduced to give effect to the Montagu-Chelmsford Report' be substituted.'

however, will remain and our attitude will be largely determined by the form and the shape in which the Bill emerges from the Select Committee.

"My Lord, I can only hope that the Government, acting in the spirit which it has displayed to-day, will recognise the clear pronouncement of public opinion and modify the Bill which has already been referred to Select Committee and this one in such a way as to remove the alarm and anxiety which these Bills have created in the public mind. I desire to put one question to my Hon'ble friend the Home Member, and I hope he will be able to give me a specific answer in regard to it, that is, whether he will not consent to put in the Bill a specific statement to the effect that it is to be confined only to anarchical and revolutionary crimes. My Lord, I trust that this Bill, the one which we are just considering, will be only temporary, or that it will be altogether dropped. There are only two matters to which I desire to call your Excellency's attention, namely, clause 2 of the Bill which says :—

'Whoever has in his possession any seditious document intending that the same shall be published or circulated shall, unless he proves that he had such document in his possession for a lawful purpose, be punishable, etc.'

"My Lord, this is a new and, I say, a dangerous innovation in the present law. We are all here familiar with the conditions of village life. Village life is often apt to be disturbed by party and sectarian feuds. An enemy of mine may take it into his head to send me by post a seditious leaflet, and it may remain on my table and immediately he may give information to the police. The police search my house and find this leaflet on my table. I had not paid the slightest attention to the matter, but the burden of proof is thrown on me. My Lord, it will be a serious matter, a grave cause for anxiety, if a provision of this kind is enacted into law.

"My Lord, there is one other matter to which I desire to refer; and that is section 5, clause (b) :—

'That such person has habitually and voluntarily associated with any person who has been convicted of an offence under that Chapter.'

Now in the case of the joint-family, it is a very serious matter. Take the case of a brother who has been convicted and comes to his family, lives with his relations; are they to be liable to the provisions of this section? My Lord, this is a matter which may well create uneasiness in the public mind. There are other matters to which my friend has called attention. I do think that a Bill of this kind is necessary; I do hope and trust that it will be made temporary or altogether dropped. I prefer the latter. It is a Bill which has excited alarm and apprehension in the public mind, and it seems to me that it does not stand upon the same footing as the other Bill, and therefore I appeal to your Excellency's Government to drop it altogether."

11-34 A.M. The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—"My Lord, in speaking to the motion which has been put before the Council by my Hon'ble friend, Mr Patel, I do not wish to cover the same ground as was covered by myself and many of my colleagues on the last occasion when the first Bill was moved by the Hon'ble the Home Member. My Lord, so far as questions of policy or expediency are concerned, they were dealt with at great length by many of us on the last occasion, and I would submit respectfully that the same considerations apply to this Bill as do to the last Bill, but there are just one or two matters with special reference to this Bill which I should like to place before your Lordship and before the Hon'ble Council. My Lord, after the announcement which has just been made by the Hon'ble the Home Member, we find that the first Bill is going to be of a temporary character. Now, so far as this Bill is concerned, it is going to be, at any rate that is what has just been stated by the Hon'ble the Home Member, to be a permanent addition to the Statute-book. But, my Lord, quite apart from that distinction, I will beg the Council to consider whether this Bill is not one which requires to be treated on a footing of its own. My Lord, the leading feature of this Bill is that it creates an absolutely new offence which is to be found in clause 2 of this Bill. It says :—

'Whoever has in his possession any seditious document intending that the same shall be published or circulated shall, unless he proves that he had such document in his possession for a lawful purpose, be punishable with imprisonment, which may extend to two years, or with fine or with both.'

Now there are two points which arise with regard to this clause. In the first place, it makes it penal to possess a seditious document. In the next place, it casts the burden of proving that the possession was for a lawful purpose upon the accused. Now, my Lord, I do not think that any one of us, howsoever high his position may be, would be safe from molestation under the provisions of this section. I venture to submit, my Lord, that not even the Hon'ble the Home Member would be safe. Every day he has got to deal with seditious documents, and I have found him bringing seditious documents to this Council to read to us and warn us against. If there is some enterprising policeman somewhere about this Council Chamber, my Lord, he can make himself immortal in the history of this country by laying hands on the Home Member, and then it will be for Sir William to call your Lordship and every one of us in evidence to show that he was holding these documents for a lawful purpose. Of course we shall be prepared to swear that he was holding them for a lawful purpose, but until that is proved, the presumption will be that the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent was holding those documents for an unlawful purpose. My Lord, I ask you to imagine a position like that. Therefore, my Lord, I submit that this is a most vital and a most far-reaching change, and I will beg your Lordship and your Lordship's Government to consider whether it is wise to rush a measure like this through without giving the country sufficient time to consider its consequences. Where is the hurry for a measure like this? Why not circulate it among the Local Governments? Why not invite criticism from Judges of the High Court? Why not invite criticism from the public? My Lord, I would submit that the least that the Government can do is, that they should republish this Bill and circulate it among the Local Governments and the High Courts and invite public opinion freely. I do not think this Bill stands on the same footing as the former Bill does. My Lord, the last Bill was intended to cope with certain emergencies which, it is urged, have arisen or which may arise in the near future, and it was considered desirable from the point of view of the State that there should be a more speedy and a more summary procedure available to Courts of law or to other bodies in dealing with cases of that character. My Lord, those considerations do not apply to a Bill like this. Here you are making a permanent addition to the Statute-book and creating a new offence. I think the country is entitled to ask your Lordship to give it time to consider the consequences of a measure like this.

" My Lord, I will also refer to one other important circumstance which is common to both these Bills. In his speech on the last occasion, the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent, if I remember him rightly,—I speak subject to correction by him—told us that it was not the intention of the Government to strike at political movements, that it was really intended to grapple with anarchical or revolutionary movement.

" Well, my Lord, if that be so, why not make it clear in the preamble, which, as the lawyers say, is the key to an Act? My Lord, the preamble to this Bill runs as follows :—

'Whereas it is expedient to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, in order to deal more effectively with certain acts dangerous to the State.'

" My Lord, I would much rather that you were more definite about those certain acts which are dangerous to the State in your view and said plainly that those acts really are acts of an anarchical or revolutionary character. That will enable the Courts of law in any case to interpret this Bill in the manner in which it should be interpreted.

" My Lord, I do not wish to take up the time of the Council unnecessarily by referring to clauses 5 and 6, which have been fully dealt with by my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Patel, and my Hon'ble friend Mr. Banerjea; but I do say that these are novel provisions of very far-reaching consequences, and they require very careful consideration. In fact, the more one considers them, the more is one inclined to think that the Bill has been conceived in a hurry, although it may be that it is the result of the recommendations of the Rowlatt Committee.

"My Lord, on these grounds, I will strongly support the motion of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Patel and urge upon your Lordship and your Lordship's Government out of deference to public opinion in the whole country which has been very much agitated on this question, to republish this Bill at least, if you are not prepared to drop it as I would like you very much to do."

11-42 A.M. The Hon'ble the Raja of Kanika:—"My Lord, the Bill before us seeks to create a new offence and to introduce some peculiar innovations in the administration of criminal law. Its main provisions cannot be reconciled with the basic principle of modern jurisprudence. It is therefore that I view this Bill with grave misgivings. It has always been an accepted principle of law that the State should punish only those acts which are criminal in themselves. I venture to think that the mere possession of a seditious document should not be an offence in itself. Even if the possession be coupled with an intention to publish it, I think the State would not necessarily be justified in punishing the possessor. Suppose, my Lord, in an unguarded moment, when one's feelings have been deeply stirred, one writes a strong invective against the State with a view to publication. When calm returns, he realises his folly and seeks to destroy it. But in the meantime somebody has informed the Criminal Investigation Department, who launch a prosecution under the new law, that can only end in a conviction. The law, in other words, would punish a passing idea in a man's mind which does no harm to anybody at all. That would be a sure way to turn a loyal citizen into an enemy of the State.

"Again the protection of the innocent is a duty of the State, not less sacred than the punishment of the wrong-doer. It is therefore an accepted principle of law that the prosecution must prove a charge to the hilt before an accused person can be convicted of it. It is often impossible to prove a negative, and so the burden of proof has been wisely laid on the prosecution. It is difficult to conceive how it could be otherwise. But, my Lord, this Bill has openly violated even this fundamental rule, in providing for the insertion in the Penal Code of the proposed section 124-B. No one would be safe from its wide operation. As Mr. Banerjea has said, somebody sends a bit of seditious paper to another by post and drops an anonymous letter to the Criminal Investigation Department. The postman's visit is followed by another from the Criminal Investigation Department. And then a prosecution followed by a conviction would be a matter of course. How would the accused person be able to prove that he had 'a lawful purpose' when possessing the document? An innovation like this is bold in conception but dangerous in operation.

"I leave to my lawyer friends the discussion of details, and only wish to add that I regret I cannot lend my support to the motion before us."

1-45 A.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"My Lord, I would like to say just two words on this occasion. In the first place, I thank the Hon'ble the Home Member for the announcement he has made this morning. I thank him not so much for the concession itself, but for the fact that it shows that Government is responsive.

"My Lord, I associate myself with the suggestion that has been made by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea and the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru that it ought to be made to appear in the measure that it is only anarchical crimes that are aimed at and will be covered by it. I say, so, my Lord, for a particular reason. There is, unfortunately, an impression gaining ground in the country—I know it is absolutely unfounded but there is a suspicion—that the object of this measure is to put down political agitation. That was put forward by one of the speakers at the public meeting that was held in Madras the other day. It was said there that the measure of reform that would be granted to the country will fall far short of the expectations of the country, and there would be agitation, and it was with a view to put that down that this section was introduced at this moment, otherwise there would be no necessity for a measure like this when the Hon'ble the Home Member stated the other day that there had been so much improvement in the situation to-day that the Government of Bengal felt able to release more than 1,000 young men who had been detained, more than two-thirds of the total number who were proceeded against. Therefore, it was clear that there was no necessity for such a law on that ground. But, if it is put in black and white, in clear terms in that measure that it is only anarchical crimes which will come under the purview of that Act, I think it will go a long way in allaying suspicion.

" My Lord, so far as the present Bill is concerned, which we are discussing to-day, I shall not repeat the arguments which I stated the other day on which I oppose both these Bills, or in fact any repressive legislation at this moment. I shall, with the leave of the Council, just like to put before it one piece of documentary evidence which has come into my possession since I spoke last. My Lord, I received a copy of a letter that one of the prisoners in the Andamans, who, I believe, was one of the principal accused in the Benares Conspiracy Case, sent through the jail authorities, and I am told that the jail authorities deleted 46 lines from that letter. It is dated the 27th of October last. It deals with many matters which are domestic concerns. I shall not trouble the Council by reading the whole of it, but I shall just read one extract from it. I ought to have said that the original letter has been sent, I am informed by a responsible person, to a high official, but my informant guarantees the authenticity of the copy which has been given to me and the Council can take it from me that it is correct. This is what the young man writes to his brothers :—

'I have another request to make to you and this is about our future. One of us, Mr. Savarkar, has submitted a petition to the Government of India praying for a general amnesty for all the political prisoners including exiles.

'He sent a similar petition a few years ago to His Excellency Lord Hardinge, and he got the reply from His Excellency Lord Hardinge that the amnesty was not possible under the then circumstances. But the circumstances have changed when India is going to have substantial . ...' some word is omitted here probably 'share' 'in its own government as a first step towards the final self-government. Under these circumstances, Mr. Savarkar submitted another petition and he has got the reply that his petition is under consideration.'

Then I leave out one portion.

'We are supposed to be revolutionaries, and so we have been punished; but when it is the declared policy of the British Government to grant self-government to India within a limited period, the work of revolutionaries is finished. None wants revolution for revolution's sake, and when India gets all the opportunity to develop itself in all its capacities as a nation, her sons will not plunge in fire and accept all the hardships and sufferings that necessarily follow this path. For who is there to accept suffering for suffering's sake; who is there to accept prison and gallows for their own sake ?.'

" I submit, my Lord, that with all the evidence which I placed before the Council the other day, this letter goes a long way to show that there is no necessity for any repressive legislation at this moment. There is no allegation; nobody says or can say or point to any crime in the country that shows that at the present moment there is any revolutionary activity.

" My Lord, I will now turn to the Bill itself. It is a short one and contains only 5 or 6 clauses. The more salient features of it have already been dealt with by my Hon'ble friends Mr. Patel and Dr. Sapru. I would just like to point out, my Lord, that the Bill marks a further and perhaps final step in the process of expansion, or shall, I say, evolution of the criminal liability of the people of this country for sedition. We all know that in the Indian Penal Code, as it was passed in 1860, two years after the suppression of the Mutiny,

there was no provision against sedition. I think my Hon'ble friend Mr. Patel was a little inaccurate when he said there was nothing in the draft Code. I believe there was some provision in the draft Code, but when the Code was passed, it was not there. At any rate, for ten years there was no provision about sedition in the Penal Code; but in 1870, the then Law Member, Sir James Fitz James Stephen, by Act XXVII of 1870, introduced a provision which has now become 124 A. But, my Lord, he then stated distinctly on behalf of the Government—I will read out the passage from his speech—

'Nothing could be further from the wish of the Government of India than to check in the least degree any criticism of their measures, however severe and hostile—nay, however, disingenuous, unfair and ill-informed it might be. So long as the writer or speaker neither directly nor indirectly suggested or intended to produce the use of force, he did not fall within this section.'

So, in the words of the then Law Member, it was necessary absolutely to prove not only that the words were intended to provoke hatred against the Government, but meant to incite the use of force.

"My Lord, 28 years later, in 1898, this law was again amended. I do not complain of the amendment, but I complain of the manner in which this assurance which was given by Sir James Fitz James Stephen was whittled down, ignored. In introducing the new Bill, the then Law Member, Mr. Chalmers, said this on 25th November, 1898:—

'It is alleged that in the new section 124A, we are altering and extending the existing law under the existing section, section 124A. This criticism is mainly based on some remarks made by Sir James Fitz James Stephen, when introducing the Act of 1870. I agree that it might be inferred from some passages in his speech that he considered an appeal to force to be an element in seditious utterances. But it is a familiar rule of law that proceedings in the Legislature cannot be resorted to to interpret an Act.'

"My Lord, if I allude to this circumstance it is for the unfortunate fact that we find every now and again, that whenever a concession is made or an assurance given to the people of this country, the next moment it is attempted to take away the concession or to whittle down the assurance. But what have we in this case? Sir James Fitz James Stephen in this Council on behalf of the Government of India made a statement that to complete the offence there should be incitement and an appeal to force. But what did Mr. Chalmers say? 'It might be inferred from certain passages in his speech.' Is that a fair statement of the speech, just quoted, of Sir James Fitz James Stephen? In the second place, it is quite true that in accordance with a decision of the Privy Council references to the proceedings of the Council are not allowed in interpreting any Act. But is this Council a Court of law? Is it not the very function of this Council to look into and to decide and consider the policy of any law? Of course there would be nothing wrong if Mr. Chalmers had said 'It was the policy of 1870 to lay it down that unless there is an appeal to force the offence will not be complete; but we are going to revise that policy.' But Mr. Chalmers tries to go behind that. That is what I complain of. That is what I am afraid the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent did the other day. My Hon'ble friend Pandit Malaviya pointed out that when the Defence of India Act was passed, there was an assurance given by Sir Reginald Craddock that it was a war measure, and that after the war it would automatically expire. But it was not the war merely which induced the Government to introduce that measure. Side by side with the war—there was in existence—it was proved there was a revolutionary movement; and it was in consequence of these two facts—in consequence of the war and the existence of a revolutionary party—that that law was passed. Still, the then Home Member gave us an assurance that when the war would be over, this law would expire . . . . .

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"So it will."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"But the Hon'ble the Home Member did not say anything about the revolutionary party.

[10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.]

What are you going to do to-day ? You are going to perpetuate the law in another form, and when the Hon'ble Pandit Malaviya raises the question, the Hon'ble the Home Member gives no satisfactory answer, but says this Council has the power to pass the law. Nobody denies that. This Council can indeed pass any law; but the question is, whether in view of the assurance given to us it was right and proper to introduce this legislation. To come back to the Bill. In 1898, you still had to prove those two facts,—you had to prove that there was an intention to bring Her Majesty's Government into contempt. I will quote the words of the section :—

"brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or attempts to excite, disaffection towards Her Majesty or the Government established by law in British India"

You had to prove intention, you had to prove publication. These two facts had to be proved. That was in 1898. But the Bill which we are asked to pass in this Council to-day ignores both these two considerations. It is not necessary to prove publication, and it is not necessary to prove the object. The object might be quite honest, but if the document is found in my house, if it is considered to come within the meaning of this section, then I am guilty.

"Never mind what my object is : I am guilty even if I do not publish it : Not only that, my Lord. In 1870 as well as in 1898 this offence was confined to utterances against the Government only, but in the present Bill we go further : Even an ordinary policeman becomes raised to the status of Government : Even anything which might incite to criminal force against a constable becomes a State offence. Suppose a policeman comes into my house and attempts to levy blackmail or extort money and I advise that he be held by the neck and turned out, that would bring me under the new section. That is my complaint that you are extending dangerously the law in this country.

"There is another step which was referred to by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel, namely, are you going to enact a law for thinking sedition ? Well, I wish to point out that there is still another stage in the process : a man might not only think but might dream of sedition : In that event will the Hon'ble the Home Member attempt to put down not only thinking but dreaming also ? I think, my Lord, this section is very dangerously wide, and as my Hon'ble friend Dr. Sapru has pointed out, nobody would be safe, no, not even the Hon'ble the Home Member, under the strict interpretation of the Law. It is absolutely new; it is not known in any country : I respectfully invite the Hon'ble the Law Member to tell this Council whether there is such a law in any country in the world. It is very necessary that this should be completely modified if not absolutely abandoned.

"I shall refer to two other provisions in the Bill. Under clause 3 a new section is inserted in the Criminal Procedure Code, that is to say, a District Magistrate or the Chief Presidency Magistrate may, notwithstanding anything contained in those sections or in any other part of this Code, order a preliminary inquiry by a police-officer not below the rank of an Inspector. Now, we know that this Bill is based on the recommendations of the Rowlatt Committee. But, my Lord, I speak subject to correction, I find that they do not go so far. If we read the last sentence in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, which is quoted from paragraph 186 of the Report, we find it is said 'It has been suggested to us that the powers should extend to Superintendents and even Inspectors of Police. But we cannot endorse this.' In spite of that recommendation we find in the Bill, it is stated that District Magistrates might order an inquiry by even an Inspector of Police.

"The other provision which I need refer to is clause 5, about criminal association, and the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea's speech amply illustrates the dangers which are likely to accrue from this clause.

"For all these reasons, my Lord, I respectfully support the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel."

[Mr. G. S. Khaparde.] [10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

12-4 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—" It is said, my Lord, that possession is nine points of law. This possession is at any rate enough to prove a man guilty very successfully any where. The section that occurred to me on reading this section was the section dealing with persons found in possession of stolen property. There it is set out that when a man is found in possession of stolen property, he is not guilty unless he knows that it is stolen property. A man may be innocent in possession of stolen property; a servant may have stolen it; he may have exposed it for sale in the market, and going there I may purchase it without knowing that it is stolen. In that case the law says a man is not to be punished unless he knows that the property is stolen. But here mere possession of a seditious document is punishable; the knowledge of the person as to whether it is seditious or not is made apparently unimportant. This, I think, is very difficult and, if your Excellency will permit me to say so, rather dangerous. Sedition is a very difficult crime to define. In fact I have read some text books which say that sedition is so difficult to define that the best that can be said is that you can say or write what you please if any thirteen persons in England or nine persons in India will approve of it. It is not seditious, and if those thirteen or nine do not approve of it, then it is seditious. So this crime of sedition is very very difficult to define: specially this portion which has the words 'instigates or is likely to instigate.' How is a man to know that it is likely to instigate? It will depend upon the personal equation of each person. I may think that this will not instigate or is not likely to instigate, and if the jury take the other view or, as in India, there are not always juries to try, the presiding Judge says it is likely to instigate, there is an end of the matter. So this offence has been found to be very difficult to define. In the case of stolen property it has to be proved; the knowledge has to be brought home to the man, either by inference or by positive evidence, that he knows the property is stolen before he can be convicted. But in this case it is not necessary that the possessor should know that a document is seditious, and it is difficult to know this. As an example of it I may say that the District Magistrate of Poona thought that a certain speech was seditious and was likely to incite people to commit crime or something of the kind, and then the High Court said, 'No, this is merely legitimate criticism; there is nothing more in it.' Now, we come to this, that a person does not know and very likely will not know, because everybody, or at any rate I suppose the majority of mankind, read their own thoughts into the papers they read; the innocent man will look upon it as innocent, whereas a policeman might look into it and say 'Oh, there is a great deal more in it than appears on the surface,' and so on. Taking these two things together, I think that this clause 2 of the present Bill makes an advance which is rather dangerous.

" Clause 5 of the Bill to me appears to go against all probabilities. Under that the fact that a person has been convicted previously of an offence is said to be relevant under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code; that is to say, if a man committed crime A, therefore it is very likely that he committed crime B, and by the same process of reasoning one could say that he committed all the offences in the Indian Penal Code. Ordinarily, it is believed, that when a man has committed an offence and it is brought home to him and he is punished, then the offence has been wiped out; he has endured the punishment and the presumption is that he has come out of jail a wiser man, a more law-abiding man than he was before and so on. But here notwithstanding that the man may have undergone the sentence, the stigma still taints him, and because at one time in his life he committed an offence it is held probable that he committed another. The sub-section carries it a great deal further; it says 'you may not have committed the offence, but your friend with whom you associate committed this offence. Therefore it is very likely that you will commit this offence.' This reminds me of the old stories in which, if a man committed a crime, his whole family was ordered to be punished for it. As we read in our ancient books, there was a Brahmin whose wife a cobra bit and thereupon he vowed to kill every creeping animal on earth. This Bill, like the Bill which we discussed on Friday last, carries us back to the old law of vicarious punishment. He may be a member of a family or he may be a member of a club; other people may associate with him and for one who is guilty of an offence others must suffer. I think that section 6 really defeats itself. What is the end of punishment? The end of punishment is that a man may improve. You punish a person in order that, after he has endured punishment, he may become a better citizen and in order that he may not break the law again. But this section defeats the purpose for which it is enacted. You say he shall do certain things and he shall not do certain things; there are restrictions, judicial and otherwise; his place of residence is notified, he is watched by the police, he is known to everybody; what is he to do? There is nothing for him to do but to swell the ranks of the criminals. This law really defeats the purpose of all criminal enactments. Taking all these facts together and looking at the matter in this way, I cannot help thinking that when the Reforms come in what will happen will be this; they will be celebrated by illuminations. In Rome, they granted a triumphal entry to armies after victory; they, I suppose, marched past and the hero came last in great pomp, but in the chariot of the hero there was always a slave, and his business was to tell the hero that he was a mere man. I suppose the object was to prevent the hero from being overjoyed; I do not know what the object was, but there used to be a slave in the chariot. When the Reforms come there will be these two slaves, this Bill and its sister Bill, and the object will be a warning to this effect, 'take care, you do not do this or that or the other'. That will reduce the joy derived from the situation. I submit, my Lord, that this is a dangerous Bill, and I whole-heartedly support the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My 12-13 P
Lord, with reference to the statement made by the Hon'ble the Home Member, to which other Hon'ble Members have also referred, I will, with your Lordship's permission, make just one observation. The Hon'ble the Home Member has told us that the Government have decided to limit the duration of the Bill which was referred to a Select Committee the other day, to a period of three years. This is a fact on which the Government have to be congratulated, but I hope that the Government will further consider the matter and see their way to withdraw this Bill altogether. The statement which has been made by the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent that this will be a temporary measure.....

His Excellency the President:—"Order, order. The Hon'ble Member cannot debate the procedure in regard to the other Bill on this Bill."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Thank you, my Lord, I did not intend to do so. I was referring to it merely to the extent to which it was referred to by the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea. My point was that the Seditious Meetings Act was passed in 1907 as a temporary measure, but it was made permanent in 1911; that is a fact I wished to bring to your Excellency's notice as showing a difficulty in the way of our agreeing to the Bill, even as a temporary measure, and I hope the Government will take note of it and consider it. My Lord, with regard to this Bill now before us, I would draw attention to what your Excellency and your colleague, the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State, said in your Report, it will facilitate discussion on the Bill before the Council. This is what is said in paragraph 150 of your Report:—

'There exists a small revolutionary party deluded by hatred of British rule and desire for the elimination of the Englishman into the belief that the path to independence or constitutional liberty lies through anarchical crime. Now it may be that such persons will see for themselves the wisdom of abandoning methods which are as futile as criminal; though if they do not, the powers of the law are, or can be made, sufficient for the maintenance of order.'

Now, my Lord, I submit that, in pursuance of this wise advice, the Government might yet withhold its hand from the Bill before the Council. There is no occasion for hurry. Your Lordship and your colleague rightly hoped that men who were violent, who were misguided might be diverted from crime and see the futility of such acts, and that when a better atmosphere had been created, it would be possible for us to deal with these matters with a greater chance of arriving at correct conclusions. My Lord, in so far as this particular Bill is concerned, the request comes not to legislate in a hurry, if anything with greater force, because here it is proposed to make a permanent alteration in the Statute-book, and the alteration proposed is of a very novel and dangerous character as several speakers have pointed out. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons, there is a quotation from the Rowlatt Committee's Report which says, 'In the first place, we think that a permanent enactment on the lines of Rule 25A. under the Defence of India Act is required. That rule provides for the punishment of persons having prohibited documents . . . . in their possession or control with . . . .intent to publish or circulate them.' Now, my Lord, the Defence of India Act was admittedly a war measure. When under that measure the Government found it necessary to prohibit the possession of certain documents, there was one very important guarantee and that was that the documents, the possession of which was regarded as criminal, were proclaimed and notified. Then everybody was expected to know what the document was, and it was easy for people to avoid these documents. The Bill before the Council does not define what a seditious document is except in very general terms, and every individual is expected to decide whether a document is seditious or not. Everybody knows that it is not unoften difficult to decide whether a document is seditious or not; even the Courts have differed on this point. Mr. Khaparde referred to one instance, it is probably the one to which I referred the other day. A District Magistrate arrived at the conclusion that a certain speech was seditious; the High Court corrected him and told him that it was not seditious. We also remember the cases that were considered in the Calcutta High Court in relation to the Press Act. We must not ignore the difficulty of arriving at a conclusion as to whether a document is seditious or not. It is rather hard, it is unfair, if I may say so without disrespect, to the ordinary citizen that the mere possession of a document which may be interpreted as seditious should be made penal. And, my Lord, I would ask the Government to bear in mind who are the classes of persons who are likely to fall victims to this law. They are the youthful students. Seditious documents are circulated among these poor students. If the Bill is passed, they will be expected to judge whether these documents are to be regarded as instigating the use of criminal force against any individual. Are they likely to find it easier than trained Judges to judge that the document is of a seditious character, and that it should be avoided like poison? I say not, and I apprehend that innocent students will fall victims to this very comprehensive provision of the law.

"Then, my Lord, there are paper boys selling papers and books in streets in Calcutta, Bombay and other places. A man for his own purposes wants these boys to sell or distribute documents which may come within the definition of seditious documents, and he puts them into their hands. The poor boys do not know what the documents are, and they go about selling the documents. When they are hauled up, they must prove that they possessed them for a lawful purpose. But the purpose, namely, the selling or distributing of the document could not be lawful, and the poor boys would find it very hard under this section to defend themselves. The remedy which the Bill seeks to provide against the circulation of seditious literature is not the right remedy. I would much rather that the circulation of seditious literature went unchecked among a few than that a large number of persons should be exposed to the danger of annoyance and injustice. We all agree that it is a very reasonable desire to restrict the circulation of such papers as much as possible, and to punish the offenders, so far as it could be done. But a better means should be found for doing so than the one that has been proposed. Besides, it has often happened, as some Hon'ble Members have pointed out, that seditious papers have been sent in by those who want to circulate them by the mail to persons who do not want to have anything to do with them. During the last few years, since 1906 or 1907, a number of seditious papers have come to many of us. Many times we have sent them on to the Magistrate or to the Chief Secretary to Government; at times we may have thrown them aside, without noticing their contents fully. Do you expect a man who gets a large dâk, which some of us have the good or bad fortune of receiving, to read every document he may receive to see if it is of an objectionable character? If such a document is allowed to lie in his office or somebody picks it up, the mere possession of that document will expose him to a prosecution and punishment. My Lord, the proposed law goes much beyond what is reasonable. I submit that there should be some other means considered and adopted by which the circulation of seditious literature should be checked. We should try to enlist the co-operation of schoolmasters and teachers and parents of boys in this work. We should do so by adopting measures which will have public sympathy and support, and not by passing a drastic legislation, by the votes of official Members, which antagonises public feeling. A disregard of public feeling is the last course which should be adopted by a Government anxious to promote peace and contentment among the people which can only be done by enlisting public sympathy. I submit, therefore, that some other measure should be considered and introduced, and that the present proposal should be dropped.

"Then, my Lord, the provision in section 4 regarding a promise of protection to an accused person again is a matter which requires consideration. The proviso reads: 'Provided that a promise of protection to an accused person against criminal force or any promise properly incidental to a promise of such protection, shall not be deemed to be the use of influence within the meaning of the section, namely section 343 of the Criminal Procedure Code.'

Now the Committee say in their Report :—

> 'We think, however, that no harm can be done by amending section 343 of the Criminal Procedure Code.'

That is a very mild way of putting it 'no harm can be done.' They say 'we do not think that it is necessary to alter the section at all. Such a promise as is referred to is only an assurance that he will get what he would be entitled to in any case.' If so, why enact this provision in the Bill to make it legal that such a promise of protection may be made? It is feared that protection like that may go beyond what may be safe and right, and that it may lead some persons to wrongly implicate others or give testimony which may not be of the right character, which may not be truthful and just.

"Then, my Lord, section 5 of the Bill again is very wide and very dangerous. Here, my Lord, it is proposed to enact that 'On the trial of an offence under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code, the following facts shall be relevant, namely—

(a) that the person accused has previously been convicted of an offence under that Chapter, and

(b) that such person has habitually and voluntarily associated with any person who has been convicted of an offence under that Chapter.'

"Now, my Lord, I want the Government to realise what this would mean. There may be a person who has been convicted of one of the offences mentioned in Chapter VI of the Penal Code, say of having made a seditious speech or of having published an article which is held to be seditious. [illegible] every person who may habitually and voluntarily associate with such a person is to be penalised. Therefore, he is to be treated as a moral leper in society, people are not to go near him. You will thus create a class of men who will be condemned to isolation. These men will stand by themselves; association with them will be penalised. A feeling of bitterness will thus be fostered and perpetuated in their minds, which is certainly not likely to promote peace and contentment. If it is shown that the man has again been guilty of a similar offence, he will be punished for it. But a provision like the one proposed is unjust and is likely to operate to the prejudice of the peace and contentment which you want to promote. Let us now look at section 6 relating to an order for security on conviction for an offence under Chapter VI of the Penal Code. Punishments in this country are unconscionably heavy in many cases. Punishments in this country compare very unfavourably with sentences passed in other countries for similar crimes Now if you are going to add to a sentence which a Court may inflict upon a particular person by a provision of the kind proposed, you are proceeding in a wrong way. The Court will pass such a sentence upon a man found to be guilty as it thinks that it should. After that sentence has been undergone by the unfortunate man, let him have a chance of behaving better; let him have an opportunity of avoiding doing that which brought him into trouble. After he has suffered the punishment which was inflicted on him, give him a clean slate to write upon. Let him have a fresh start in life and breathe free.

"My Lord, a further provision in the same section says that, if a person who may be ordered to give security fails to do so, he shall have to notify his residence and any change of residence, and that in such a case he may be shut up by order of the Local Government in certain places and may be prevented from discussing any political subject. All this is calculated to create a feeling of bitterness, to create an atmosphere of non-contentment, and, I submit, that it is not right that this should be so. Let us wait. We are sure that the reforms are coming. The times have changed and will change further when the reforms have come. Of course no one can say that there shall be no anarchical or revolutionary crime after that. We can rightly hope that there will not be. But if there is, as your Lordship and Mr. Montagu have pointed out in your Report, the law is sufficient, and if it is not sufficient, when the need is found, legislation could be undertaken to meet it. For all these reasons I oppose the motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee.

"I request the Government to drop this measure for the present or, at any rate, to postpone it, in order that the matter may be taken up and considered in a better atmosphere. I hope the Government will consider this and deal with this Bill in a larger spirit than it did with the previous Bill which we discussed the other day.

"There is only one other matter to which I would invite attention. At page 28, paragraph 35 of their Report, the Rowlatt Committee say:—

'Lastly, we have had placed before us a number of statements. In some cases these have been made by approvers, who have been willing to give evidence, but in most cases they were made by persons, in custody, who are not so disposed. There are a very few statements and those only as to particular incidents, made by police agents and members of the public. The great mass of the statements are by persons in custody other than approvers, and as to these we must offer some comment and explanation. Unfortunately, with few exceptions, we have felt bound to treat these statements as confidential'.

"My Lord, later on in the paragraph they point out how they were hampered by this fact.

'The above considerations have hampered us considerably in fortifying, by way of reasoning upon evidence disclosed upon the face of this Report, the conclusions at which we have arrived. They have robbed us of the power to cite particular deponents by name, to set forth the circumstances of the making of the statement, to discuss his means of knowledge and the corroboration which he receives from independent statements or ascertained facts.'

"Now [illegible] my Lord, that if these statements are not placed before the general [illegible] they [illegible] at any rate, be available to the Members of this Council [illegible] have to vote upon the Bills passed here, and I made the request when speaking on the other Bill that these papers may be supplied to Members of this Council. Finally, I submit that the ordinary procedure which is prescribed for dealing with Bills should be followed in the case of this Bill, namely, that the motion to-day should be limited to the introduction of the Bill, that the Hon'ble the Home Member should drop the latter part of the proposal, namely, that it should be referred to a Select Committee, and that the Bill should be circulated for opinions; that when these have been obtained, the Bill should be taken up at the next meeting of the Council in Simla, and the question of referring it to a Select Committee may then be decided".

[10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]   [Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" My Lord, I heartily join the other Hon'ble Members, who have congratulated the Government for being responsive to public opinion in the matter of the Emergency Powers Bill. I only hope that at the Select Committee stage it will be possible so to modify the Bill as to obtain the general approval of the public at large. 12-30 P.M.

" Now coming to this Bill, my Lord, I only wish to add a few remarks to what have fallen already from Hon'ble Members on this side of the Council. I think, taking the first section, it is widely enlarging the scope of Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code. Hon'ble Members will see that at present under Chapter VI it is only the assaulting or threatening to assault certain august members of His Majesty's Government, the Viceroy, Members of Council and so on, with a view to prevent them from exercising their functions, that is made an offence of State. Now sedition has been defined of course generally in the next section, and the Government have wisely seen their way to limit the operation of that clause by confining it only to such documents as instigate the use of criminal force. I understand and appreciate therefore the limitation imposed by this clause in the definition of seditious document. But, my Lord, the danger is that, in trying to protect honest police-officers in the discharge of their duty, the Government have so enlarged the definition of a seditious document and so enlarged the scope of Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code as to bring within the meaning of the word ' sedition ' a new class of offence altogether. For instance, the section says ' that any person who publishes a document which instigates directly or indirectly, or is likely to instigate the use of criminal force against His Majesty or the Government established by law in British India, or against public servants generally or any class of public servants or any individual public servant,' will be considered guilty of publishing a seditious document. But supposing a public servant has a private quarrel and persons aggrieved by the conduct of that public servant write to one another asking whether it would be advisable to give a sound thrashing to that public servant, not in relation to the discharge of his public duty, not with a view to commit any offence under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code, but for a different purpose altogether. Well a document of that description would certainly be a seditious document within the meaning of clause 2, although nothing may be done in pursuance of the communication. I therefore respectfully submit that, in trying to protect police-officers and others who, in the arduous discharge of their public duties, expose themselves to imminent risk, in trying to protect them, the Government have so widely enlarged the scope of the section as to make it perfectly dangerous. Therefore, I respectfully submit that it would be impossible for this Council to accept that definition of a seditious document. I think, therefore, that there should be a certain restriction to cases instigating the use of criminal force for the purpose of committing any offence under Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code, and that might perhaps meet the situation to a certain extent. Then the other observation I would make, my Lord, is this. We have in the Explosive Substances Act made the possession of an explosive substance an offence under certain circumstances, but it is there indicated that it is only the making of explosive substances, or knowingly having in possession or control such explosive substances as to give rise to a reasonable suspicion, that it is not for a lawful object, would be an offence, unless the person accused can show that he made it or had it in [illegible] possession for a lawful purpose. The words used in dealing [illegible] the [illegible] Substances Act are much more elastic for the benefit of the accused person than the words employed in this clause. Here the possession of a document, I take it, would be an offence only if it was intended that it should be published or circulated. The mere possession would not be any offence whatsoever. If it was with an intent to publish or circulate it, unless it be for a lawful purpose, it might be an offence. But then you throw the onus on the wrong individual in establishing the offence which is created by this section. You do not say that where the intention to publish or circulate is proved affirmatively by the prosecution. In order to escape from the charge the man has to prove that the publication or circulation is intended for a lawful purpose. The onus is not thrown for that purpose upon the accused person, but as I take it, the offence sought to be created by this section makes such possession by itself penal, unless the man can prove a lawful purpose. If it is not so I hope it will be made clear. As it stands there is a grave danger of mere possession itself being a presumptive evidence of guilt under this Chapter. I hope therefore that section 2 will be so modified, if the section is ever to be placed upon the Statute-book, (which I see no reason to endorse), as not to create a new kind of crime enlarging the scope of the word sedition, and further safeguarding the presumption of innocence at least to the extent provided in the case of the Explosive Substances Act.

"Then I have only one or two remarks to make with reference to clause 4. With reference to this clause I certainly see that the promise of protection itself should not render any statement made by the person inadmissible, but the question would be as to whether an offer of money, a pension or a gratuity in case a person is injured or in case he is killed, a pension to his family, would come within section 4. That is a matter of doubt. If it is intended that a person should be offered a pension or gratuity under such circumstances there is grave danger, I submit, in enlarging the scope of the present law. I do not think the Rowlatt Committee intended to enlarge the scope of the present law. Of course they say to make the present law clearer would be a perfectly innocuous proceeding and might lead to the clearing up of various doubts and difficulties which are felt in the actual administration of the law as it stands.

"Then, my Lord, I entirely associate myself with the observations made by Hon'ble Members with regard to clause 510-A. It would be absolutely dangerous to enact that a person who has been unfortunately convicted of an offence under section 4 should be boycotted. I do not see there is much danger in the case of the undivided family, because I do not think it will be voluntary association, it will be an involuntary association within the meaning of the clause; members of the family have naturally to associate with other members of the family. But apart from that, I think there is a grave danger in this boycott movement being inaugurated under Government auspices, because, as has been pointed out, it would render the convicts desperate, and it might lead to more harmful consequences than can at present be imagined.

"Then turning to the last clause, I am doubtful as to what was meant by the scope of this clause. If a person gives security as he may be directed to do by the Court which convicts him, is he still to be asked by the Government not to publish, not to do this or not to do that as is provided for in clause 6. The Rowlatt Committee does not seem to contemplate that at all. It is only in case he is not able to furnish the security that he is asked to furnish that such a thing should be done. I take it that if you say that where a person is under an obligation to notify, it is meant clearly that that obligation to notify does not arise as soon as the security is offered. If that is so, that would be something, but as the section stands it seems to be absolutely indefensible.

"Then, as has been pointed out, apart from this technical objection, to ask a person not to connect himself with any political subject, not to speak at all, would be going too far and is absolutely unnecessary.

"I hope [illegible]ore, [illegible] before a Bill of this description is placed upon the Statute[illegible]ider [illegible], greater time and opportunity, will be given for the publi[illegible] comprehend the provisions of this Bill, and that legislation should not [illegible]ushed through. In any event, I join those who say that it should be dropped for the present."

3 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, a great deal that has passed in this very interesting debate would, I venture to think, have been much better put in Select Committee.

"Take the clause with which so many Members have dealt, regarding the possession of incriminating documents. I can only say that, so far as my responsibility for the drafting of this Bill is concerned, I have attempted to put it in as plain English as I have at my command, that the gist of the offence is possession plus intent to publish. Yet, I have heard more than one Hon'ble Member, learned lawyers like the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, suggesting that the gist of the offence is mere possession . . . .

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"May I make an observation? I did not say that the mere possession would be construed as an offence, but possession would be considered presumptive evidence of intention to publish or to circulate."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Hon'ble friend used so many words that I may not have caught that, but I certainly picked out from them the statement that he was afraid it might be held that the gist of the offence was mere possession. If it is not so, I welcome it. Frankly, I have tried to make the language as plain English as is possible, and if my Hon'ble friend can mistake it, I can only say that the ingenuity of lawyers is unbounded. But at most this is a question for Select Committee. Then it is said that the possessor of the documents may not know that they are seditious. At present publication of seditious documents is an offence. The suggestion that the "poor people" who do these things may not know whether the documents are seditious or not equally applies to the present law. If a man publishes a thing of this sort, he does it at his own risk. One Hon'ble Member has referred to the Tilak case where Mr. Tilak published certain things which the Magistrate thought were objectionable and which the High Court thought were not. Well, people who publish things which are very much on the line. . . . . .

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khapardes:—"I had other cases in view; the case of Narayan Row Vaidya of Nagpur who made a speech; the Magistrate convicted him of being seditious and the Judicial Commissioner acquitted him."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"The only point of my remarks was that this same difficulty as to whether a document is seditious or not, in fact occurs just as much under the present law. If any one publishes a document which, as I said is on the line—so that one man may think it is seditious while another may not—he must take the risk of a prosecution. He may come out all right because the first Court before whom the case comes thinks it is not seditious or on appeal the High Court thinks it is not seditious, but he has to take that risk, if he deals with doubtful matters like possibly seditious documents. All I say is that the same difficulty arises under the present law, and that therefore we are not creating any new difficulties under this clause of the Bill. The object of the section is this Even, now, if a man publishes seditious documents, he can be prosecuted, but then the mischief is done and the seditious documents may have been scattered broadcast. I think my Hon'ble friend the Pandit would prefer that a few documents of this nature should get into the hands of a few people rather than that trouble should be caused to the many. But really the boot is on the other leg. It is the danger of a great many undesirable documents being scattered abroad as against the possibility of trouble to a very small number of possibly innocent persons. What we want to try and prevent [illegible]. Once these documents get out and fall into the [illegible] of a [illegible]pressionable and youthful public, the mischief is done. [illegible] and prevent their getting out. The Hon'ble Pandit Mada[illegible] Ma[illegible]viya says he also wishes to do that. Indeed, the devising of means by which we can prevent this result is a matter which will commend itself to every Member of this Council. The Hon'ble Pandit says we have not adopted the best method of doing it. But we all want the same thing. Let us discuss in Committee how we can best effect it, how we can amend this section so as to get rid of the difficulties that Hon'ble Members have referred to. We all want to prove that the publication or circulation is intended for a lawful purpose. The onus is not thrown for that purpose upon the accused person, but as I take it, the offence sought to be created by this section makes such possession by itself penal, unless the man can prove a lawful purpose. If it is not so I hope it will be made clear. As it stands there is a grave danger of mere possession itself being a presumptive evidence of guilt under this Chapter. I hope therefore that section 2 will be so modified, if the section is ever to be placed upon the Statute-book, (which I see no reason to endorse), as not to create a new kind of crime enlarging the scope of the word sedition, and further safeguarding the presumption of innocence at least to the extent provided in the case of the Explosive Substances Act.

But apart from that, I think there is a grave danger in this boycott movement being inaugurated under Government auspices, because, as has been pointed out, it would render the convicts desperate, and it might lead to more harmful consequences than can at present be imagined.

"Then turning to the last clause, I am doubtful as to what was meant by the scope of this clause. If a person gives security as he may be directed to do by the Court which convicts him, is he still to be asked by the Government not to publish, not to do this or not to do that as is provided for in clause 6. The Rowlatt Committee does not seem to contemplate that at all. It is only in case he is not able to furnish the security that he is asked to furnish that such a thing should be done. I take it that if you say that where a person is under an obligation to notify, it is meant clearly that that obligation to notify does not arise as soon as the security is offered. If that is so, that would be something, but as the section stands it seems to be absolutely indefensible.

"Then, as has been pointed out, apart from this technical objection, to ask a person not to connect himself with any political subject, not to speak at all, would be going too far and is absolutely unnecessary.

"I hope [illegible]fore, [illegible] before a Bill of this description is placed upon the Statute[illegible] [illegible]ider [illegible]ty, greater time and opportunity, will be given for the publi[illegible] [illegible] comprehend the provisions of this Bill, and that legislation should not [illegible]ushed through. In any event, I join those who say that it should be dropped for the present."

P.M. The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, a great deal that has passed in this very interesting debate would, I venture to think, have been much better put in Select Committee.

"Take the clause with which so many Members have dealt, regarding the possession of incriminating documents. I can only say that, so far as my responsibility for the drafting of this Bill is concerned, I have attempted to put it in as plain English as I have at my command, that the gist of the offence is possession plus intent to publish. Yet, I have heard more than one Hon'ble Member, learned lawyers like the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma, suggesting that the gist of the offence is mere possession . . . .

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"May I make an observation? I did not say that the mere possession would be construed as an offence, but possession would be considered presumptive evidence of intention to publish or to circulate."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Hon'ble friend used so many words that I may not have caught that, but I certainly picked out from them the statement that he was afraid it might be held that the gist of the offence was mere possession. If it is not so, I welcome it. Frankly, I have tried to make the language as plain English as is possible, and if my Hon'ble friend can mistake it, I can only say that the ingenuity of lawyers is unbounded. But at most this is a question for Select Committee. Then it is said that the possessor of the documents may not know that they are seditious. At present publication of seditious documents is an offence. The suggestion that the "poor people" who do these things may not know whether the documents are seditious or not equally applies to the present law. If a man publishes a thing of this sort, he does it at his own risk. One Hon'ble Member has referred to the Tilak case where Mr. Tilak published certain things which the Magistrate thought were objectionable and which the High Court thought were not. Well, people who publish things which are very much on the line. . . . . . .

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khapardes:—"I had other cases in view; the case of Narayan Row Vaidya of Nagpur who made a speech; the Magistrate convicted him of being seditious and the Judicial Commissioner acquitted him."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"The only point of my remarks was that this same difficulty as to whether a document is seditious or not, in fact occurs just as much under the present law. If any one publishes a document which, as I said is on the line—so that one man may think it is seditious while another may not—he must take the risk of a prosecution. He may come out all right because the first Court before whom the case comes thinks it is not seditious or on appeal the High Court thinks it is not seditious, but he has to take that risk, if he deals with doubtful matters like possibly seditious documents. All I say is that the same difficulty arises under the present law, and that therefore we are not creating any new difficulties under this clause of the Bill. The object of the section is this Even, now, if a man publishes seditious documents, he can be prosecuted, but then the mischief is done and the seditious documents may have been scattered broadcast. I think my Hon'ble friend the Pandit would prefer that a few documents of this nature should get into the hands of a few people rather than that trouble should be caused to the many. But really the boot is on the other leg. It is the danger of a great many undesirable documents being scattered abroad as against the possibility of trouble to a very small number of possibly innocent persons. What we want to try and prevent is this [illegible]. Once these documents get out and fall into the hands of a [illegible] impressionable and youthful public, the mischief is done. [illegible] want [illegible] and prevent their getting out. The Hon'ble Pandit Madan [illegible] Malaviya says he also wishes to do that. Indeed, the devising of means by which we can prevent this result is a matter which will commend itself to every Member of this Council. The Hon'ble Pandit says we have not adopted the best method of doing it. But we all want the same thing. Let us discuss in Committee how we can best effect it, how we can amend this section so as to get rid of the difficulties that Hon'ble Members have referred to. We all want to prevent seditious documents being published, and when we are sitting round the table in Committee, a Committee on which, I believe, my Hon'ble lawyer friends will be strongly represented, we shall no doubt be able to redraft the section satisfactorily, but it is rather a matter for Committee than one to be dealt with by the Council now.

"Then we come to section 3. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Chanda made a suggestion here that we had gone beyond or had misinterpreted paragraph 186 of the Report. I think that, if he will allow me to say so, that is only a confusion of language. What the Commission says is that the District Magistrate should be empowered to order an inquiry. They go on to say, in the words which he read out, 'that it has been suggested that this power (that is the power to order an inquiry), should also be given to Superintendents and Inspectors of Police', and the Report says 'we do not agree with this; we think the power ought not to be given to them'. But my Hon'ble friend reading that into clause 3 says 'you have given it to Superintendents and Inspectors of Police'. But, if I may say so, that is an absolute misinterpretation of the clause. The two things are quite separate in clause 3. It is the District Magistrate who is empowered to give orders, and the Inspector of Police is only to make inquiries under those orders. The Hon'ble Member will, I think, agree with me that there was a slight confusion in his mind between the language used in the clause and in the paragraph of the Report.

"Then my Hon'ble friend referred to a speech of Sir James FitzJames Stephen in this Council. I did not hear him very distinctly, but I think he was referring to the speech of Sir James FitzJames Stephen in this Council when the Penal Code was amended and the sedition sections were put into it and I understood my Hon'ble friend to say—I am sure he will correct me if I am wrong—that we had gone contrary to the policy which was announced by Sir James FitzJames Stephen in that speech, and that we had violated the principle which he announced as follows—I am not sure whether this is the paragraph, I have the speech before me and I hope my Hon'ble friend will tell me if I am wrong—he said:—

'Nothing could be further from the wish of the Government of India than to check in the least degree any criticism of their measures, however severe and hostile—nay, however disingenuous, unfair and ill-informed it might be. So long as the writer or speaker neither directly nor indirectly suggested or intended to produce the use of force, he did not fall within this section.'

Am I right in supposing that is the passage to which the Hon'ble Member referred?"

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"That is the passage I referred to."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"Well, if the Hon'ble Member will check this by the Bill, he will see that we have made the definition of a 'seditious document.'

'Any document containing any words, signs or visible representations which instigate or are likely to instigate, whether directly or indirectly, the use of criminal force, etc.?'"

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"May I point out, my Lord, that I was referring to what Mr. Chalmers said about that passage in 189[illegible] [illegible]fore, [illegible] [illegible]ider [illegible]

The Ho[illegible] [illegible]eorge Lowndes:—"I frankly admit that I could not hear a great de[illegible] what the Hon'ble Member said; but if that was the passage the Hon'ble Member referred to, I submit that he was not justified in his criticism. It does however seem to me almost extraordinary that the Hon'ble Member, with the speech of Sir James FitzJames Stephen before him, should have solemnly told the Council, without any explanation, that there was no provision for seditious offences in the original Penal Code of 1860. Only a paragraph or two before the passage which I read just now, Sir James FitzJames Stephen says that the omission from the Penal Code in 1860 of a section dealing with sedition was purely by mistake.........

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"I beg pardon, I said so. I said it was in the draft but not in the Code as it was passed"

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"The Hon'ble Member said nothing about the mistake. The papers show clearly that when the Penal Code was before the Council, there was a reference to a provision which had been re-drafted dealing with sedition, which purely by oversight was omitted from the Bill when it was passed, and that is what Sir James FitzJames Stephen was referring to. I think it would have been better if the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda had told us that it was a mere omission, a mere slip, in 1860. He desired the Council to draw some inference from the fact that in 1860 the Government of India did not find it necessary to make any provision for this purpose.........

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—"I did try to correct my Hon'ble friend Mr. Patel. I said it was in the draft, but not in the Code as it was passed."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes :—"The Hon'ble Member did not allude to the fact that the omission from the Bill was purely an oversight.

"Then we come on to the clause dealing with association. That has been attacked by various Hon'ble Members here. It is clause 5 of the Bill, and my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Banerjea, began by pointing out the difficulties of the joint, family, that if one member of a joint-family were convicted it would not be fair to penalise other members of the family because they associated with him. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma, on the other hand, had a most ingenious answer to that. He told us that members of a joint-family did not associate voluntarily, that they only associated involuntarily. I am afraid it is news to me that the members of a joint-family do not associate voluntarily, but perhaps it is so in the South of India. There must be, however, cases in other parts of the country in which members of a joint-family do associate voluntarily, brothers and sisters, fathers and mothers. So that is no answer to the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea. The real answer to the Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea is one which, as he is not a lawyer, will possibly not appeal to him, but which appeals to me and which will also, I think, appeal to the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma. The Hon'ble Member was, I venture to think, confusing relevancy, that is admissibility, of evidence, with weight. That is a confusion which all of us who have practised in the Courts know is frequently made by ordinary people though not in the minds of Judges. There are many things which are admissible in evidence, but which have no weight whatever when proved; and that is the case with this suggestion as to joint-families. It would be admissible to prove where A had been convicted of sedition and B was charged with a seditious offence; that B lived with A, and it might be reasonable to ask the Court to draw a presumption against B on this account. But where A and B were brothers such a piece of evidence would have no weight whatsoever, and I do not think any of our Courts in India would [illegible] any unfavourable inference from it. I venture to think that [illegible] lawyer will agree with me in this. [illegible] of a [illegible]

"I have only one other word to say, and that is [illegible] t [illegible] Hon'ble Mr. Khaparde's speech. My Hon'ble friend seem[illegible] very much in love with the metaphor of the rose and the thorn. We had it the other day and we have had it again to day. I am almost more pleased to meet my Hon'ble friend on the horticultural platform than on the legal platform, and I venture to remind him that there is no rose without a thorn; and, going a little further, that the thorn is a provision of nature in order that the beauty of the rose may not be despoiled".

[Mr. G. S. Khaparde; Sir William Vincent; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

The Hon'ble Mr. G. S. Khaparde:—"The thorn does not increase the beauty of the rose whatever else it might do."

12-55 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"My Lord, I am not quite sure whether it would be more convenient to the Council if I replied merely on the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Patel, or if I replied on the main motion. I think that I had better, perhaps, take the Bill as a whole, and, if necessary, I can add any remarks later.

"The first point on which I was asked for an assurance by certain Members of this Council was as to the scope and intention of these two Bills which have been brought before this Council. There is still, I understand, in the minds of some an apprehension that these Bills are intended or are framed so that they can be used for the suppression of political movements, and that they are not confined to revolutionary and anarchical movements; and I have been specifically asked—I think it was by my Hon'ble friend Dr. Sapru—to make such modifications in the preamble and in other parts of the Bills as will make it perfectly clear that they are only intended to deal with anarchical or revolutionary crime. Well, my Lord, as regards the main Bill—the Emergency Powers Bill—which really contains the clauses to which most objection has been taken, I am quite prepared to give that assurance, and if any further alterations are necessary in the particular Bill which is under discussion to-day, we shall be prepared to consider them also. I hope that will relieve the mind of my Hon'ble friend.

"Turning to criticisms of individual clauses, I will begin, if I may, with clause 2. There seems to me to be considerable misapprehension as to the scope of this clause. It was suggested, for instance, that the possession alone of a seditious document was sufficient to make a man liable to punishment. That point has been fully explained by my Hon'ble colleague, the Law Member, and it is quite clear now, I think, to everyone in this Council that the possession of a seditious document is only an offence when it is coupled with an intention to publish or circulate, the onus in such a case being, as in all criminal cases, on the prosecution to prove this intent, and not on the accused, as was suggested by at least one Hon'ble Member. Surely, my Lord, in these circumstances, it cannot be said with any justice that under this clause thinking sedition is an offence, as was suggested by one Hon'ble Member. I am told, again, that the provisions of this clause are very dangerous, and that it will create the greatest apprehension, and, finally, that it proceeds further than rule 25A of the Defence of India Rules. Well, my Lord, I want to show first that the wording of the clause is based on rule 25A of the Defence of India Rules. Prohibited documents under that rule are 'documents containing words, signs or visible representations which instigate or are likely to instigate (a) the use of criminal force against His Majesty or the Government established by law in British India, or against public servants generally, or any class of public servants or any individual public servant; or (b) the commission or abetment of anything which is an offence against sections 121, 121A, 122, 131, 435 and 436 of the Indian Penal Code or of the offence of robbery and dacoity and certain other offences.' Although, therefore, the present clause is based on the Defence of India rule, it is less extensive, and there is no more difficulty in understanding the meaning of this clause than there is in understanding the meaning of the rule, because prohibited document is defined in the same way as a seditious document is defined in [illegible] fore, Rule 25A, my Lord, has been in force for some time, and we have [illegible] ider [illegible] far as I am aware, that the rule has operated harshly or [illegible] iti[illegible] prejudice of any law-abiding citizen . . . . .

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Under that Act a document was proclaimed and then the public knew what it was. That was my point. That makes it easy for people to avoid the document."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"Well, I have tried to explain, as far as I understand them, that the provisions of the present law are not less definite than the provisions of rule 25A, but I am quite prepared to examine the matter further in Select Committee.

"As to clause 5 more has been made, I think, of the provisions relating to habitual and voluntary association with persons convicted of revolutionary crime than is reasonable. The principle on which the clause is based is much the same as that which underlies section 14 of the Evidence Act. Where a man associates voluntarily and habitually with persons convicted of offences against the State, his state of mind, his faith and good-will towards the Government may be inferred. Noscitur a sociis. But the weight to be attached to the evidence will, of course, vary in each particular case. This clause also is, however, one that will have to be examined in greater detail before the Select Committee. What we have attempted to do at present is to put forward all these recommendations of a very powerful Committee for the primâ facie consideration of the Council.

"There is only one other clause to which I should like to refer, and that is clause 6. It was suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel that though the modern tendency is to deal with first offenders leniently, this Bill makes it obligatory on Courts to proceed more severely. The Hon'ble Member proceeded to quote section 562 of the Criminal Procedure Code in support of this view, and he says that that provides for first offenders being warned and discharged. My contention is that the exact contrary is the case, and that the Bill will enable Courts, where such a course is advisable, to deal lightly with these offenders whom my Hon'ble friend Mr. Malaviya with his usual charity describes as 'poor fellows.' Our intention is not to force the Courts to keep these men longer than is necessary in jail, but rather to impose shorter sentences of imprisonment and then subject them to lighter punishment when they come out of jail in order to reform them. We hope by these means to secure in many cases the reformation of some of these offenders.

"There is only one other point to which I wish to advert, and that is the question which is directly before the Council, of postponing the reference to this Bill to Select Committee. On this point I am afraid I am unable to meet the Hon'ble mover. The provisions of the Bill and of the report have been before the public for some time and have been criticised at great length in many of the papers, and no useful purpose would be served by republishing the Bill and delaying the reference to Select Committee. At the same time, I realise that this Bill stands on a different footing from the emergency measure with which we were dealing on Friday. The most convenient and advantageous course, as it seems to me, is to refer this Bill to Select Committee at once, and let the details be then examined. If there are considerable changes, then we can consider the necessity for further postponement. But let us see first what the Select Committee do in the way of modifying the details.

"My Lord, with these words, I oppose the motion for postponement."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. J. Patel:—"My Lord, I have nothing to say."

The Hon'ble Mr. Patel's amendment was put and negatived.

His Excellency the President:—"[illegible] of a [illegible] amendment 1-8 P.M. which stands in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. Baner[illegible]erjea could not of course move his amendment while Mr. Patel[illegible]ment was before the Council. He happens to be absent in connection with the Franchise Committee, and I said I would allow Mr. Banerjea's amendment to be put in his absence. I propose to take the speech he made on the first amendment as moving that amendment. Mr. Banerjea's amendment is now before the Council."

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Sir George Lowndes; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; The President; Sir William Vincent; Sir C. Sankaran Nair.] [10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

1-9 P.M. The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, there is only one word I should like to say with reference to what has fallen from the Hon'ble the Home Member. I quite realise that this is a better procedure than it was apprehended would be followed But would it not be better still if this Bill is circulated for opinion before it goes to a Select Committee. The Government will then have the opinions of High Court Judges, Sessions Judges and of District Magistrates and other Judicial and public bodies all over the country. We shall then in Simla deal with the Bill with the help of the views of many experienced officers. I suggest this for the consideration of the Government."

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"It is open to the Select Committee to recommend republication if they change the Bill to such an extent that it is in no sense the same Bill, but that is really a question for the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. Banerjea's amendment was put and negatived.

1-10 P.M. The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"My Lord, I will not make a speech. I simply move the amendment that stands in my name, namely, 'that the motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee do stand over till the Simla Session of the Council.'"

His Excellency the President:—"Mr. Chanda has moved his amendment which is now before the Council."

The amendment was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"My Lord, I beg to withdraw the next amendment which stands in my name, namely, 'that the Select Committee do report to the Council during the Simla Session.'"

His Excellency the President:—"Mr. Chanda's amendment is before the Council that the Select Committee do report to the Council during the Simla Session."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I understood that the Hon'ble Member withdrew his amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda:—"I have already withdrawn my amendment."

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

[At this stage the Council adjourned for lunch.]

LOCAL AUTHORITIES PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES BILL.

2-30 P.M. The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair:—"My Lord, I beg leave to introduce a Bill to extend the powers of local authorities in regard to the granting of pensions and gratuities. The intention of this measure is explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and I have really nothing to add. A local authority will be permitted if it chooses to give a pension or a gratuity to a person or to his family if he has been incapacitated or has lost his life in the service of the State, having previously been in the employ of that authority. The measure will be of particular value in dealing with hard cases arising from the Great War, where, let us say, a man has volunteered and been seriously wounded, injured or killed during active service. I am sure that this aspect of the case will appeal to all. But the measure is not intended merely as a war measure. It will be useful to place it permanently on the Statute-book. There is no compulsion about it. It is a permissive measure, and no local authority is required to give any such concession unless it desires and is satisfied that the case is a deserving one. Provision is also made against the abuse of the measure by any local authority by making it obligatory to obtain the sanction of the Local Government in each case. I accordingly move for leave to introduce the Bill."

[10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.] [Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Sir George Lowndes.]

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair:—"My Lord, I beg to introduce the Bill, and to move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English."

The motion was put and agreed to.

PROVINCIAL INSOLVENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir George Lowndes:—"My Lord, the Bill to 2.31 amend the Provincial Insolvency Act was introduced in this Council on the 4th September last. Since then it has been published in the ordinary way for opinion. A number of comments have been received and there are still more, I believe, to come. The opinions expressed are unanimously in favour of the Bill, which, it is thought, will affect a great improvement in the law. Various criticisms of details have been received which will be tabled for consideration in the Select Committee. There were two points of special difficulty which were referred. The first was as to whether the Insolvency Court ought to have the power of deciding questions of law and fact. When I was introducing the Bill, I pointed out the difficulties with regard to this question, and suggested that the best solution was that which we have inserted in the Bill, namely, that the Court should have power to do this, but should not be bound to do it. That is, it may, if thought desirable, refer the parties to a separate suit. On the whole the opinions received seem to favour this course, but it has been suggested, and, I think, with considerable force, that if the Insolvency Court is to have power to decide these facts, they should not be open to contest over again in the ordinary Courts. That is to say the effect of a decision of the Insolvency Court on any question of this sort should be res judicata. It has also been suggested that if this power is to be given to the Insolvency Court, inasmuch as the appeal from the Insolvency Court may be to the district Court, it may be desirable to provide for the possibility of a second appeal to the High Court in important cases, as there may, of course, be some cases of far-reaching importance, cases which may come up before the Insolvency Court. That again is a question which will have to be considered in Select Committee. The second point of difficulty, as Hon'ble Members may remember, was as to the limit of summary jurisdiction. Under the Act as it now stands the limit of summary jurisdiction is where the estate is expected to realise Rs. 500. We have sugg[illegible] that, if we are going to make the procedure more summar[illegible] may be desirable to confine its operation to smaller estates [illegible] of a [illegible] suggested in the Bill the limit of Rs. 200 instead of Rs 500. [illegible] introducing the Bill, I pointed out to the Council that the [illegible] be [illegible]ken that instead of lowering the limit, it might be desirable to ra[illegible] and include larger estates with regard to which I suggested a possible limit of Rs. 2,000. Therefore the two opposite possibilities were put before the Council and were dealt with in our letter referring the Bill to Local Governments. Opinion is curiously divided on this point. Many people say reduction to Rs. 200 would be advantageous; other people say that we had better stick to Rs. 500 as it is now; others again say, raise it to Rs. 1,000, and some say raise it to Rs. 2,000. We have not therefore any clear counsel at present and the matter will be again one for the Select Committee to consider.

[Sir George Lowndes.] [10TH FEBRUARY, 1919.]

"I dealt with the Bill in some detail in introducing it, and I do not think anything would be gained by going over the points again. I therefore move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Sir William Vincent, the Hon'ble Mr. Kesteven, the Hon'ble Mr. Moncrieff Smith, the Hon'ble Sardar Sunder Singh Majithia, the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda, the Hon'ble Mr. B. N. Sarma, the Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Sahay, the Hon'ble Mr. B. D. Shukul, the Hon'ble Mr. Kincaid, the Hon'ble Mr. Rice and myself."

The motion was put and agreed to.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday, 15th February 1919.

Burma.—The week was practically rainless except for a fall of 3/60 inches in Mergui, Lower Burma. Threshing and winnowing of winter rice are nearing completion in Upper Burma. Harvesting of gram, peas, beans and wheat is proceeding. Standing crops are generally good. Cattle are generally healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon has risen slightly to Rs. 122 per hundred baskets and is above normal. The market for white rice is steady at Rs. 307 per hundred baskets for specials.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. More rain is wanted in places for agricultural operations. Harvesting of pulses and mustard and transplanting of spring rice are nearing completion. Plucking of cotton is finished. Pressing of sugarcane, pruning of tea and ploughing for autumn rice and jute continue. The outturn of mustard is indifferent but that of other crops is fair. Cattle disease is reported in two districts. Price of common rice is stationary.

Bengal.—Light rain fell in a number of places. More rain is urgently wanted all over the province. Spring sowings are practically over. Harvesting of oilseeds, pulses and potatoes continues. The outturn is reported to be fair. Preparation of lands for next autumn crops is in progress. Drought is hampering operations. Distress prevails in Bankura and Bramhanbaria sub-division, Tipperah. Gratuitous relief and agricultural loans are being distributed. Test works have also been opened. Price of rice has fallen.

Bihar and Orissa.—Light rain was general over Orissa and scattered in the rest of the province. Pressing of sugarcane continues. Harvesting of oilseeds has commenced in some districts. The standing spring crops are on the whole doing well. Test works continue in Angul. One test work has been opened in Ranchi. The daily average number of persons attending such works was 819 in Angul and 255 in Ranchi. Gratuitous relief was given to 1,969 persons in the former district. The price of common rice has risen in seven districts, fallen in three and remained stationary in the remaining districts as compared with that of the preceding week. Cattle disease is reported from fifteen districts.

United Provinces.—There was no rain during the week. No damage to crops is reported. Preparation of land for and sowing of extra crops and sugarcane, irrigation of spring crops and poppy and pressing of sugarcane continue. Condition of standing crops is good. Prospects are favourable. Agricultural stock is fair. Cattle disease still prevails in parts of certain districts. Fodder continues to be scarce and dear in some districts and demand for Government hay is strong. Water and market supplies are sufficient. Prices are generally stationary with a tendency to rise in some districts and a tendency to fall in others.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows.—No rain fell during the week but some rain has fallen at the close of the week. Slight damage by floods is reported from Hamirpur. Preparation of land for extra crops and sugarcane continues in Benares. Harvesting of spring crops has commenced in Jalaun. Irrigation of spring crops continues in Etawah and Jhansi. Standing crops are flourishing. Prospects are favourable. Agricultural stock is good but some cattle disease prevails in Bundelkhand. Fodder scarcity is still being felt in the affected tracts. Forest hay is being supplied. Water is sufficient. Markets are generally well stocked. Distress is acute and is increasing in Etawah. Public health is good on the whole, but influenza has reappeared in Garhwal. Smallpox is reported in one village of tahsil Chand[illegible] Benares. No wandering or emaciation is noticeable but general increase in petty crime [illegible] rore, [illegible] Banda. Condition of people on relief works is fair. There is a general d[illegible] ider [illegible] Banda. Numbers gratuitously relieved :—Garhwal 787, Etaw[illegible] iti[illegible] Jalaun 718, Jhansi 10, Hamirpur 2,090, Banda 6,603. Numbers relieved in poor houses :—Jalaun 87, Jhansi 13, Hamirpur 214, Banda 79. The price basis in Garhwal is 4¼, Benares 6¼, Etawah and Bundelkhand districts 7 seers per rupee. Advances are being granted. Test works have been opened in Agra and Fatehpur districts. Numbers relieved in Agra from 8th to 15th was 1,764, Fatehpur 278, Allahabad 239.

Punjab.—Light rain fell in parts of nearly all the reporting districts. It has greatly benefited the standing crops, but more rain is still wanted in parts of the south, east and west. Condition and prospects of wheat and other standing crops are average to good on irrigated and below average to average on unirrigated areas. Sugarcane is being pressed in some districts. The yield is generally below normal. Sowings of extra spring crops continue and are below normal. Cattle are generally healthy. Fodder is scarce in most districts but recent rains have done much to relieve the situation. Water is generally sufficient. Prices are generally stationary and above scarcity rates. Prices of wheat :—Lahore and Lyallpur 5¼, Ambala, Ferozpore and Rawalpindi 5⅝ seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain fell throughout the province and was beneficial to standing crops but more rain is still required. Prospects of standing crops both on irrigated and unirrigated lands are generally average in Peshawar and Bannu and below average in Dera Ismail Khan. Pressing of sugarcane continued. The outturn was average Prices of wheat :—Peshawar 7 1/16 and Dera Ismail Khan 6 1/8 seers per rupee.

Jammu.—There was sufficient rain during the week. Prices are stationary. Fodder is insufficient.

Kashmir.—The week was generally wet and cold. Standing spring crops are in fair condition. Cattle disease is reported in Muzaffarabad. Prices are fluctuating.

Rajputana.—The weather was clear. Irrigation of spring crops continues. Cattle disease is still prevailing in places. Water is sufficient. Fodder is insufficient in places. Grass takavi in Merwara and takavi advances in Bharatpur for fodder are being issued. Prices are rising in places. Gratuitous relief was distributed to 71 persons in Todgarh tahsil in Merwara.

Central India.—No rain fell during the week. Spring crops are being arranged in Indore and the Southern States and harvested in Gwalior, Malwa and the Southern States. Cotton is being picked in Bhopal. Sugarcane is being pressed in Gwalior. Threshing and winnowing of autumn crops are in progress in Malwa. Standing crops and probable outturn are fair except in parts of Gwalior, Jaora, Rutlam and Sailana. Crops have been damaged in Jaora and Manpur. Agricultural stock is bad in the northern districts of Gwalior and fair elsewhere except for cattle disease in parts of Bhopal and the Southern States. Scarcity of fodder prevails in Gwalior, Indore, Bundelkhand and in parts of Malwa and the Southern States. Prices are high but stationary. Opium is fair in Indore and Piploda, and is being irrigated and weeded in Gwalior. Number on relief on Bundelkhand works 3,042 and on gratuitous relief 4,600, total 7,642.

Central Provinces.—The weather has been cool and occasionally cloudy. Eight districts received light showers ranging from 15 to 20 cents. Several districts report damage from hail, the most extensive being in Nagpur. Damage from rust is very slight. Spring crops are doing well, the prospects varying from fair to good Harvesting of minor crops continues. Cutting of wheat and linseed has also begun in places. Fodder is dear or scarce in Hoshangabad and Berar. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition Relief measures are proceeding in parts of Damoh, Jubbulpore, Betul and Chanda. Rice and juar in Nimar, gram in Drug and wheat in Yeotmal rose while wheat in Bhandara and Buldana fell by 1 to 2 seers per rupee. Other variations were irregular and unimportant.

The weekly report on scarcity is as follows :—General health is good in all affected districts except for local influenza in Betul. Distress has intensified in Murwara tahsil of Jubbulpore where declaration of famine may be necessary. Spring harvest is affording employment in Sironcha and the Damoh and Betul districts. Prices of food grains are high but stationary. Numbers on works :—Seoni 2,032, Damoh 1,325, Jubbulpore 2,312, Saugor 233, Betul 3,045, Chanda nil, total 8,947. All notifications and other matter intended for publication in those Parts should be addressed to the Publisher at Delhi and Calcutta, respectively.

Attention is invited to the following Circular Memorandum of the Government of India, Home Department, of August 1901:—

"It has been brought to the notice of this Department that matter for the Gazette of India is sometimes sent to the Press late on Friday evenings for publication in the next day's Gazette and that this involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. In the Circular Memorandum of this Department, No. 777—79, dated 9th February 1870, the Government of India directed that all notifications or other matter intended for insertion in the Gazette of India should be delivered at the Press not later than 2 P.M. on Friday, and that any papers sent thereafter must be certified to be extremely urgent in order to ensure their appearance in the next day's Gazette. The undersigned is directed to request that these orders may be more strictly observed in future, and that Departments will refrain from sending to the Press as extremely urgent any papers which can without harm or inconvenience be held over for the next Gazette.

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India."

NOTICES.

THE PATENT OFFICE, 1, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET, CALCUTTA.

Public room, open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

1. All communications relating to applications for patents and for registration of designs under the Indian Patents and Designs Act (II of 1911), or in continuation of applications under the Inventions and Designs Act (V of 1888) must be made in English and addressed to the Controller of Patents and Designs, 1, Council House Street, Calcutta. Documents sent by post should be carefully packed and a full address given in all communications.

2. Directions for the guidance of inventors and others are given in the Patent Office Handbook (price one rupee) which contains the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, the Indian Patents and Designs Rules, 1912, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary Rules) Act, 1915, the Indian Patents and Designs (Temporary) Rules, 1915, together with current regulations and instructions. These should be consulted before an application is made to the Controller.

3 Advice. The Patent Office cannot undertake (1) to give opinions on the interpretation of Patent Law, or on the advisability of protecting inventions and designs or on their infringement; (2) to make searches in respect of information available in the public room; (3) to recommend any particular agent; or (4) to assist in the disposal of inventions. Models are not required unless specially asked for. Drawings must be on tracing cloth and the Rules and Instructions for the preparation of drawings as given in the Handbook should be strictly followed. A provisional patent cannot be secured under the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911.

4. Applicants are warned that the Indian Patents and Designs Act, 1911, is in force in British India only, and patents granted under it do not extend to the United Kingdom or any of the British possessions. The International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property does not include India. For information regarding patents in countries other than India application should be made to the patent offices in the countries concerned.

5. Fees are payable in cash and must be received in the Patent Office within the time allowed by the Acts. When cheques are offered in payment of fees, it must be clearly understood that the office cannot hold itself responsible for any delay that may occur in the collection of cash on the cheques; any cheque not payable in Calcutta is subject to commission for which due allowance should be made. In cases where it is not possible to have the fees handed in at the Patent Office, it is preferable to send them by money-order or postal order payable at Calcutta to the Controller of Patents and Designs, and to advise him that they have been so sent. Stamps will not be received in payment of fees.

6. Trade and property marks and names are not registered and medicines are not patented under the Indian Patents and Designs Act. There is no provision of Law in British India for their registration. Neither does this Act deal with pictures, photographs, etc., for which copyright is obtainable under the Indian Copyright Act, 1914.

7. Printed Specifications of applications, which have been accepted, are published within about three weeks after acceptance has been notified in the Gazette of India. These specifications can be purchased at the Patent Office at a uniform price of 8 annas per copy; and may be seen free of charge, together with other publications of the Patent Office, at the following places:—

COTTON PRESS RETURN.

No. 8 OF 1918-19

PREFATORY NOTE.

THE COTTON SEASON, 1918-19.

In the Third Cotton Forecast, published on the 18th December, 1918, the yield of the [illegible] provisionally estimated at 3,282,000 bales on an area of 19,677,000 acres, as compared with 4,035,000* bales on an area of 24,781,000 acres, the final estimates of last year, a decrease of 19 per cent in the outturn. There were 535,000 bales of cotton pressed in the pressing factories, and 133,000 bales of unpressed cotton received in the spinning mills, from 1st September to 31st December, 1918, as against 159,000 bales and 155,000 bales, respectively, during the corresponding period of last year, showing an increase of 17 per cent in the case of presses, but a decrease of 11 per cent in the case of mills. Too much stress should not be laid on the accuracy of these returns as a means of checking the forecast estimates of outturn, as there is at present no system in vogue of furnishing complete returns from all the presses and mills in India. The figures for the States of Hyderabad, Central India, Rajputana, and Mysore are, as will be seen from the footnotes to the tables, mostly incomplete and have been excluded for the purpose of comparison.

* The trade estimate is, however, 3,860,000 bales (Net exports 1,409,000 bales, mill consumption 1,701,000 bales and extra-factory consumption 750,000 bales.) The estimate of mill consumption is based on the statistics of yarn produced by the mills, and excludes the quantity of waste cotton sold by the mills, which is included partly in "Net exports" and partly in "extra-factory consumption."

Published by order of the Governor-General in Council

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN SELECTED ARTICLES IN DECEMBER, 1918.

The object of the tables appended is to show the quantities of the principal staples of agricultural produce imported from the various provinces, etc., and from foreign countries into the ports of Calcutta, Bombay, and Karachi, and into the Madras ports during the month of December, 1918, and for the nine months, April to December, 1918, as compared with the corresponding periods of 1917. The statistics include sea-borne foreign and coasting trade as well as inland (rail and river-borne) trade. They have been furnished by Collectors of Customs, Steamer Companies, Railway Audit Officers, the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta, etc.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN DECEMBER, 1917 AND 1918.

It will be seen from Table I that the imports by rail, river, and sea in December, 1918, as against the corresponding month of 1917, show (in round numbers) a decrease of—

67 per cent in gram and pulse
(30,300 tons as against 92,000 tons last year),
62 per cent in tea
(17,056,200 lbs as against 45,114,400 lbs last year),
44 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(35,500 tons as against 63,500 tons last year),
26 per cent in jute
(484,800 bales as against 651,100 bales last year), and
21 per cent in rice (including paddy)
(86,800 tons as against 109,800 tons last year).

The imports of linseed by rail, river, and sea into ports show an increase of 371 per cent (40,000 tons as against 8,500 tons last year), due mainly to larger exports from Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces, the Central Provinces and Berar, and Rajputana and Central India. The increase of 79 per cent (12,500 tons as against 7,000 tons last year) in the [illegible]ts of rape and mustard seed is accounted for by larger receipts mai[illegible]mbay and the Punjab. The rise of 16 per cent (317,300 bales as [illegible]00 bales last year) in the imports of raw cotton is due to an increase in the exports mainly from the Punjab and the Central Provinces and Berar.

It will be seen from Table IV (wheat, excluding wheat flour) that the principal sources of the imports in December, 1917, were the Punjab, the United Provinces, and the Central Provinces and Berar. During December, 1918, the Punjab sent 56 per cent, and the United Provinces 25 per cent, of the total. There was a considerable decrease in December, 1918, in the imports from the Central Provinces and Berar. Table XI shows the exports from India by sea of wheat (including wheat flour) month by month during the last six years.

NOTE.—One bale of cotton or jute is equivalent to 400 lbs.
One maund is equivalent to 82¼ lbs.
One maund of paddy is taken as equivalent to 26 seers of rice.

GENERAL RESULTS—NINE MONTHS' IMPORTS INTO THE PORTS FROM UP-COUNTRY, ETC., THIS YEAR AND LAST YEAR.

The nine months' figures in table I show (in round numbers) an increase of—

(292,000 tons as against 123,100 tons last year),

23 per cent in jute
(3,950,100 bales as against 3,217,700 bales last year),

3 per cent in rice (including paddy)
(777,000 tons as against 755,200 tons last year),

2 per cent in rape and mustard seed
(101,100 tons as against 98,700 tons last year), and

2 per cent in gram and pulse
(646,700 tons as against 633,500 tons last year).

The imports of wheat (excluding wheat flour) by rail, river, and sea into ports show a decrease of 52 per cent (806,500 tons as against 1,674,500 tons last year), mainly on account of smaller exports from the Punjab, Sind and British Baluchistan, Rajputana and Central India, and the Central Provinces and Berar. The decrease of 17 per cent (1,884,100 bales as against 2,279,900 bales last year) in the imports of raw cotton is accounted for by smaller receipts chiefly from Bombay, Rajputana and Central India, Madras, and the Central Provinces and Berar. The fall of 9 per cent (213,557,700 lbs as against 235,047,900 lbs last year) in the imports of tea into ports is due to smaller exports from Assam and Bengal.

TRADE FLUCTUATIONS IN DECEMBER, 1918, AS COMPARED WITH THE PREVIOUS MONTH.

As compared with November, 1918, the imports in December, 1918, into the ports referred to above show (in round numbers) a decrease of—

42 per cent in tea
(17,056,200 lbs as against 29,432,500 lbs previous month),

34 per cent in linseed
(40,000 tons as against 61,200 tons previous month),

19 per cent in rice (including paddy)
(86,800 tons as against 106,900 tons previous month),

13 p[illegible] cent in jute
(484,300 bale[illegible] against 554,600 bales previous month),

12[illegible]am and pulse [illegible]as against 34,300 tons previous month), and

3 per cent in wheat (excluding wheat flour)
(35,500 tons as against 36,500 tons previous month), and an increase of—

88 per cent in raw cotton
(317,300 bales as against 168,600 bales previous month) and

8 per cent in rape and must[illegible]eed
(12,500 tons as against 11,[illegible] tons previous month).

The Statistics for December, 1917 and 1918, as also for the nine months ending December, 1917 and 1918, together with those for November and December, 1918, are summarised below :—

NOTE.—One bale of jute is equivalent to 400 lbs.

By "Calcutta" is meant the town of Calcutta with Howrah and the Kidderpore Docks. The imports exclude, therefore, imports into those jute mills which are outside this area. Such mills form the large majority of the total number of mills manufacturing jute.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 15, 1919.

Final General Memorandum on the GROUNDNUT crop of the season 1918-19.

This memorandum is based upon reports received from the three provinces of Madras, Burma, and Bombay, which comprise 99·2 per cent of the entire groundnut area of British India.

The total area returned is 1,312,000 acres, as compared with 1,933,000 acres in 1917-18, or a decrease of 32 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 490,000 tons of nuts in shell as against 1,083,000 tons, the final figure of last year, or a decrease of 55 per cent. Climatic conditions have not, on the whole, been favourable for the crop. The failure of rains at sowing time considerably restricted the area sown, and the crop has since then suffered from drought in Madras and Bombay.

The details for the provinces are given below :—

Final Estimate

Province	Estimated total yield		Area		Average yield per acre

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Madras (77·1 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The total area up to the end of January is estimated at 952,000 acres, as against 1,412,000 acres, sown last year, or a decrease of 33 per cent. The total yield is estimated at 331,000 tons, as against 707,000 tons reported last year, or a decrease of 53 per cent. The decrease in area is greatest in the Deccan where the failure of the south west monsoon in July and August reduced the sowings by 25 per cent as compared with last year. There is also a general decrease in the south, chiefly in Coimbatore, Salem, and Chingleput. The crop in the Deccan was sown late owing to the failure of rains in July and August, and thereafter it suffered from a further drought. In south Arcot, and in the south generally, the crop suffered seriously from the dry spell in September and October.

Burma (12 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The total area is estimated at 244,000 acres, which is 2 per cent below the final estimate of last year. The total yield is estimated at 98,000 tons as against 104,000 tons, the final figure of last year, or a decrease of 6 per cent. Almost all the districts show decreases as compared with the area actually sown last year, notably in Myingyan, Pakokku, and Magwe. The time of harvesting was generally normal. The crop in Magwe is estimated at 94 per cent of the normal and that in Pakokku and Myingyan at 88 per cent each.

Bombay (10·1 per cent of the total area under groundnut in British India).—The total area is reported to be 116,000 acres (21,000 acres being in Indian States), which is 57 per cent below the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 61,000 tons (9,000 tons being in Indian States), which is 78 per cent less than last year's yield. Sowings were curtailed throughout the Presidency owing to want of timely and sufficient rain, except in east Khandesh, where the area expanded owing to high prices fetched by the foreign variety, which has recently become popular there. In Gujarat the crop suffered everywhere from want of rain, except in the western parts of the Panch Mahals, and is reported to be poor owing to want of later rains except in parts of Surat where it is fair. In the Deccan and the Karnatak the crop suffered through the absence of rain after sowing, although the rain in August and September benefited the crop in places. In the Deccan the crop is poor in Sholapur and Poona, and fair elsewhere. The irrigated crop is fair to good in Sholapur district. In the Karnatak the condition of the crop is from poor to fair, while it is reported to be fair in the Konkan.

Exports.—The quantities exported by sea to foreign countries during the ten months (April to January) of the official years 1917-18 and 1918-19, and during the whole of the preceding five official years have been as follows :—

Prices and Freights.—The figures below show the prices (per cwt) of groundnut at the end of January, 1919, and at the same date in the five preceding years. Prices ruled unusually high during the year and were in fact more than double the rates that prevailed in the preceding year.

I.—Prices

II.—Freights

Freights per ton from Madras to Marseilles (which receives nearly four-fifths of the total exports) were £16-0-0 in January 1918, against £12-5-0 and £8-0-0 in the same months of 1917 and 1916, respectively. The quotations have since been nominal, owing to want of shipments on account of scarcity of tonnage.

Chart.—The chart on next page shows the present figures of area and yield, as compared with the finally revised figures of the preceding nine years.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS, INDIA

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 19, 1919.

Final General Memorandum on the COTTON crop of 1918-19.

THIS memorandum is based on reports furnished by provinces, and refers to the entire cotton area of India. It deals with the final reports on both the early and the late crops of the season.

The total area reported is 20,497,000 acres, which is 4,691,000 acres, or nearly 19 per cent below the revised figure of last year. The total estimated yield is 3,671,000 bales of 400 lbs each, which is 8 per cent below the revised yield of last year. The present estimate of outturn as compared with the sum of actual exports (net) abroad, mill consumption, and extra-factory consumption in 1917-18 (4,204,000 bales) shows a decrease of 13 per cent. The detailed figures for each of the provinces are stated below (in thousands) :—

A statement showing the present estimates of area and yield according to the recognised trade descriptions of cotton as compared with the preceding year is given below. Of the total yield Oomras represent 41 per cent, Bengal-Sind 24 per cent, Salems and Cambodias 7 per cent, Coompta-Dharwars and Westerns and Northerns 6 per cent each, Broach 4 per cent and Dholleras and Tinnevellys 3 per cent each.

The provincial reports are summarised below :—

Bombay (27·2 per cent o[illegible]al area under cotton in India).—The latest [illegible]ow the total area under both early and late [illegible]be 5,036,000 acres (1,569,000 acres being [illegible] States excluding Baroda), which is 34 per cent below the area of last year. Increased area was placed under the crop in a few places in Gujarat and Khandesh under the incentive of high prices, but elsewhere the area was largely restricted owing partly to the insufficiency of sowing rains and partly to the devotion of larger area to food and fodder crops for which there was pressing demand. The total yield is estimated at [illegible]3,000 bales (110,000 bales being in the Indian States excluding Baroda), which is 59 per cent

(a) Including Indian States.

(b) Includes Hyderabad. A revised classification of Hyderabad cotton is still under consideration.

(c) Includes Punjab-American cotton grown in the Punjab.

below last year's yield. Since the publication of the December report the crop has improved to some extent in the inland tracts of South Gujarat, where it was helped by favourable cold and dew; elsewhere the dry climate of the year has further adversely affected it. In the Deccan the crop has almost totally failed in Nasik, Ahmednagar, and Poona, except where helped by irrigation. In Satara the crop is in flower and bolls, but stunted in growth. The Karnatak crop is progressing fairly well at present. The early crop has been picked and the late one is in flowers. Bolls have just begun to set in places. The area and outturn of cotton by the different trade descriptions in the Bombay Presidency (including Baroda but excluding Sind) are :—

		Acres	Bales
Oomras	Khandesh	1,307,000	142,000
	Barsi and Nagar	52,000	3,000
Dholleras		1,627,000	109,000
Bengal-Sind (Rajputana)		14,000	2,000
Broach		1,322,000	161,000
Coompta-Dharwars		1,236,000	202,000
Westerns		293,000	39,000

Central Provinces and Berar (20·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown is reported to be 4,211,000 acres (2,887,000 acres being in Berar), which is 8 per cent below the area of last year. The yield is estimated at 789,000 bales (494,000 bales being in Berar), which is 33 per cent above last year's yield. The condition of the crop was described in the third forecast published by this Department on 18th December last, where it was pointed out that the prospects of the crop were quite satisfactory over the greater part of the heavy cotton tract and that bumper yields were expected with favourable September rains.

Madras (10·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown up to 1st February is estimated at 3,118,000 acres as compared with 2,592,000 acres, the final figure of last year—an increase of 20 per cent. The high price of cotton and the unequal distribution of the south-west monsoon rains, which prevented the sowing of groundnut and other crops, have led to increased sowings of cotton in all the main cotton tracts. The total yield is estimated at 633,000 bales, which is 41 per cent above the revised figure of last year. The "Cocanadas" crop is in good condition and is expected to give a yield slightly above the average. The 'Northerns and Westerns' crops are in very good condition and bumper yields are expected in many tracts. The yield will be poor only in the western taluks of Bellary. In the south the crop, although late, has so far done fairly well and a fair yield is expected. It is now too early to make a final estimate of yield as there is still time for unseasonable heavy rain[illegible]age the crop severely as in past years. Th[illegible]d outturn of cotton according to trade de[illegible]s are as follows :—

	Acres	Bales
Tinnevellys	1,436,000	128,000
Salems		18,000
Cambodias		243,000
Northerns and Westerns	1,400,000	192,000
Cocanadas	268,000	65,000
Others	24,000	2,000

Punjab (6·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is now reported to be 1,541,000 acres (132,000 acres being in the Indian States), which is 14 per cent below that of last year. The total yield is estimated at 4[illegible]3,000 bales (including 62,000 bales in the Indian States), which is 61 per cent above last year's yield.

United Provinces (5·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown is reported to be 863,000 acres (11,000 acres being in the Rampur State), which is 34 per cent below the area of last year. The total yield is estimated at 175,000 bales (including 3,000 bales in the Rampur State), which is 12 per cent below last year's yield.

Sind (1·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is reported to be 299,000 acres (8,000 acres being in the Khairpur State), which is 12 per cent above that of last year. The area extended under the incentive of high prices, except in Nawabshah which showed a decline due to low inundation. The yield is estimated at 108,000 bales (including 2,000 bales in the Khairpur State), which is more than double that of last year. The crop was damaged to some extent owing to deficiency of water supply in Hyderabad. Elsewhere it did fairly well.

Burma (1·1 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is now reported to be 347,000 acres, which is 41 per cent above that of last year. The high price obtained during the last two years contributed to extended cultivation. The total yield of cleaned cotton is estimated at 78,000 bales, which is 62 per cent above last year's yield.

Bengal (0·4 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area sown with both early and late crops is estimated at 73,000 bales, which is 3 per cent above that of last year. The yield is estimated at 32,000 bales, which is 68 per cent above that of last year. The continued drought has further affected the outturn in Bankura and in parts of the Hill Tippera State. In the Chittagong Hill Tracts, however, the weather has not been unfavourable for the early crop. The area and outturn of cotton according to trade descriptions are :—

	Acres	Bales
Bengal-Sind	5,000	1,000
Comillas	68,000	31,000

Bihar and Orissa (0·3 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area under both early and late crops is estimated at 79,000 acres which is 14 per cent above the area of last year. The increase is attributed to high prices of cotton and cotton yarn and piece-goods. The yield is estimated at 17,000 bales, being the same as last year's yield. For the early crop the weather conditions were generally favourable in the early part of the season, but unfavourable in the latter part owing to insufficient rainfall. The late crop also was affected by the defective rainfall in the latter part of the season.

North-West Frontier Province (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area is reported to be 39,000 acres which is 3 per cent above that of last year. The yield is estimated at 10,000 bales, which is nearly double the yield of last year.

Assam (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is estimated at 33,000 acres, which is 3 per cent above that of last year. The yield is estimated at 12,000 bales, which is 8 per cent below last year's yield. The crop was affected by excessive rain in August and September in the Garo Hills and Lushai Hills.

Ajmer-Merwara (0·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The area sown is reported to be 30,000 acres, which is 57 per cent below that of last year. The decrease is attributed to the failure of rains. The yield is estimated at 14,000 bales, being the same as last year, the crop was damaged by heavy rain.

Hyderabad (14·7 per cent of the total under cotton in India).—The total area is r[illegible]ted to be 2,406,000 acres, which is 30 per c[illegible] below that of last year's. The contraction is attributed to unfavourable season at the time of sowing. The estimate of the yield stands at 350,000 bales, which is 22 per cent below last year's yield. The detailed district figures of area are as follows:—

	1918-19 Acres	1917-18 Acres

Central India (6 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total yield is estimated at 216,000 bales on an area of 1,233,000 acres. These figures indicate an increase of 86 per cent in yield with a decrease of 15 per cent in area as compared with last year. The detailed figures of area are:—

Baroda (3·2 per cent of the total area under cotton in India) reports 815,000 acres, which is 11 per cent below that of last year. The yield is estimated at 85,000 bales, which is 64 per cent below last year's yield. Of this yield, 24,000 bales represent Dholleras and 61,000 bales Broach cotton.

Rajputana (1·7 per cent of the total area under cotton in India).—The total area and yield are estimated at 250,000 acres and 55,000 bales as against 435,000 acres and 54,000 bales last year. There is thus a decrease of 42 per cent in area, but an increase of 2 per cent in yield. The detailed figures of area are:—

Mysore (0·8 per cent of the total area under cotton in India) reports 124,000 acres as against 154,000 acres last year. The yield is estimated at 31,000 bales, which is 35 per cent above that of last year. The area and outturn of cotton according to trade descriptions are:—

	Acres	Bales
Coompta-Dharwars	105,000	25,000
Salems (including Cambodias)	5,000	2,000
Other sorts	14,000	4,000

Production and Consumption, etc.—The following statement compares the estimates of the total outturn of cotton in India for the last two years with the sum of net exports and internal consumption, this latter being arrived at in agreement with the Bombay Cotton Trade Association and the Bombay Mill Owners' Association (the figures are in thousands of bales of 400 lbs. each):—

Estimates of the 'carry over' from one year to another are not taken into account.
